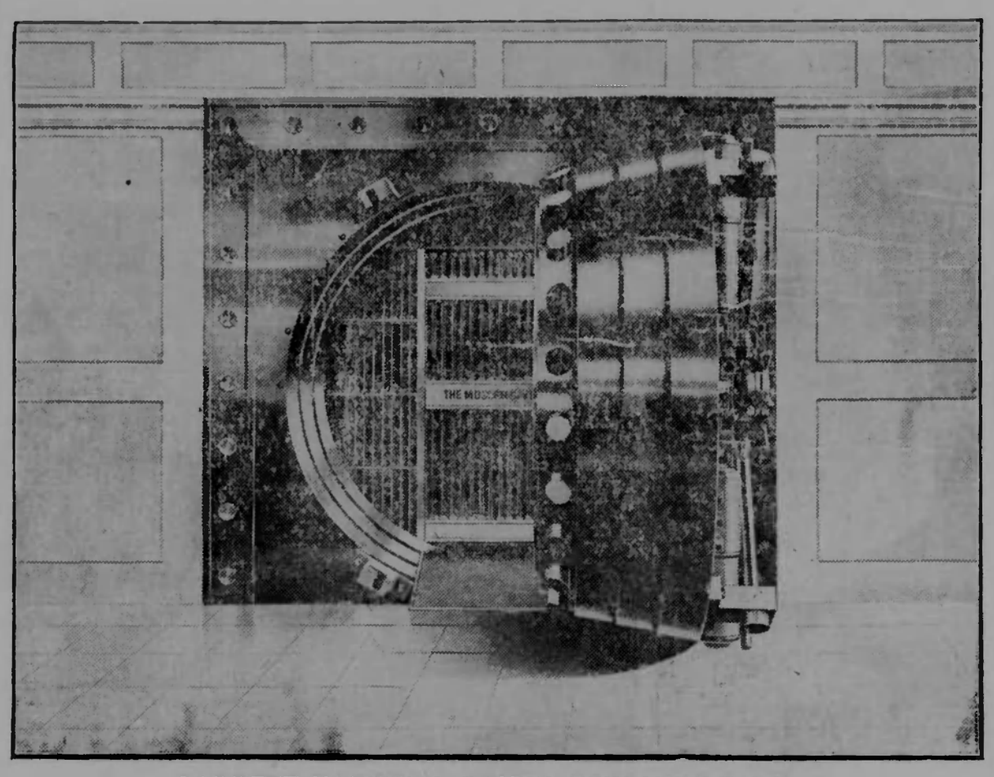
EUROPEAN WAR DEBTS

After describing the unpopularity of the United States in Europe, Senator Copeland, of New York, said in the course of recent Senate debate: "What is wrong with us in our dealings with foreign nations that we cannot command their friendship?" Is it always something wrong with an individual that he cannot command the friendship of some others,—for instance of those whom he has helped and who have borrowed money from him they do not want to pay? Why is it assumed by so many that when the United States is criticized from abroad, it is proof that there is justification for the criticism? Perhaps there is nothing wrong with us in this situation; maybe there is something wrong with the other fellow. This is an assumption that is at least worthy of consideration in the discussion of foreign affairs.



Let it not be forgotten that all controversy relative to the debts owing the United States by foreign nations is due to the failure to take from our debtors definite evidences of obligation, with stated maturity. Such evidences in the form of bonds were given to the people of the United States who furnished this money during Liberty Loan drives on the assurance that the money sent abroad would be repaid to the American government. Billions were loaned to our associates in the World War, after as well as during the war, and there was no serious thought at that time that this was a gift.

Now the United States is confronted with the necessity of doing the best it can with a bad situation. Collection in full from our foreign debtors, whom some of our world crusaders had led to believe that they would never be called on to pay anything, is clearly out of the question. Because of the conditions under which the loans were made, they must be negotiated. Demand for payment in full would result in most cases in no payments at all. Common sense indicates that the best thing to do is to collect to the limit of the willingness and capacity of our European debtors to pay, with the knowledge that with every passing year disposition to pay, at all weakens, not merely among the people of the nations involved, among whom a crusade of hatred against the United States is constantly being carried on. In the case of the Italian debt settlement the Senate has confronted only the alternatives of partial settlement and repudiation. Italian repudiation would be followed by French repudiation. Russian repudiation has of course defininitely taken place, which fact does not disturb at all some of the politicians loudest in their denunciation of Italy for failure to pay more fully. How will we proceed to collect debts which our European debtors refuse to pay? Does anyone favor going to war about it? Are those who declare that they would prefer to get nothing if not more than is in prospect representing the interests of the American people who would have to pay the bill for this exhibition of feeling?

Our bill for "saving the world for democracy" is a big one. President Harding estimated that before the last bill, bond and interest coupon is paid it will aggregate a hundred billion dollars. Perhaps we have bad that much worth of experience. America demonstrated, anyway, that she was not too proud to fight when attacked, and the vastness of our military and naval operations brought to Europe and the world a realization of America's potential strength which may in the future save us the necessity of a war nearer home. It has also made Americans more than ever determined to keep out of European politics and world crusades. We might have learned our lesson under conditions far more harmful to ourselves. Who knows, in the light of such considerations, that America's part in the World War, was worth as much as It cost?

Of course the United States Is unpopular abroad. The wealth and stability of the United States Is envied; but Americans earned that wealth and stability, and are not compelled to sacrifice their high level of life to the rest of the world upon the heels of an experience which teaches them that such sacrifices bring in their train only the enmity of those we try to help. The more we become involved in the tangled web of Europe intrigue, the more we seek to arbitrate Europe's age-old hatreds and rivalries, the more unpopular the United States will become with those who through every instinct of honor should be her friends. The lesson is clear. Close the accounts on the European war transaction as quickly as possible and realize on the World War in the only way open to us, and that war and what has come out of it, should teach Americans.

A WILD, VENTURESOME JOURNEY.

BY F. E. CORLISS.

"To hold the mind on any one subject for ten consecutive minutes is quite a difficult feat, Sam. Before you are aware of it, it will go wandering from the text and you have to keep bringing it back. Tonight, Sam, I feel like letting it wander at will and go the limit and I want you to get your mind in tune to mine so you can roam with me. This exploration journey will be a long one and we shall need to divest ourselves of all excess baggage

"You know that inside we have an ethereal body. It's a picture of our real self and looks like a photograph taken on cheese cloth, full of interstices. Our physical bodies are a reproduction picture with all the spaces filled in with real substance. So this body that houses us and the thing that we walk with and work with was first a mental picture in the mind of the Creator while the Almighty was then a static, intelligent energy, but He desired to materialize the picture by a chemical combination of the elements and to project us into objectivity on the plane of tangible effects. So that is how we got here.

"Now tonight we are going to walk out of our bodies just as we walk out of our homes on the hillside. We are going to make a visit to Venus, Mercury and Mars and then out to the nearest star, Centauri, only twenty-five billions of miles distant."

"But hold on, Doc; I want to know what we are going in and all about the chances of having the engine stall on us."

"Leave it all to me Sam, and don't worry. We shall have no need for engines or parachutes. Did you ever watch the sea gulls follow a ship for hundreds of miles and notice how far they can go and never move a wing or a feather. Well, we are going to float with a greater ease than they do and with a speed that is equal to that of thought.

"We are going on the ether waves, Sam, like a radio message. You know the ether has currents like the ocean and the lower air. It Is just like getting on a train, Sam. If we wish to go to Vega, Altai or Cygnus of the Swan, all we have to do is to get into vibration with the Vega wave and we will be there sooner than I can tell you."

"Well, Doc, it seems to me this is a foolish idea that you have got into your noodle—quite an innovation."

"Worse than that, Sam. The orthodox and conventioanal will call it lunacy, pure and simple.

"I have an idea that many of the planets besides ours were made for the abodes of men like us and possibly far superior to the best of us. I want to know and not guess about it. I want to see for myself; I want to prove my belief or have it disproved, and I need you for a witness. We will have a mighty nice trip, Sam, and can not help but learn something even if my theory is wrong.

"If the stay-at-home people and the wise ones laugh, why let them have all the fun out of it they can get.

"Now if you are ready, Sam, we will be off in a jiffy and tell all about it when we return."

"Which way are you going first, Doc?"

"We are going to see Venus first; then Mercury; then we will go back past Mother Earth and spend some time overlooking Mars. Then we will take in Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. That will complete our solar system. Now it is a long jump out to Centauri. It takes four years and five months for light to reach us from this, our nearest star, and light travels one hundred and eighty-six thousand miles a second."

"This is some universe, Doc, when one gets away from his old home town, eh?"

"Well ,you wait until we see Orion and the Pleadies, then we will take in the whole Milky Way, and if your eyes don't bulge at the spectacle, Sam, I shall call you a 'poor simp.'

"When we get back, Sam, and hear those Lilliputian minds brag about the beauties of Broadway and its white lights, we can give them an eye-opener. They will not think they are so much, then."

"Yes, friends, Sam and I are home again and back in our covering of flesh. We cannot tell you all about it in one evening, as it would more than fill a book, but we will give you a synopsis of our trip and leave the rest to your imagination.

"When we sailed over Venus we dropped until we got into the swing of her gravitational pull, then we encircled the whole planet, as we did all the other stars visted. Venus is appropriately named—a perfect beauty—hut she is young and as yet undeveloped. Mercury is a hot place and it will take millions of years for her to cool down to a comfortable temperature. Mars is a little older that Earth, but only a little over one-sixth as large in volume. Mare has more land than water. She has soil, climate, mountains, lakes and canals, like we have. Her year is nearly twice as long as ours. But her people are intellectually far superior to us. Everything in Mars seems settled—more finished than here. There are no unsightly mining plants, coal mines, or coke ovens or manufacturing works to be seen.

"The Martian homes are beautiful, the boulevards and avenues are perfect, and the whole planet is gorgeous in landscape and one feels like driving through endless parks and playgounds similar to Fairmount and Central Park, only that they are crude in comparison.

"Yes, life on Mars would be a paradise to men of Earth. All the other planets in our system are in a gaseous condition. No tongue can describe nor artist paint the sublimity and grandeur that strews the Milky Way.

"We saw planets coming into birth; others cold in death, ready to fall into the sun that gave them birth. The older planets were all populated with beings like unto us who are living in regal splendor.

"Now, friends, if I have given you a fairy tale, I want Sam to affirm or deny it, because he saw all that I saw."

"Doc has given you the truth, my friends, but only a thousandth part of its glories, and he couldn't do it justice in a month."

"Now this is what we went out to learn, namely: That both the Infinite mind and the finite are powerless to express their highest attributes in the spiritual form while existing in the ethereal medium.

"The Divine intelligence can not be communicative and instructive save as it operates through our finite senses; hence man the finite was individualized, given freedom of the will and raised to a state of self-consciousness and endowed with eternal life. In man and through man the Infinite dwells to fulfill His expression and to contact tangible things, move them and mold them that a Divine purpose may be projected into a visible world of effects.

"For this purpose were suns and systems and planets made for the abodes of men—a field for their activities in which to gain wisdom, character and experience.

"An immaterial spiritual life of endless bliss in a realm of invisible, intangible ether is meaningless to the mind of man. To live, to learn, to grow, to progress and execute the Divine intent we must be re-embodied on this or some other planet where life is objectified."

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Grant and three boys returned to Oakland Sunday evening after having spent a week with relatives in Washington, D: C.

Have Your Car Overhauled.

Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

F'rinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.

If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then ,when spring breakes. the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

Improvements at the Garrett National Almost Completed

The work on the interior of the banking room at the Gnrrett National Bank will likely be completed this week. The room is now one of the handsomest and best arranged in the State. In addition to an extension of counters to afford better service for the customers of the institution, the banking room has been greatly enlarged, private compartments for customers have been built in and a private office for the officials of the bank has also been added. The directors room is a well proportioned office located on the second floor of the building. The walls of the banking room are wainscoated shoulder high in Italian marble, of which the counters are also made. As soon as possible the walls of the banking room are to be decorated which will complete the work and add to the beauty of the interior.

May Day—Child Health Day

"Oh May Day is a gay day
When life is in its heyday,
A healthy, happy play day
That keeps the whole world young."
—National Child Welfare Association

State-wide celebration of May Day as Child Health Day, in connection with the nation-wide observance of the day, is strongly recommended by Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health.

"May Day is one of the days," he said, "when we want to think of good health, not disease, in connection with the children of the State. Those of us who are directly concerned with the upbringing of children in Maryland, especially the parents, teachers, the clergy, doctors and health officials, have a rather large army to consider. There are something like 18,000 babies under n year old and over 200,000 boys and girls under fifteen in the counties and an equally large number in Baltimore City.

"The future of Maryland depends upon this army and upon its well being, physically, mentally and spiritually. We can readily afford to devote this one day in the year to constructive planning for the health of these children. Just what we want for each child and why we want it was admirably summed up by Herbert Hoover in his letter as president of the American Child Health Association urging the annual observanee of May Day as Child Health Day. The elemental rights of each child, he said, are 'To be born wellfesd1gLi are 'To be born well; to have a healthy childhood, and to reach maturity in the happiness that comes in its fullness only to those whose physical heritage has been safeguarded. With bodily health almost surely goes the natural selection of healthy associations, moral and spiritual as well as physieal. Also with such health, and just as naturally, goes an aptitude to receive the right instruetion easily; to be kind; to regard the rights of others, that is to make 'Good Citizens.' "

Dr. Fulton has appointed Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Chief of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, state chairman for the observance of May Day.

Begin Well.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt, crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely, and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This day is all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the yesterdays. —Emerson.

OAKLAND ROTARY CLUB SPONSORS IMPROVEMENT

In Dairy Stock By Authorizing Purchase of Purebred Heifer to be Given Some Dairyman

The Oakland Rotarians, at their weekly luncheon last Friday evening, determined to sponsor the improvement of dairy herds in Garrett county and to that end authorized the purchase of a purebred dairy type heifer to be given some dairyman located in Garrett county, the manner of determining the recipient of the animal having already been worked out.

This movement on the part of the local organization was brought about through the announcement made a few days prior by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company that in co-operation with the State Extension Service of the University of Maryland and the Dairy Breeders' Association, the B. & O. will oprate over its lines in Maryland some time during the month of May a "Better Dairy Sire Special."

The train thus to be operated will serve a dual purpose. First, it will carry a specially arranged car in which there will be educational exhibits of the National Dairy Council. While this exhibit appeals to persons of all ages, it is planned to appeal particularly to children with the idea of stimulating in their minds the desire of drinking milk daily and in liberal quantities. Second, in addition to the educational program, a number of purebred bulls 10 to 18 months of age will be offered at private sale. These bulls will not only be from tested herds but from dams with high production records back of them. The bulls are all guaranteed, delivered without transportation charges and will be available to the farmers of Garrett county. All dairy breeds will be represented in the sale. Any farmer having a scrub or grade bull and desiring to purchase a purebred from the train may turn in his scrub or grade for which he will be allowed the full beef price.

The train will also carry a lecture car in which will be given lectures and talks by leading dairy authorities and others connected with the project.

The main feature of the stop in Oakland will be the designation of the recipient of the Rotary heifer. Each farmer visiting the train will be required to register and from this list of names the fortunate dairyman to receive the animal will be selected.

While the above program is going on at the Baltimore and Ohio yards in Oakland, a meeting specially for women will be held in the Court House, which will be addressed by Miss Helen Stark, national authority on nutrition. It is also hoped that Professor Happy Goldsmith, of the National Dairy Council, may be available for a thirty minute lecture to be delivered in the auditorium of the local high school. Professor Happy is a powerful speaker and in each community where he works he exerts a tremendous influence for the increased consumption of dairy products.

The exact date and hour of the arrival of the special train will be announced in The Republican in a later issue.

AMERICAN FOREST WEEK BEGAN APRIL 18; ENDS 24th

Purpose to Encourage Reforestation—Proclamation Issued By President and Governor

Plans for observance of American Forest Week, April 18-24, as proclaimed by President Coolidge and Governor Ritchie, will be in charge of a committee of citizens headed by De Courcy W. Thom, of Baltimore. This announcement was made Thursday from the headquarters of the Maryland Forest Week Committee. Other members of the Committee are: J. L. Alcock, C. Clemson Brown, Dr. William Burdick, M. C. Byers, C. C. Gelder, G. M. Gillette, Henry Holzappel, Jr., Mrs. John H. Skeen, P. M. Womble.

"Forestry in Maryland will receive more attention this year than ever before, the plans for the week already make evident," said Mr. Thom, Chairman, in a statement issued Thursday.

"Most of our citizens realize the importance of productive foests, the control of soil erosion, and kindred matters, but it is necessary to educate our woodland owners in the methods of timber growing, and to strengthen our provisions for controlling forest fires and encouraging reforestation if the interests of the people of Maryland are to be fully safeguarded.

"President Coolidge and Governor Ritchie in their proclamations called upon all citizens to share in the common task of forest conservation and renewal. Judging by the hearty cooperation the Maryland Forest Week Committee is receiving, the campaign will be generally taken up in our State. Our schools and clubs are especially active in observing the week."

At present, we in Maryland are cutting our forests twice as fast as we are growing them, and using wood four times as fast as we are cutting it. This means that we must import from other states the timber we need, because we are not growing it. These outside sources of supply are being drawn on very heavily and cannot last for many years. Then, too, there is the terrific expense of the freight bills on hauling timber long distances. This would be unnecessary if we took the proper care of our forests and made them produce their maximum.

The committee will be glad to furnish speakers, as far as possible, for this week to any organizations applying to 405 Maryland Trust Building, Baltimore, Maryland.

At this time Mr. W. L. Riley was elected to serve as trustee for the year of 1926-27. Miss Edna Teets was appointed as a member of the program committee to fill the vacancy that Mrs. L. W. Collins will make when leaving the community. Mr. Ross Teets was elected as secretary to fill the vacancy of Mr. L. W. Collins.

It was also decided that the work to rebuild the fence along the county road in front of the school would be started in a short while.

With a few short numbers on the program the meeting adjourned to meet again May 7, 1926.

SCHOOL REPORTER.

BETTER HOMES WEEK

Will Be Observed April 26-May 1, With Foreword by Herbert Hoover.

The Better Homes movement stands on the belief that our people, by well-planned measures, can obtain for themselves a finer type of home and family life. The splendid and widespread support that has been given it makes for soundness at the very base of our whole social and political structure. It is in our homes and family circles that the children of each generation receive the most essential part of the training they need as men and women to go forth and meet the problems that press upon them. From our homes each day come those who produce and distribute necessary commodities and carry on the government and other enterprises. The highest and most enduring social relationships are those of the family, and most men and women find the welfare of their families to be life's most impelling motive.

Home-making is still as much a matter of personal character and unswerving maintenance of standards as it ever was. On the housekeeping side, moreover, it involves wider knowledge and a greater range of alternatives to choose from than ever before. New equipment and devices are constantly becoming available and the results of systematic study are shedding new light on various household problems affecting health and happiness. Furthermore, millions of our families must adapt themselves more or less often to changed circumstances of living because of movement between country and city, between regions with different climates, and between apartments and houses of different sizes, and because of changes in income.

Systematic study of home-making under a great variety of conditions is evidently needed. The Better Homes committees, by a division of tasks, are able to go into many problems more thoroughly than a single overworked housewife, and through the demonstrations present their conclusions in practical form. In a number of cities this has involved showing several houses, each specially fitted to the needs of a particular group of families.

The local committees which kept the cost of their demonstration houses, furnishings, and equipment within a carefully devised budget have done the most toward solving their local housing problem. They have faced the same problems as the families which have to piece out limited funds with brains and ingenuity and the work of ther hands.

Permanent school practice houses built and owned by our public schools and colleges, embodying high standards of architecture, construction and furnishing, are another important part of the movement. Education for homemaking should be available to all and is best given under realistic conditions.

The work of Better Homes committees has promoted character training in the home, and reading, music and other forms of wholesome home recreation. It has encouraged saving and wise expenditure for the building and equipping of homes and thereby helped to raise living standards, reduce drudgery and make the conditions of life more attractive.

Of great significance is the originality shown in the local demonstrations. Nothing would deaden the movement more quickly than the listless following of a standard ready-made program.

There is nothing finer than a living tradition, a tradition which continually spurs men and women to achievement. Those who are pioneering the way in Better Homes demonstrations today can build up a tradition which will make the high type of homes, and the character of the young men and women who come from them, the chief pride of the community. Such a tradition requires a central point of inspiration, a dynamic symbol and the Better Home demonstration fills this need.

Where a demonstration is most successful, it is usually because the committee works hard and obtains willing assistance, especially from those whom it directly calls upon. The Better Home movement already commands a wide following. It deserves a greatly extended support.

What Garrett County Citizens Think of the County Fair and What It Means In the Future

Dr. HENRY W. McCOMAS, President Garrett County Fair Association, Inc.

"Yes, I think the fair a wonderful annual event," said Dr. Henry W. McComas, president of the Garrett County Fair Association, the other day. "Stop and think," the genial doctor continued, "of the real purpose and possibilities of this annual get together occasion. Let us have an enlarged conception of the functions of the Fair in community life.

"Primarily, an organization for the advancement of agriculture and of those directly concerned with agriculture—all interested in the community, both rural and urban. Enlarge this conception to induce the idea that the Fair is intended not only to record progress of production but serve as a means for the advancement of every phase of rural life.

"The Fair will mean much to me and to my friends. When it is a progressive Fair exhibits such as agriculture, live stock, machinery and other urban products and public school exhibits will be shown in vast abundance.

"The County Fair should be the general round-up of the economic and social life of the county. It is a splendid time for an inter-community music festival, athletic contests, etc.

"Every effort should be made to widen the acquaintance of the people and to strengthen their personal relationships as the basis for true democracy. As leaders in rural life become better acquainted with the purpose and possibilities of the annual economic and social round-up at Fair time and as public appreciation of the things truly educational grow, the Fair will become one of the most powerful stimuli for rural advancement available.

"Then we will gradually discard the elements which have lessened the value of the Fair, bring it to a development of real utility and fill it with educational agencies."

LUTHER BURBANK AND GERALD CHAPMAN

By F. F. CORLISS.

It seems incongruous to link the names of these men together on the same line, but recently they have been conspicuous figures in the press and the minds of the public.

For us who are living they are important object lessons taken from life and not from fiction and deserve our study and consideration. Of what the world calls good and evil, the lives of these men expressed the extremes.

In their lives they had but one trait or opinion in common—that has been made apparent. They both fearlessly took the great adventure with unbelief in a life hereafter.

Mr. Burbank was a frankly confessed infidel. Chapman's life of Godless acts needs no vocal expression. He died as he lived in defiance of the will of God and the rights of his fellowmen.

Figurativley, Mr. Burbank unconsciously walked hand-in-hand with his Maker all his life, doing His bidding by following nature's laws, without which his work would have availed nothing.

He certainly had the religion of humanity, because he gave a long life of useful service for the benefit of us all.

He never tried to patent or monopolize his ideas for a selfish profit, but gave all that he might benefit others.

Chapman, the criminal and outlaw, was possessed of a bright mind, but its energies were all misdirected and destructive. He died friendless and penniless and scorned. But had he lived and died rich? How does it profit a man to gain money at the cost of one's self-respect and the respect of his fellowmen?

"As a man thinketh in his heart so is he"—so he acts.

But man's thinking is often guided by unseen forces, like heredity, association, suggestion, environment and the nature of his vocation.

Had Mr. Burbank spent as much time and earnest study of the chemistry of life, as found in animals and man, instead of devoting himself wholly to changing the channel of life in plants, he might have formed a different conclusion about God and an after-life.

Nearly all our great scientists and those who have lived close to nature and have had to use her forces and follow her laws have found a design in the creation of all things, consequently there must somewhere be a Designer. We live in a world of effects and for every effect there is a cause.

Nothing in nature has ever happened by accident or chance.

Instinct in animals and instinct and intuition in man are as much Divine effects as our physical structure. They have been given us for use and show us purpose and design.

Now, it is very difficult for the analytical mind to believe that the Creator of man should endow him with instincts and aspirations for a life hereafter just to fool and deceive him.

Belief in some kind of future life and in a Supreme Intelligence are ingrained in the hearts and minds of men of all nations and all races, even the most ignorant.

These two men are prominent exceptions which help to prove the rule. And were it not so, not true, human life and property in this or any country would be an insecure possession.

To the victor would go the spoils; might would make right and he would take, who can.

On account of his well known fame, Mr. Burbank was much and severely criticised for giving wide publicity to his skeptical opinions. The writer had the pleasure of meeting him many years ago in Santa Rosa and later hear him expound the wizardry of his work to a group of tourists.

His achievements gave him a right to some conceit, but he impressed me as one who delighted in feeling above and apart from the common herd in his beliefs and opinions. I think he took pride in being odd and eccentric.

The life of one was constructive, helpful and righteous; the life of the other was destructive, baneful and wicked, but they both had one trait in common. They both died as skeptics.

What a terrible feeling of hopeless despair one must suffer in facing the unknown believing that as the flame of a candle is snuffed so is the life of man made extinct.

We know that the All-creative mind expands its wisdom and power by enlarging the life and progressive growth of mind in man. That only through and in man can the Creator express His highest, noblest attributes. Why then, after gaining experience in His realm of effects and raising man to the pinnacle of high achievement should He wish to exterminate him and begin again at the bottom of the ladder of life?

Why should the Almighty throw away a life of high estate that it has taken Him millions of years to evolve?

Is it logical, rational? Think it over, reader.

KITZMILLER

The Juniors of the Kitzmiller High school rendered a play entitled, "Patty Makes Things Hum," in the Maryland theatre, Friday evening, April 16th, to a full house. The stage settings were very effective and each player did justice to their part.

Much credit is due Miss Knapp, home economics teacher, for the excellent training she gave them.

To our Patrons:

We have received a number of cans of milk that had an offensive odor. It may have been caused by feeding ensilage while milking, or by the cows udder getting dirty in the muddy barnyards.

Cows should not be fed foods that smell, until after milking, and the cows udder, when soiled, should be washed clean before milking.

EARLY CHRISTIANS HAD TO BE MILITANT

"If Christians in the beginning had been pacifists there would have been no Christian religion" declares the National Republic in commenting on Edward Bok's lament to the effect that so many "militant" hymns are sung in the churches.

Edward Bok laments the use in America, and especially in American churches, of songs which speak of battle. He deplores the repetition of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and hymns such as "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "The Son of God Goes Forth to War." He believes it inconsistent for Christians to be fighting men.

If Christians had been pacifists from the beginning, there would now be no Christian religion. All Europe would have been as completely Moslem as were eastern Europe and southern Spain centuries ago but for the fact that there were warriors in Christendom. In a world of strife non-resistence means extinction.

Confucius taught a pacifist philosophy, and centuries ago it was accepted by China's teeming millions. It might be assumed from this that the career of China has been peaceful, yet in no other area of similar size in all the world have so man people met death by violence and nowhere else have men suffered more from oppression. Peace has been purchased in China at the price both of safety and of justice. The Chinese passively accept oppression; therefore they have been oppressed. They have not formed the habit of fighting for their rights, therefore their rights have been ignored. Government has been by the strong; the armed. Military chieftains ravage the land, because the people have never learned to resist. Government has for centuries been notoriously corrupt and unjust, because the Chinese have been taught stocial submission. And yet China is not a symbol of progress, and the level of human welfare is lower there, perhaps, than anywhere else in the world.

FIRST PASSENGER AND FREIGHT STATION

The first passenger and freight station in America was that of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on Poppleton Street, south of Pratt Street, Baltimore, Mo. The original two-story building, erected in 1830, still stands, part of it being used by the freight agent as an auxiliary office and the remainder as an adjunct to the Company's printing plant. The Company cherishes this building as one of its "landmarks" in its long and eventful history.

The site chosen for this station was a small portion of the Mount Clare estate of the Carroll family. Prior to the building of the station, the Baltimore and Ohio, in 1829, had erected a little box-like structure in the vicinity for the sale of passenger tickets. By that time rails were laid to and across the Carrollton viaduct and the citizens of Baltimore and many from the surrounding territory, because of the novelty of railroading in those early days, were taking advantage of the excursions operated by the Company.

With the growing patronage and popularity of the railroad, the need of a more substantial passenger and freight station was felt as early as 1830, and "Mount Clare" station was built that year.

During the celebration of the Francis Scott Key- Star Spangled Banner Centennial in Baltimore in 1914, the Baltimore and Ohio Company marked several of its more important historical places in Baltimore with commemorative tablets. The one placed at Mount Clare Station reads as follows:

This building, erected 1830, is the first passenger and freight station in America, and the oldest in the world. At the time of its use, trains were hauled by horses between Baltimore and Ellicott vs. Mills. Baltimore and Ohio, The Pioneer Railroad of America, the corner stone of which was laid by Charles Carroll of Carollton, July 4, 1828.

The "First Stone" of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is not far from Mount Clare station, and near it is the Carrollton viaduct, the first stone arch railroad bridge in the world, built in 1829 and still in use. Close by Mount Clare, Phineas Davis, builder of the "Atlantic" locomotive, assembled its parts which he had brought by wagon from York, Pa., to compete in the locomotive trials of 1831, conducted by the Baltimore and Ohio Company.

Adjoining Mount Clare Station are the Mount Clare Shops, which were started in 1852, now the largest locomotive repair shops on the railroad.

NOT ALTOGETHER ASTONISHING.

The unseating of Senator Brookhart of Iowa, by a Republican senate although it was in line with the majority report of the committee on privileges and elections, is a somewhat astonishing result. It almost looks as if the senate had decided the contest on what it assumed to be the fact; and if that could be accepted as the motive the result would be truly astonishing.

Reflection and an examination of the vote probably will cause this conclusion to be rejected, however. The Republican majority could have seated Brookhart if it had wanted to, and that it would have seated him if it had regarded him as a Republican will scarcely be denied by anybody familiar with the way the Republican organization usually votes. The facts established to the satisfaction autocrat of the contest brought by Mr. Steck by many months. They go back to Brookhart's record in the senate as an anti-organization insurgent, as a supporter of the La Follette candidacy and as a member on numerous occasions of the Democratic-insurgent coalition. The sixteen Republicans who voted to seat Steck, a Democrat, voted a long held conviction that their party owed nothing to Brookhart, could expect nothing from him and that his room would be preferable to his company, even if his room was occupied by a Democrat.

These sixteen anti-Brookhart Republicans include by no mere coincidence the organization senators who threw Brookhart out of the party two years ago. They have held now as they held then that Brookhart didn't belong. Nor is it necessary to say that in acting as they have they prejudged the evidence adduced in the contest. They didn't have to give weight to any evidence if they didn't want to. The senate being the judge of the qualifications of its members can unseat a member on any grounds or on no grounds at all. If the organization leaders now say Brookhart wasn't elected by the Iowa voters, that is just as good a gound as that taken by other Republicans who say he was. The difference of opinion is the same difference that existed in 1924 when the Republican leaders said Brookhart wasn't a Republican and other Republicans said he was.

It is to be noted in support of this view of motives that there existed no such wide division among the Democrats. There was a difference but it was small enough to be regarded as strictly constitutional. The big majority of the Democrats voted to seat Steck, the Democrat. The Brookhart quarrel then was a Republican quarrel, and the Republicans settled it; the Democrats for the most part were content to vote as Democrats and take the gift of the seat the Republican split bestowed.

These conditions probably will illuminate the senate action on the Brookhart-Steck contest for those who may be unduly astonished at its result.—New York World.

THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER

The local newspaper in the United States is each year getting on a firmer foundation and becoming more and more useful to its home community.

It is the home newspaper which boosts the town, year in and year out, which takes the lead in every enterprise which has for its purpose the upbuilding of the community.

We frequently hear it said that the old-time independent spirit of the newspaper is gone, that its editorial policy is now subservient to the business office. Yet this is not true. There is more unselfish idealism in the average local newspaper than in any other business enterprise. It frequently speaks out in the way which it believes will be for the good of the nation and of the community regardless of what the consequences may be from a business standpoint.

The local newspaper is the principal booster for the community, and it does its boosting often without hope of material reward. Unfortunate is the community which neither appreciates nor supports its local newspapers.

May Day Happenings.

Plans are under way by all organizations interested in child health, for the State-wide observance of May Day, or of the days just before and following the first of May, as Child Health Day.

A pamphlet containing a suggested program for celebrations in schools, or by classes or clubs has been prepared by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. It contains recitations, health songs and a May Day play, for the older boys and girls, with suggestions for games and dramatized stories for the younger children. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Child Hygiene, 16 West Saratoga street, Baltimore, Md.

In addition to the exercises that will be held in many of the schools on Friday afternoon, April 30, athletic events, sports and games have been scheduled for each county under the direction of the State Department of Education and the Playground Athletic League. Meets for the white boys will be held on selected dates during the month of May, coming to a climax in the State-wide meet in the Stadium in Baltimore City, June 11. The meets for the colored boys will take place according to scheduled plans, during April and May, with the final meet in the Stadium on June 14th.

In Baltimore City, the program will be spread throughout the month. There will be special exercises in the playgrounds under the auspices of the Playground Athletic League. There will be health conferences for babies and preschool children conducted by the Bureau of Child Welfare of the Baltimore City Department of Health, and by the Babies Milk Fund Association. Health plays, illustrated talks, poster making, and other exercises will take place in the schools, under the auspices of the Baltimore Dairy Council; there will be radio talks for children and grownups, and the climax will come with the health festival and health pageants that will be given the latter part of the month in the Stadium by the children from the public schools under the direction of the Department of Physical Education and Hygiene.

Organizations that are cooperating in the statewide plans include the State Department of Health, the State Department of Education, Diocesan Department of Catholic schools, Baltimore City school, the State Medical Society, the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty, the Maryland Parent-Teacher Association, Department of Public Welfare, State Federation of Women's Clubs, State Tuberculosis Association, Baltimore Babies Milk Fund Association, Playground Athletic League, and the Baltimore Dairy Council.

Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, is the State Chairman. Members of the Central Committee include Governor Ritchie, representatives from each of the above organizations, the Deputy State Health Officers, or County Health Officers, the County Superintendent of Schools, and the president of the County Medical Societies.

Knights of Pythias Activities.

In our report of the banquet last week we attempted to describe this memorable occasion in a general way. Due to limitations on newspaper space we were obliged to omit a detailed account of all the proceedings. All who in any way contributed to the success of the banquet are entitled to much praise and thanks. Especially deserving of commendation was the forceful manner in which the toasts were proposed of which but general reference was made in our last report. Each in turn was proposed in a most effective and appealing manner.

The toast to the Government of the United States by Bro. W. R. Offutt was indeed a masterpiece. Well did he demonstrate his exceptional ability as an orator in that he held his listeners spellbound by his carefully prepared formidable array of historic facts relative to the pioneers of our beloved country, their hardships and eventual triumph in the couse of liberty.

The toast to the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, by Bro. Delbert Davis, was presented in a creditable way. The result of much work on the subject was evidenced by the fraternal data as outlined in the toast to the Grand Lodge of Maryland by Bro. C. W. Ream. Chancellor Commander G. J. Altstetter's dramatic utterances in the toast to Garrett Lodge, No. 113, inspired every member present to renewed effort. Dr. Henry W. McComas made everyone feel at home by his address of welcome. He also emphasized the fact that our local Knights have a remarkable digestive apparatus, comparable to that of an ostrich.

The cooperation of those who took part in the program is appreciated by the lodge and the public. Such events as this make a person feel as though life is worth living after all.

Knights, should any one accost you on the street Friday night, April 23, with the query, "quo vadis," by all means reply, "To castle hall to be on hand when our highly touted degree team confers the rank of Knight." If you have not seen this team in action you have been missing something.

Past Grand Chancellor J. C. Renninger and Past Chancellors A. G. Gortner and G. A. Whorton have returned from the recent session of the Grand Lodge held at Cambridge, Md. They promise an unusually interesting report of the proceedings of that body.

We expect to begin a series of articles in the near future on various fraternal topies. The first will appear next week and we hope to present some new thoughts in our humble way. The subject for next week will be "Regular attendance an essential factor in fraternity."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, APRIL 25, 1926.

THE STORY OF CAIN AND ABEL.

Genesis 4.

Am I my brother's keeper?—Gen. 4:9.

THE CHURCH.

Out into the open country sin drove Adam and his wife. There another home was reared and the work of living began under harder circumstances than before. Presently the world knew a new joy for it heard the cry of its first baby. Eve smiled thru tears, Adam laughed and God rejoiced. Earth and heaven found new bonds in the life that belonged to both and not since the night that settled over the garden had Jehovah seemed so near. Big, lusty chunk he was; so much so that Eve cried, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." But work was hard, conditions difficult, Cain exacting and the next baby was so frail that it seemed a breath might blow him away so he was named Abel. Years sped swiftly under the stern conditions of the primitive world in which men's bare hands were pitted against nature in the raw. Little leisure was there but in home there was the joy of growth and the nurture of the religious. For they had a family altar and prayed and groped dimly for the old intimacy of the Garden. It was the church in the home that gave the earliest shaping to the life of the boys. And it was in that same church that the first tragedy of their lives was wrought.

Cain despised his brother's frailty. Big and brawny, he fought the reluctant earth and compelled obedience to his will. His tolerance toward Abel often cloaked a sneer and, in thinking if not in fact, he lorded the household that he fed with the fruits of his mastery of the soil. He felt himself as following the injunction of Jehovah to subdue the earth, Abel cared for pets about the house while his brother ran afield and, as he grew to manhood, found that the animal he had fostered had become a flock with which he might wander over the hillside and rest with them under the trees while they furnished milk and meat for the appetite keen from the open air. They were both of them religious. The home altar called equally in their ears and they would have been shocked had any one suggested any other course than its filling with their gifts. But one brought his offering warm with gratitude for a chance given him in his weakness, joyous with his sense of dependance upon the strength that was imparted by Jehovah. There he would go singing to his task from the fire kindled in his soul. Cain came with the swagger of power. He needed no help from God and his mighty muscles fairly rippled with energy as he deposited his observance of custom. "How hardly shall they that have riches (mind, muscle or money) enter into the Kingdom of God." Cain's glow was self-appreciation while he glowered at the singing Abel's weakness.

THE STREET

The street is the test of the church. What follows worship determine its worth-ship. And a singular train of events followed the use of that old altar in Adam's house. Under primitive conditions the herd will inevitably outrank the farm. A bent stick spells poor husbandry while the flock ranges to any pasturage and thrives beside any stream. Cain would come in hot and dusty from the field that was baked by the drought to listen to Abel singing in from some watercourse, depleted but still sufficient to supply the increasing flock. Again he would come in wet and draggled from a freshet that had torn his land from its place to hear Abel drive his sheep from the uplands unhurt, rejoicing over the lambs new-foaled. Meat for the family pot gave Abel new standing in the home and Cain saw himself being dispossessed by the weakling. To be beaten by a superior holds no sting, to be beaten by an equal holds only a passing smart, but to be beaten by a weaker rival leaves a rankling sore. Unless he be a real sport his altar gets its supreme test here. And Cain was no sport. The challenge of God concerning the crouching sin tells of his persistent petting of it. "Rule over it," said God. But Cain was married to it—note the same phrase in Gen. 3:16—hugged his sense of unfairness and determined to take matters into his own hands. God was unfair, the family was unfair,—all right; and his face was never uplifted.

THE COURT

Months passed with the slowly maturing determination to take things into his own hands. Envy [illegible]ed had mastered him. Hate ra[illegible]n in his heart. Abel stood in [illegible]ay and he would make his way [illegible] or wrong—it was his du[illegible] as the firstborn and he wouldn't be dispossessed. He tolled Abel one into the field, hot words followed to the younger's amazement. His disclaimer of what was so evident to Cain angered him the more and a sudden blow from that big fist sent Abel reeling against a rock where he lay still. [illegible] the Court of Conscience over which God presids began its session. Cain was sullen instead of penitent. He refused to recognize any responsibility for his brother. Down in his heart he felt that he had given him only what he deserved. It may not have been just what he intended as the outcome of the interview but he wasn't sorry and he wouldn't beg any forgiveness not even when the Court pronounced sentence. He felt he had to flee but he feared as he planned his flight. He was a marked man, marked however by the tenderness of God that vengeance might be stayed until he came to repentance and contrition.

THE CROWD

Did he repent? No one can say. In the great line in which the author is interested his place was taken by Seth and God's plan consumated thru him and at last thru Jesus. God is never thwarted nor His cause defeated. Man may refuse to serve the purpose of the Almighty but the Kingdom comes never-the-less tho the man to whom God offered its high privilege does not share it. But Cain made good. Whether he was good is another question altogether. For that early world was like our own frontier in which the strongest ruled and the quickest shot was winner of the game. Lamech's Song of the Sword is indication of the type of civilization existant. But when mothers begin to name their babies after any one he has become a hero and Tubal-Cain got the title and even the land catches it in Canaan. He had become a city-builder and the progenitor of music and metal work. The age of tool was begun and he had learned to sing. Certainly it was a great achievement and let us hope that something of the lilting note of truse that was Abel's crept into the heavier tones of his brother.

STATES' RIGHTS HIS THEME

Maryland Governor Would Make This a National Issue

(New York Times)

The old principle of states' rights has assumed, once more, the aspect of a national issue. A leading part in its revival has been played by Governor Ritchie of Maryland, and his recent speeches attacking centralization and federal encroachments have evoked much comment and curiosity concerning the man who delivered them.

Albert Cabell Ritchie is a southern gentleman of the old sch[illegible]l with a quite up to date way of playing his political hand. His opinions are clear-cut; his stand on all questions is definitely expressed, so that his followers and his enemies alike know on which side of any given line he will take his place. He has none of the philosophical detachment of the scholar. He is alert, decisive and interested, a man of action rather than of contemplation.

The Maryland governor is an incongrously vital figure to find at work in the sleepy old Annapolis state house—the same house in which George Washington resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary forces, glorious yet removed from the life of today. He is very much of today, and it is the atmosphere he creates, rather than that left by his forebears, which dominates the administrative offices.

A Cheerful Statesman.

In a personal meeting with Governor Ritchie, it is his physical presence that registers the first impression. He seems unpardonably handsome for a statesman. Tall, blue eyed and gray haired, his skin bronzed like a sportsman's, his figure evenly chiseled, there is something almost theatrical in his appearance.

But his nose glasses, which he doffs and dons as the mood strikes him, help to fit him into the official picture, and his smile screws his features pleasantly out of line. He smiles often—partly, one feels through a native good humor, partly because he sees the funny side of his job and partly because he appreciates the political value of a ready cheerfulness. He brings great zest to his work as governor.

Just now his mind is centered on his States' rights talking campaign. No matter what he starts talking about, the conversation inevitably veers back to his favorite subject.

Governor Ritchie has a distinguished record in Maryland. Since 1838, when the State first elected her highest official by popular vote, he is the first governor who has been chosen for a second term in office. Recently he announced his intention of running for a third term, instead of following the usual procedure and seeking a place in the United States Senate.

In both the Harding and the Coolidge conferences of governors, called to consider state enforcement of the Volstead act, Ritchie was the one executive who stood up in meeting and declared that the law was unworkable and that this state would not enforce it by local law. In 1922, during the miners' strike of that year, when Harding called upon the governors of all the coal states to send troops to the mines, Ritchie alone declined, asserting that the situation should be settled by mutual agreement and not with the bayonet.

A Presidential Possibility.

Naturally, a man who thus takes matters into his own hands acquires strong enemies as well as loyal followers. Ritchie's detractors speak bitterly of his ambition. They call him czaristic. Clearly, the governor is a man with an eye to the future. Clearly, also, he knows how to use his own resources and those within his reach to his own advantage.

Governor Ritchie's third-term candidacy has been interpreted as the first active step in his campaign for the Democratic nomination in 1928. Most men in his position would have chosen to enter national politics by way of the senate. But the last two Democratic Presidents, Cleveland and Wilson, stepped directly from their respective state houses to the White House, and it has been thought that Ritchie has a similar course in view. For the present, however, his references to the election of 1928 are general and impersonal.

"The next presidential campaign is too far off to forecast its issues definitely," he said, "but I think it will hinge on states' rights and individual liberty. They seem to me to be the logical lines along which the two parties will divide. The Democrats will take their traditional stand as the upholders of the privileges of the state as opposed to the central government.

GRANTSVILLE

The home of Ralph Engle, situated three miles south of Grantsville, was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday morning about 9:30 o'clock.

The fire started from sparks from a burning flue which set fire to the roof and with a very high west wind the flames spread rapidly. Before any assistance could reach there the entire upper story was a mass of flames.

Some of the furniture was saved, namely, bedding, some furniture, two pianos, fruit and various other articles. All the out-buildings nearby were also burned.

The house was built by their grandfather, Samuel Engle, in the early 1830 and was nearly one hundred years old but had been improved with modern improvements and conveniences. It has been inhabited by three generations. The old homestead was the scene of several weddings and a few deaths.

Just about one year ago Mr. Engle's sugar camp was destroyed by fire. The sympathy of their many friends in Grantsville and community was shown by the quick response for help, and the assistance they gave to save what they could.

The loss will be greatly felt by Mr. and Mrs. Engle, as they are getting up in years. They plan on erecting a small house as soon as arrangements can be made.

The Knights of the Cross Sunday school class was entertained at the home of Miss Esther Zehner. The regular business meeting was held and plans for a play, "The Farm Folks," to be given by the members some time in May.

The Junior class of the Grantsville High school gave an enjoyable party to the Seniors on Friday evening. Various games were played and music was furnished by several members.

Mr. Harold Boucher is recovering from the grippe.

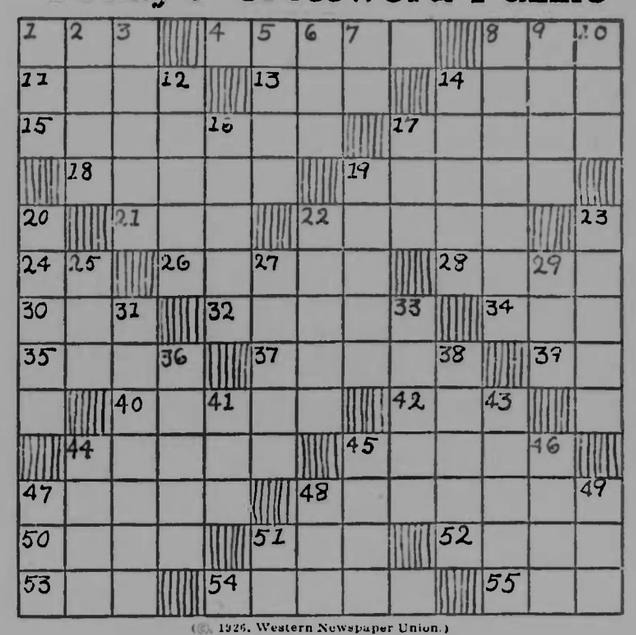
The Monday night Bridge Club was entertained by Miss Ethel Broadwater. The prize was won by Miss Maude Bevans.



Mr. and Mrs Hayward Broadwater and children, of Bell, Pa., spent Sunday with Mrs. Broadwater's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Qurim, Jennings.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Friend, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Friend and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Friend, of Friendsville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Nevin Broadwater recently.

THE GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL FAIR

What Garrett County Citizens Say Of It and What It Means In The Future.

Dr. HENRY W. McCOMAS,
President Garrett County Fair Association, Inc.

"Yes, I think the Fair a wonderful annual event," said Dr. Henry W. McComas, president of the Garrett County Fair Association, the other day. "Stop and think," the genial doctor continued, "of the real purpose and possibilities of this annual get together occasion. Let us have an enlarged conception of the functions of the Fair in community life.

"Primarily, an organization for the advancement of agriculture and of those directly concerned with agriculture—all interested in the community, both rural and urban. Enlarge this conception to induce the idea that the Fair is intended not only to record progress of production but serve as a means for the advancement of every phase of rural life.

"The Fair will mean much to me and to my friends. When it is a progressive Fair exhibits such as agriculture, live stock, machinery and other urban products and public school exhibits will be shown in vast abundance.

"The County Fair should be a general round-up of the economic and social life of the county. It is a splendid time for an inter-community music festival, athletic games, etc.

"Every effort should be made to widen the acquaintance of the people and to strengthen their personal relationships as the basis for true democracy. As leaders in rural life become better acquainted with the purpose and possibilities of the annual economic and social round-up at Fair time and as public appreciation of the things truly educational grow, the Fair will become one of the most powerful stimuli for rural advancement available.

"Then we will gradually discard the elements which have lessened the vaule of the Fair, bring it to a development of real utility and fill it with educational agencies."

DIED.

MRS. SARAH BARLOW.

Mrs. Sarah Barlow, aged 83 years, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Stanton, in Oakland, last Thursday morning at ten o'clock as a result of a fall which she suffered a week previous. Mrs. Barlow was born at Howesville, W. Va., where she married Henry Barlow. He died thirty-four years ago. The aged lady is survived by three sons and two daughters, namely, Messrs. John H., Frederick G. and Charles E. Barlow, all of Okmulgee, Oklahoma, and Mrs. J. M. Stanton, Oakland, and Mrs. M. E. Dolan, of Mineral Wells, Texas. The sons and daughters were all present at the funeral on Saturday morning, services being conducted at the Catholic church at Howesville by the Rev. John F. Eckenrode, of Oakland, the pastor of the deceased lady.

STOCK AND MACHINERY DESTROYED IN BARN FIRE

Property of Wm. W. Frazee, Near Hoyes, Prey to Flames Last Friday Evening.

The barn on the farm of William W. Frazee, near Hoyes, was completely destroyed by fire of undetermined origin last Friday evening, and along with the building two horese, a pony, nine head of cattle, ten sheep, all the machinery, implements and harness, grain and hay were burned, entailing a loss of several thousand dollars, upon which insurance amounting to about $1500 was effective.

In addition to the property above enumerated, a wagon load of fertilizer, which had been placed on the barn floor Friday afternoon for use in the fields the following morning, was also consumed.

The loss of the property to the unfortunate man comes at a most inopportune time, he having recently suffered a broken hip by falling on the ice at his home, being brought to Oakland immediately afterward for treatment and is still at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Naylor, on Second street, where he is now recovering slowly.

American Legion Resents Cowardly Attack Made Upon One of Their Comrades.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Inasmuch as one of our fellow comrades, Mr. Berne Teter, has been viciously attacked by an anonymous letter writer who has threatened him on two occasions since he came to reside among us, one of the letters being sent to the American Legion and others broadcasted thruout our community, all of which were mailed in and around Oakland, we want to announce to the public that we have investigated to our entire satisfaction Comrade Teter's war record and business reputation and the accusations made against him are utterly false and untrue in their entirety, and we as a body denounce the dastardly deed and the writer, who will not be man enough to come out in the open, but hides behind the cloak of cowardice, prejudice and falsity.

THREE FORK RUN

Church services were held here on Sunday night when Rev. Russell delivered the sermon.

Our school and also the Sunday school are progressing very nicely.

Miss Viola Kroll, school teacher, spent Saturday in Cumberland and Sunday at her home in Midland.

Mr. D. O. Harvey and son Leighton were visitors in Oakland last Monday.

Mr. Abe Evans, who has been ill several months, is slowly improving.

CITY COUNCIL ORGANIZED AT MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

With Mrs. E. Z. Tower President of the Body—Appointees of Mayor Fraley Confirmed.

Mayor Fraley submitted a list of appointments for various offices, including policemen, water superintendent, street superintendent and other officers, all being reappointments, and these were confirmed by Council without a dissenting vote.

NORMAN BITTINGER IS RE-CAPTURED BY OFFICERS

Had Escaped From Constables Shartzer and Wagus on April 1st. Wearing Former's Cuffs

Determined to make a clean-up of the Bear Hill Settlement near Jennings, Sheriff Guy O. Yutzy, Constable Shartzer and Deputy Sheriff W. D. Casteel of Garrett county, assisted by Prohibition Agent Harvey, of Cumberland and Constable Wagus, of Allegany county, captured Norman Bittinger, wanted in Cumberland on a charge of passing forged checks at a Frostburg bank some time ago, destroyed 8 gallons of moonshine at one place, a mass of yeast and other ingredients used in the manufacture of the shine at another and at a third point in the woods found and destroyed 800 gallons of mash and then called it a day and came on home, one prisoner, charged with 'shining, in the person of Columbus Bittinger, being brought to Oakland, while Norman Bittinger was taken into Cumberland and turned over to the Sheriff of Allegany county.

Norman Bitinger, it will be remembered, escaped from Constables Wagus and Shartzer after he had been arrested on April 1st, charged with having forged the name of Perry Bowser, which he had cashed in a Frostburg bank. After escaping, by darting into the pit mouth of a mine at Jennings, all trace of Bittinger was lost and his whereabouts were unknown to the officers until a few days ago. His arrest followed but not until at the end of a race of a mile or two through the woods in the vicinity of Bittinger's home. In the race Deputy Casteel proved to be the better man and brought the prisoner in.

The still and other material for the manufacture of the shine in the Bear Hill country, was alleged to be the property of Norman and Columbus Bittinger.

All For Health.

"Here's the latest news from Governor Ritchie" the Health Gnome remarked as he stopped at the State Department of Health for a brief visit. "Two important items," he continued.

"First: His Excellency has issued a proclamation, all signed and sealed, setting aside the first of May as Child Health Day in the sovereign state of Maryland.

"Second:—and pay good heed to this—the Governor will go on the air ("that's official English for broadcasting," he explained,)—on Friday evening before May Day, from station WBAL in Baltimore City, between six and six-thirty, and will tell the grown-ups about health in Maryland, particularly the health of the children.

"I understand," he went on, "that a plan is being worked out so that all the children who will begin going to school next fall, are gotten ready for it—in a healthy way—during the summer. Maybe he will say something about that.

"Beginning with Governor Ritchie as our top-liner, we are going to have an all-star program for Child Health Day in Maryland" the Health Gnome continued, twirling his little green cap. "All sorts of pleasant things have been planned for the children, with some more serious ones for the grown-ups. For the special benefit of the Sandman Circle and other young radio fans, Hazel Knox will broadcast May Day songs and stories, from WBAL, on Thursday evening, April 29, and Monday, May 3, at six o'clock. On other selected days in May there will be stories by leaders from the Playground Athletic League. On Friday afternoon, April 30, nearly every school will have something special in the way of songs, games, plays, sports, or athletic events.

"There is too much for just one day, so we have to begin, as you see, before May Day, and the exercises will continue all through the month, and so far as that is concerned, all through the year. The 'round up' of the children so that they can enter school 100 percent healthy will last all the summer. That is one of the jobs assigned to the grown-ups.

"It does a lot of work to make every day a health day for the children. This is surely my busy week," the Health Gnome remarked, as he gave a final twirl to his jaunty little cap. There was a flash of green and once more he was out of sight.

Clean-Up Week, May 17th to and including May 22nd. Let's have a spotless town.

MARRIED.

Sincell — Staley—Miss Elizabeth Louise Staley, of Frederick, and Mr. Charles Morris Sincell, of Oakland, were married at the home of the bride in Frederick at noon on Tuesday of this week in the presence of the close relatives of the contracting parties and a number of the intimate friends of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Schwallenberg, pastor of the bride's church in Frederick. Miss Cora Staley, sister of the bride, attended her during the ceremony, and a like service was rendered the groom by his brother, Mr. Donald R. Sincell, of Oakland. Following the wedding ceremony a delightful repast was served, after which the twain departed by motor for eastern cities. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Staley, life long residents of Frederick, while the groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, of Oakland. The couple will reside in Fairmont, West Va., where a home has already been provided by the groom who is a traveling representative of C. A. Turner, Inc., hardware dealers of Pittsburgh, Pa. Among those attending the wedding were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sincell, Misses Lillian and Adeline Sincell and Mr. D. R. Sincell, of Oakland; Mr. and Mrs. George L. Sincell, Keyser, W. Va., and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Matheney, of Cumberland.

CRACK TRAIN OF B. & O. WAS A YEAR OLD TUESDAY

National Limited on Time on 722 of 730 Trips Between Washington and St. Louis.

The National Limited, premier all-Pullman train of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, running through Oakland between Washington, D. C., and St. Louis, Mo., celebrated Tuesday its first birthday anniversary with an "on time" record for the year of 98.8 per cent. Out of 730 trips, counting operation in both directions, it was on time 722 times.

From the beginning, the National Limited won recognition in the class of America's best trains and its on-time record was perfect for the first three months from April 27 to July 26. Because of the long distance the train travels from Washington to St. Louis, 890 miles, the record was gratifying to the railroad company. During the first year the National Limited has traveled 649,992 miles. Among its patrons have been many distinguished passengers, including President Coolidge.

The "Lord Baltimore" and the "Philip E. Thomas," the two mountain type locomotives built by the company at its Mount Clare shops in Baltimore, alternate in handling the National Limited over the Allegany Mountain grades without helper engines, which adds to the comfort of travel.

FIRST "AIR PIRACY" CASE

Was Decided in Chicago Friday Against the Government.

The first "air piracy" case in the history of radio in the United States was decided in Chicago on Friday of last week in favor of the Zenith Radio Corporation and its president, Eugene F. McDonald, Jr., against the government in the court of Federal District Judge James H. Wilkerson. The government in criminal action charged the defendants with operating radio apparatus contrary to the license issued to the corporation's station WJAZ. Four specific allegations were made.

The court held that sections one and two of the wireless act of 1912—the only laws existing that apply to broadcasting—were ambigious and that the act itself did not empower the secretary of Commerce with certain discretionary powers which he has allegedly assumed. The decision is considered by attorneys as blanking the administrative rulings of the Secretary of Commerce.

Station WJAZ was licensed to operate one night a week for two hours on the same wave length of 332.4 meters assigned to the General Electric Company station KOA at Denver. Unable to obtain permission for more time, WJAZ wilfully "pirated" a wave length which was set aside for use of Canadian broadcasting stations, and according to the briefs in the case, took this action in the hope of initiating court action and bringing about legislation and clarification of the existing broadcasting laws and regulations. In addition to using the wave length the station also extended its time on the air.

MARYLAND AND WEST VA. REBUILDING OLD HIGHWAY

Northwestern Turnpike Will Give Route From St. Louis East to Winchester, Va.

When the present work on the old Northwestern Turnpike is completed, and much of it is scheduled for the present spring and summer, it will furnish West Virginia and Western Marland with another splendid route east.

The points of importance touched by the Northwestern Road are Parkersburg, Clarksburg, Grafton, Romney and further east Hanging Rock and Capon Bridge.

The road passes through the southern corner of Garrett county, running for a distance of approximately eight miles from the State line between Garrett county, Md., and Preston county, West Va., to the Potomac River at Gormania, West Va., on the east. From Oakland, however, to Red House, the nearest point, a paved road built within the past three years, connects with the Pike, a distance of eight or nine miles.

Starting at St. Louis, Mo., the road comes east by way of Cincinnati, Chillicothe and Athens, Ohio, into Parkersburg, West Va.

Out of Parkersburg the first hitch is fifteen miles of good highway to Pleasant Hill. Then the road strikes seven miles now under construction, and due to be finished by October 1. This brings the motorist to the Nutter Farm in Ritchie county, and then to Ellenboro over thirteen miles of unimproved road. One can, however, take a nineteen mile route over a hard road going through Cairo and Harrisville to Ellenboro. Reaching Ellenboro, the tourist may traverse seventeen miles passing through Pennsboro, to the foot of Jaco Hill. There is a mile of hard road into West Union and once there it is clear sailing on a hard road all the way to Clarksburg.

Leaving Clarksburg and driving on east, there is a mile and a half leading out of Clarksburg over a paved street. Next comes three and a half miles under construction between the Tinplate and Bridgeport, which is scheduled to be completed by July 1. From Bridgeport to Grafton, fifteen miles of fine road offers itself—ten from Bridgeport to Pruntytown being of concrete. From Grafton through Blueville, three and a half miles of paving have been finished, but from Blueville through Fellowsville to Aurora and Macomber there are nineteen miles in various stages of grading. From Macomber to the Maryland line the road is not completed, except that it has been graded and contracts are now being let on fourteen miles covered by this stretch, the specifications stipulating that the work must be completed by November 15, 1926.

Crossing into Maryland two miles from the State line to Red House, at which point connection with the concrete road leading from Oakland and points further north in the county is made, is now being built at a cost of approximatey $66,000. Then comes seven miles from Red House to Gorman and the Potomac River. This stretch of seven miles, while passable is exceedingly rough but solid, and will be rebuilt within the next two years. At the Potomac River at Gorman the motorist again passes into West Virginia and from Gorman to Mount Storm there are seven miles under construction. From Mt. Storm there are twelve miles of graded shale leading into Claysville and after that three miles of paving to New Creek; thence to Romney, nineteen miles of paving and from Romney to Frenchburg there are seven miles of graded shale to Hanging Rock. From Hanging Rock through Capon Bridge to the Virginia State line there are ten miles under construction.

Now in Virginia the motorist finds twelve miles of graded road into the hamlet of Chambersville and on into Winchester in the heart of the beautiful and historic Shenandoah Valley. From Winchester to Washington, D. C., there are, of course, hard roads.

It is said that this is the shortest route across the Alleghenies between the east and middle west, and there is a growing sentiment among West Virginians especially, that this road should be completed as soon as possible.

County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun and the supervising teachers and helping teachers of this county attended a joint conference of the Garrett and Allegany county heads of educational departments held at Cumberland on Friday of last week.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MAY 2, 1925.

GOD'S COVENANT WITH NOAH.

Genesis 5:28; 9:29.

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be a token of a covenant between me and the earth.—Gen.9:13.

GOD AND THE STORM.

"Does God send the storm?" "Is an earthquake or a cyclone evidence of His presence?" Certainly, is the only possible answer to both questions. For if God is working in and through natural forces at all He must be in all of them. Part of the atheism that mars man's conception of the Almighty is this finding Him abroad in a tempest that razes a town, but not in the breeze rippling the grain field. To see Him in the dazzling flash that fires a house but not to see Him in the sunshine that lights a world is to be both blind and cross-eyed, irrational and illogical. Storms are only a fraction of our experience and to have a God of the storm only is to rob the rest of our living of His presence. Many more folks die daily than were lost in the Titanic or in the Lusitania, but a thousand pulpits and ten thousand papers shout the latter as a visitation of God. That was the lesson Elijah had to learn. He had been seeking God in earthquake and storm and fire only and needed to discover Him in the sound of gentle stillness. "Would there have been storms in Eden?" To be sure. There was wind there, and the garden was the earth, under earth conditions, and wind is wind ,whether it blows 9 or 90 miles an hour and God is as much concerned with one as with the other. "But they are used to punish sinners." Yes, and to send saints to glory. "Wasn't it the sin of San Francisco that made the earthquake inevitable?" Well, if it was there are other cities that may look for an early shake-up. The saint who builds his house over a rock fault that geologists have warned him against just because he likes the location and is handy to his business, isn't going to find himself half as well off when the rock slips as the sinner who built elsewhere. Storms that would engulf the world tear the envelope of the sun into ribbons, and there's not a person on its huge circumference and the man in the moon never feels a tornado or needs an umbrella. God sendeth His rain—gentle showers or bursting clouds—upon the just and the unjust, is the verdict of Jesus, and His word should be final in our thinking when attempting to connect the evil of men with the coming of a tempest.

THE MAN AND THE STORM.

That was a rude old world. Its giants were its men of renown. Brawn topped brain and force compelled admiration. Its first example of spiritual endeavor was murdered and the only other outstanding one, Enoch, abandoned it for heaven by his own choice. Noah was different, though he walked with God as consistently as his forebear. But he would not desert his world. He felt himself commissioned to subdue its wickedness as much as its physical fastnesses. He faced those big successful neighbors of his with a challenge to reform, for he was "a preacher of righteousness." He was the early discoverer that we live in a world of law, that causes inevitably bring certain results. Run your world by selfish force and the deluge follows. It has taken many centuries to bring any great acceptance of such a message even after 1914. He is the earliest figure daring to go partner with God in ordering His world according to His rule. He was not a foreteller of doom, but a setter forth of the way of life. He who finds God working through great moral laws speedily reaches the place of knowledge that He works in the same fashion in the physical world. Noah was the first scientist. His ark was for the saving of his family and not for the world. It was his provision for meeting the coming need of his own folks. The same crowd that derides old age pensions, flood insurance, accident policies and other devices of the sort would very likely have joined company with the men who laughed at Noah and his strange proceeding. The world might be headed toward the inevitable and against which every power would be set in protest but in the midst of it he who "provides not for his own household hath denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliver." This man faced the storm and shared God's way of working toward the mastery of all storms.

AFTER THE STORM.

A moral squint will bring mechanical inaccuracy. A rotten world will never build a storm-proof ship—only righteousness can do it. Noah built with God and his work stood the test. If any of his neighbors followed his example their boat went down in the swirl. When the storm passed Noah was still there, vindicating the rule of God and the reign of law. The first thing that emerges as the sunlight flooded the dripping world was the bow of blessing marking the marriage of sun and shower. Earth and sky are wedded in it, proclaiming that man and God may become partners in transforming both into our Father's house. Sharers of all the riches of all the worlds each may give joyous comradeship to the other and read God's message of hope and pledge of His care in the sky's expanse. It was not the earliest bow, but Noah was the first man to understand God's meaning by it. There was advance in relationship between man and his Maker. There was the beginning of covenants between God and His child. Righteous men on one side and God on the other side made a working agreement affecting the world on which both were that assured perpetuity and the sky showed the seal of the Almighty to the contract. There emerged the consciousness of living in a friendly universe, that the elements that threatened to overwhelm were just as ready to float one to safetly if one was obedient to their laws. It marked the beginning of advance in the harnessing of earth forces for the help of man.

At the dawn of this new day Noah placed an altar. It is its first appearance, though not its first use. Probably it was the first one built up and it marks the march of an institution down the centuries holding in germ all the temples and churches that have blessed mankind across all the years. It was to worshipping man that the sky became vocal and the heavens found a voice. And that is the only sort of folk to whom God speaks today as certainly as it was in that beginning when he learned that there was a land of beginning again for those who gave God rightful place in their living.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Another light fall of snow came Monday night, which we hope is the last for the present spring.

We have with us now nearly all the varieties of spring birds which greatly enlivens the Park, especially as day begins to dawn.

As the weather permits the grounds surrounding buildings are being raked and vegetation is showing signs of renewed life.

Mr. Ami Rodeheaver is still in a very critical condition.

Mrs. Gauer, who has been in a very critical condition, is slightly improved.

Little Miss Reedy, who has been in the Allegany Hospital at Cumberland, is now at her home in the Park, but is unable to walk and will be for some time to come. The people of this community are sorry for her and for her parents, as they have had a long tedious fight to save her broken leg.

Mr. Robert Moomaw, the street commissioner of the Parrk, has certainly made a fine improvement in two sections of the walk leading across the glade to the railway station.

The annual committee has appointed a sturdy, heavy-weight policeman. It is hoped that he can stop the pollution of the nice stream flowing down through the Park as well as some other nuisances in and adjoining the Park grounds as he cooperates with the county and State officers.

Dr. and Mrs. T. D. Richards are now in their home here and are engaged in putting it into condition for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Turney are now occupying their cottage here until they find a place of residence in Terra Alta, where Mr. Turney is employed.

Rev. W. E. Dean and children returned to their home at Scenery Hill, Pa., on Friday following the interment of Mrs. Dean's remains in the Oakland cemetery.

On Thursday last the U. B. church at this place was crowded with friends who had assembled to pay their last mark of respect to the memory of the late Mahlon Glotfelty, who was buried from that edifice after the service. We offer our sincere condolences to the bereaved family.

Mrs. George Glotfelty and Mrs. Hubert Bowman spent Monday evening with Mrs. John Glotfelty.

This Saturday evening, at 7:30 the Rock Lodge school will give a pound party. The plan is for every one to bring a pound of something good to eat. A. J. Merrill Gives His Views on Prohibition and Takes a Rap at those Who, in Office, Deride the Eaforcement of the Law.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Please publish my views and experiences of the whiskey question. I will say that I believe I am one of the oldest woman suffragists in the country. Some 30 or 35 years ago I said that politics would never be honest until women got to vote. That women would not sell their vote for a drink of whiskey as I knew men did. Now I am sorry to say that they betrayed my confidence, particularly Mrs. Mary Norton, New Jersey, and Mrs. Julius Kahn, California. Would those women like drinking husbands? I think not. Then why do those women want to force whiskey on other women's husbands? I understand that these two women are actively aiding John Philip Hill. They are certainly associating with a dandy. Who is Mr. Hill? Is he a law maker or a law breaker? Oh, yes, he is a man that made his wine and cider and defied the Government to come and arrest him. Now isn't he a fine man to sit in Capital to make laws and refuse to obey them himself! Now, I think, there are three classes of business men back of J. P. Hill—the brewer, the wholesale whiskey people and the saloon people. I think they are men that furnish the money for Hill and Bruce and two or three others. This is why they squawk so loud.

Now, I want to say what I saw one Sunday about ten years ago. I was in Baltimore and a friend of mine asked me to go down to the Bay with him to a park. So we went about eight miles and got off the car at his park as he called it. There were a couple hundred women and men drinking beer. Men selling and handing it out the same as on week days with other gambling and red window houses. Coming back to Baltimore, I said to him, "How is it that the sheriff don't come out here and arrest these people?" He said, "We know the man we ellect." This is one of the whiskey people's state rights. I further want to say that the God fearing Senator and Congressman don't need to fear the general public voters for voting dry. That is my experience traveling and talking with the common people. I see in the paper that Mr. Bruce has exploded, saying that prohibition has blighted human happiness. Who does Mr. Bruce mean when he says these words? The whiskey people? He further says the churches are now in politics. Who are the Christian people working for? God and God only. Who is Mr. Bruce and his whiskey gang working for? Let his gang and the public answer for themselves. The whole civilized world is watching to see who has the most power, the Government or the whiskey gang.

WHEN THE VOTERS ABDICATE.

President Coolidge indulged in no rhetorical exaggeration when he described political indifference, as evidenced by abstention from voting at important elections, as a more serious danger to the American system of government than are revolutionary violence and professional crime. Society is certain vigorously to repel direct attacks upon the foundations of civilization, but insidious undermining of the principle of self-government may pass unnoticed for years.

The evil discussed by the President in his address before the Daughters of the American Revolution is comparatively new in the United States. Therefore it is of the utmost importance to ascertain its true causes. Organized efforts to bring qualified voters to the polls are not unsuccessful, but they should not be depended upon unduly as a permanent solution of the problem. Systematic education is even more necessary, as Mr. Coolidge suggests.

It is imperative to enforce the simple truth that the result of widespread failure to vote for candidates and the policies they represent must be the destruction of genuinely representative government. If disinterested citizens fail to vote, selfish groups seeking special privileges are likely to capture and use the government as an instrumentality for antisocial purposes. If the public does not act at the polls it does not act at all. The only chance of effective public expression in a representative system is at primaries and elections.

It is impossible to believe that any considerable portion of the American electorate desires to ahandon representative government. Yet many voters are doing precisely that by failing to exercise the political rights of citizenship.

HAS OUR TOWN A FUTURE?

Some parents have no plan for the lives of their children and some men do not intelligently plan their own lives. They just "grow up" or they just drift.

Some boys take the first job open to them. The job is not looked upon as a part of a life program, but merely as a source of income.

Many towns are likewise shiftless and drift along without a program. Years ago this was the way of most towns. Town planning was never even suggested by leaders. Citizens never faced a situation until it was forced upon them.

But the old method is wasteful in every way, wasteful of human values as well as of money. Today progressive towns look ahead into the future and seek to plan for coming generations. In some of the larger cities city-planning experts are called in and money is spent freely for surveys and programs.

Some towns are physically ugly, even though they have had a century or more in which to grow beautiful. Because no one cared and no one planned, many an old town is as unattractive as a western mining or oil town that has sprung up over night.

Some towns lack in a high standard of culture or a high standard of morals. Some towns have no recreation standards and are dull and stupid. Some towns are unbalanced in their development.

Mere financial prosperity may come to some towns in spite of indifferent citizens. Location and natural resources sometimes make prosperity inevitable.

But those things that make life worth while for all of us are never the result of Nature's bounty or of accident. The blessings bought by the school, the church, the library and the newspaper, come because men plan for them and sacrifice to make them possible.

Town development does not come over night. It usually takes one generation to make any distinct change. Hence our programs must be long-time programs.

Holidys offer an opportunity to develop ideals. New Year's with its hospitality; Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays, Flag Day, Memorial Day, Fourth of July and Armistice Day, Easter and Thanksgiving and Christmas, Arbor Day and Labor Day, St. Valentine's Day and even Hallowe'en offer opportunities to cultivate worthy sentiments.

If a few people care and plan and work ,our town has a future.

BETTER HOMES.

"Better Homes in America" is an educational institution for public service initiated in 1922 by Mrs. Wm. B. Meloney. It was organized on a National basis in December, 1923, with Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, as its president. The aim of "Better Homes in America" is to make convenient, attractive and wholesome homes, accessible to all American families.

The means to this end are educational publications, "Better Homes" demonstrations and research. The movement is Nation-wide in scope. The central organization is at National headquarters in Washington, D. C. Demonstrations are coducted entirely by voluntary local committees in the cities, towns and rural communities all over the country.

The local "Better Homes" campaign consists of publicity, lectures, discussions, meetings and exhibits. This latter is being well done by the department of home economics of the local high school by posters made by the class in this department of instruction.

The purpose of "Better Homes" demonstrations is this ,to bring to the attention of the community all that modern methods and inventions puts at the service of home makers of modern means; to show the best that each community can do; to promote and strengthen wholesome normal family life. "Better Homes" demonstrates what is basically good—"Better Homes" is educational and non-commercial.

CONTESTS FOR SUPREMACY IN BOTH PARTIES IN MARYLAND WILL APPARENTLY BE PERSONAL

Democrats Are Lining Up As Ritchie and Anti-Ritchie, While The Republicans Are Divided Into Weller and Anti-Weller Camps—State Road Employes a Powerful Instrument

(From The Marylander)

There are innumerable indications that the coming contests, in fact the contests which are already at hand, will be almost devoid of real partisanship, that they will be almost devoid of factionalism in the usual sense of the word—for there is not much partisanship evident, and the old-time, vicious factionalism, is also largely missing at the present time in both parties.

The contests for supremacy, in the two parties, will, apparently be personal—for the Democrats are lining up as Ritchie and anti-Ritchie, and the various factions are split up on that line, while the Republicans are lined up, regardless of the usual factional considerations, as Weller and anti-Weller, and are already engaged in vigorous warfare for and against the continued supremacy of the senior senator. And on these personal lines the voters of the two parties are now beginning to line up for the primary struggles, which bid fair to exceed in bitterness anything heretofore known in the State since the present direct primary law became effective, many years ago.

And this non-partisan phase of this unusual condition of affairs bids fair to continue after the primaries have been held, and the candidates of both parties have been safely nominated. For the voters of the whole City—and to some extent the entire State, are apparently preparing, in an unusually large measure, to vote their individual preferences, rather than cast their ballots for the regularly named candidates, especially so far as the leading nominees are concerned, and party allegiances have been so widely disrupted that there is no telling at the present time what the real situation will be when the election takes place on November second.

The renomination of Senator Weller is so nearly an assured fact that it is looked upon as a practical certainty. Those who are opposed to him are rapidly realizing that such is the case and are openly asserting that they intend to carry the fight to the polls in November and do not expect to finish it until he is defeated. They say, without any mystery whatever, that it is their intention to work against and vote against him regardless of the fact that should he he defeated the result would probably be the transfer of the control of the U. S. Senate to the Democrats and thereby greatly add to the troubles of President Coolidge in securing the adoption of his plans and policies by the legislative branch of the Government, and would therefore seriously interfere with his administrative program.

It is a strange feature of the political situation and is unusual in Maryland where there have for many years been more than one outstanding figure in each party. The nearest parallel to it was the rather extended period of time when the late Senator Gorman dominated the Democratic party—and even in the Gorman days there were men who almost measured up to him in influence in his own party and among his enemies several men who were his superiors in ability if not in influence—but today Governor Ritchie is so far in the lead in power and fame that it will take the most extraordinary effort on the part of his large number of opponents to make even a fair showing in the fight they are preparing to wage against him in the primaries—for there is no doubt of the fact that he now has the best cards in the deck to play against his opponents and unless there is a new deal and a change of hands, he will probably win out in the primaries.

He has what is now the most powerful instrument that can be used in a primary contest, in the control of the State Roads organization, under the management of the fairly shrewd and thoroughly unscrupulous chairman—with ten millions of dollars to spend this year in the counties of the State. Under the direction of the Road Commission will be a fair sized army of energetic men scattered around every precinct, from one end of Maryland to the other—all of whom will work for Ritchie—a force in the hands of an able manipulator superior to that of any other single force in the field.

He will have the Public Service Commission back of him, which will secure the support of all the Public Utilities organizations, and he will have an army of other officials, all of whom owe their jobs to him, and all of whom will work with a will to win the fight—all of which forces will greatly strengthen his position in the primary contest, but may prove to be a burden too heavy to bear, when the real fight takes place before the whole people—where every vote counts, in November.

Against the Governor is a decided and forceful sentiment, but unorganized at the present time. What it will be able to do in the remaning four months before the primaries, it is hard to foretell, it may gain such a sweep before September that it will overcome all those who oppose it, even the powerful forces which are bound together by official ties, and it may fail—the outcome is now an unknown decree of fate. But the opponents of the administration are not without hope.

And overshadowing all, is the well-known fact that this is not a partisan year—and there are not a few signs that all the usual politico-mathematical calculations may fail in both parties. The wets and the drys are militant in both parties, many of the older and really conservative members of both parties are silently sullen, and there may be surprises of a tragic sort in store for all. Even the most observant of the usually well-informed are confessedly at sea.

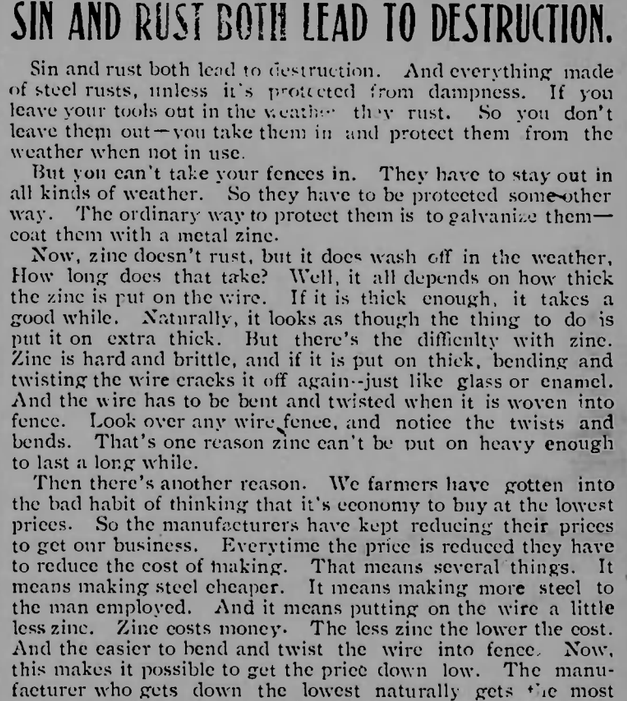
SIN AND RUST BOTH LEAD TO DESTRUCTION.

Sin and rust both lead to destruction. And everything made of steel rusts, unless it's protected from dampness. If you leave your tools out in the weather they rust. So you don't leave them out—you take them in and protect them from the weather when not in use.



But you can't take your fences in. They have to stay out in all kinds of weather. So they have to be protected some other way. The ordinary way to protect them is to galvanize them—coat them with a metal zinc.

Now, zinc doesn't rust, but it does wash off in the weather. How long does that take? Well, it all depends on how thick the zinc is put on the wire. If it is thick enough, it takes a good while. Naturally, it looks as though the thing to do is put it on extra thick. But there's the difficulty with zinc. Zinc is hard and brittle, and if it is put on thick, bending and twisting the wire cracks it off again--just like glass or enamel. And the wire has to be bent and twisted when it is woven into fence. Look over any wire fence, and notice the twists and bends. That's one reason zinc can't be put on heavy enough to last a long while.

Then there's another reason. We farmers have gotten into the bad habit of thinking that it's economy to buy at the lowest prices. So the manufacturers have kept reducing their prices to get our business. Everytime the price is reduced they have to reduce the cost of making. That means several things. It means making steel cheaper. It means making more steel to the man employed. And it means putting on the wire a little less zinc. Zinc costs money. The less zinc the lower the cost. And the easier to bend and twist the wire into fence. Now, this makes it possible to get the price down low. The manufacturer who gets down the lowest naturally gets the most business. It helps the farmer buy cheap fence. So far so good.

NEW GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND MAY BE A REPUBLICAN —QUESTION OF WET OR DRY NOT THE SOLE ISSUE

Writer Asserts Successful Candidate Must Not Straddle On Any Issues—State's Present Governor Is Wet By Convicition—Points to Luxurious Growth of Job Holders In Maryland and Says Expenses of Running the State Government Are Appalling in the Extreme.

By T. G. POWNELL.

Maryland will elect a Governor this year, and the contest for the nomination is unusually lively. The first Governor was elected in 1776 and fifty-three have been elected since then. The politics of the Governors have been Federalist, Whig, American, Democratic and Republican. The Democrats have had twenty-five Governors and the Republicans two—Lowndes, from 1896 to 1900, and Goldsborough, from 1908 to 1912.

In 1895, the Democratic party was hopelessly divided and Mr. Lowndes being a man of clean life and high ideals, won, notwithstanding the normal registered Democratic majority in Maryland was greater than it is now. His administration was entirely free from scandal and eminently successful. He was defeated in 1899 and the Democrats had three successive administrations. Flushed with power, they committed many excesses and dissatisfaction was rife which culminated in revolt at the polls in 1911 and Phillips Lee Goldsborough was elected.

His administration was able and dignified, but the strife among the Democrats subsided and he was succeeded by a Democrat in 1916 and the State has since been in the hands of the Democrats, who are now confronted by a situation very like that of the Lowndes campaign in 1895.

The distribution of patronage is rarely a source of strength to the dominant party. Three Democratic administrations have multiplied the number of disappointed place-seekers and mutterings of dissatisfaction are heard in every county.

The determination of Governor Ritchie to stand for a third term is not relished by many Democrats who desire him to become a candidate for the United States Senate. They point to Grant's third term fight for President, which came near turning the country over to the Democrats, and nobody will ever know whether Mr. Hayes was elected or not. It is charged that the Governor is jeopardizing the interests of his party to gratify his own ambitions, and this view is held by many of the most influential Democrats in the State; but this is among the least of the weak spots of his armor.

The multiplicatoin of boards and of commissions and the consequent increase in State employes, followed by pyramiding expenses, are among the many real sources of his weakness.

Some Figures.

These are some of the figures representing salaries paid annually to the employes of the various departments:

Public Service Commission heads, $42,000.
Motor Vehicle Commission, $15,000.
State Insurance Commissioner, $13,000.
Auditing, $7,000.
Advisory Board Parole, $6,000.
Purchasing Bureau, $12,000.
Picture Censors, $7,000.
Accident Commission, $26,000.
Prison Control, $24,000.

In addition there are more than forty other like organizations, with clerks, stenographers, "shofers," bosses, janitors and expanding expense accounts. The job making organization has had a most luxurious growth and the situation is one for grave concern.

It is no wonedr that the old-fashioned Gorman Democrats shake their heads and exclaim, "Is there no end to it?" The wet shoestring, beginning at New York and ending at Virginia and extending inland less than two hundred miles, has led many Maryland people into error. The issue in this state this year, is not, "Is he wet or is he dry."—but will the soring costs of government and the multiplication of jobs be stopped?" Will self-government be restored to the couties? Will the affairs of Allegany County, for example, be restored to the County Commissioners? The annual expenditures for this county are, $1,500,000 and local authorities have control of less than 10 per cent of it, and the remainder is disbursed by mandate from Annapolis, and the people, democrats and repuhlicans, do not like it.

The Governor is honestly wet by precept and example, and his frankness about it is commendable but his plea for state rights and "back to the Constitution," is a hollow mockery, when he, holding an office next in importance to that of president, refuses to lend a gram of influence to uphold that great paper. Nobody can criticize him for saying the 18th Amendment should not have been, and the Volstead Act should not have been, but straight thinking men, wet or dry, expect him to say that law is law, and should be enforced. They expect him to remember that he solemnly promised to support the "Constitution of the United States." He knew when he last took the oath of office, that the 18th Amendment was a part of the Constitution and if he had qualms about enforcing that Amendment, he should have said so then and there. This is not the view of the reformers and "uplifters," but of that part of the citizenry of this state, which stands for decency, right living and against all forms of lawlessness.

The Republicans have a better chance to elect a governor this year than they had in 1895 and 1911, so far as the sins of omission and commission of the Democratic party is concerned, but they, like the Democrats, have men within their ranks, who would crucify the party for their own aggrandizement. They cannot win by flirting with the wets, drys and reformers, nor by coddling the anti-amendment forces and bootleggers, nor by straddling. Their candidate must be a daring, clean, out-spoken, superior man, who will declare that the lawlessness, which has debauched the state, the multiplication of job-holders, and mounting costs of government, must cease. There are many such men witbin the Republican party, but whether the self-seeking, place-holding men in control of the party, will choose, or even desire such a man, is questionable. I doubt it.

Fresher Than The Fresh

IN THESE days when advertising slogans, trite and otherwise, stare at us in the subway and trolley, meet us at every turning of the road, spring at us from the pages of our daily papers—even distract our attention, from an adjoining column, just as the hard-boiled flapper is about to become a blushing bride—new slogans are apt to receive scant interest and to be dismissed as far-fetched or as mere advertising "bunk."

We are fed up on them! They tell us when to "re-tire," follow us "in our sleep," and, as we butter our morning toast, remind us of the great hereafter. They jeer at us on our way to the dentist, with their bold claims as to how we might have made that dreaded visit unnecessary. They urge us to buy soap that will preserve the peaches-and-cream complexion of our long-lost youth. They tell us how to cure everything but housemaid's knee. And, any morning, we expect to see that lack supplied, in glaring letters on some subway poster.

Now there is a new slogan—"Fresher than the Fresh"—which makes as much impression upon the majority of us as do the license-numbers on the rapidly passing automobiles. Nevertheless, to those who have given the food question some thought, this catch-phrase carries more than a modicum of truth.

Take peas, for example. If we could step into our kitchen-garden, gather them from the vines and cook them at once, nothing could be fresher; although this, of course, would be possible only during one season of the year. But here is what really happens, since so few of us can have a kitchen garden. First the farmer handles them, while picking, loading and conveying them to a place where they are packed in car-load lots. Then they are shipped to the city, probably incurring numerous delays en route. The jobber next handles them, and from him they go to the green-grocer, in whose store they may lie for some time before we happen along and purchase them. By now, there is little left of their pristine freshness. As a matter of fact, a great part of the peas which are served to us in the winter as fresh peas really come from the Western part of Mexico, along the gulf of lower California. So it is easy to see that these foods, when served on the American table, are not fresh.

Canned peas are really fresher than fresh peas. For, in the case of canned peas, the peas are gathered, vines and all, at a time when the peas contain the greatest food value. They are immediately conveyed to the viniery, where they are threshed out by machinery. After being washed, they are graded. They then go into the cans, where they are sufficiently cooked to preserve them. All this is accomplished within twelve hours; so that the canned peas, when they come to the table, are within twelve hours of being absolutely fresh, while the so-called fresh peas undergo many days of deterioration and decay before reaching the consumer.

Here, then is one advertising slogan which tells the absolute truth. Canned foods are fresher than the fresh. For there has been nothing whatever to detract from the freshness which was theirs when they went into the can. On the contrary, no deterioration is possible while in the can, because of the complete exclusion of all air, and because of the perfect sterilization which has taken place.

The housewife, today, is finding that a great industry has provided her with a marvelous substitute for the kitchen-garden, supplying her with practically every fruit and vegetable in any part of the world.

Just around the Corner

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want — and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper —are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.

IF you are one of those who have written for The Charles William Stores' Catalog of big bargains and have not received it we are sorry. The reason is, an amazing demand for this book has exhausted our supply. We earnestly ask you to borrow a catalog from one of our customers—there are many in your community—and we are sure they will oblige you . . . and us.

Of our old customers we ask please help us and your less fortunate neighbors by loaning them your catalog for awhile.

We could not foresee how great the demand would be for this catalog and as our Special Midsummer Sale Catalog will be published so soon—May 15th, it seems hardly practicable to print a fresh supply of the big book before the special sale catalog is out.

We have all the big bargains that have made our catalog so popular and created the huge demand, but unfortunately we have no more books. However, if our old customers and new ones will co-operate with us they will render a real service to us and to their neighbors.

We thank you.

SIX HURT IN ACCIDENT ON NATIONAL ROAD MONDAY

Machine Practically Demolished When It Hit Pole After Steering Gear Jammed

A very disastrous auto accident occurred at three o'clock Monday afternoon on Long Stretch, four or five miles east of Grantsville, on the National Road, when a large motor car was almost completely demolished and more or less seriously injured the six occupants who were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel LaDato, their three children, Margaret, aged nine; Rebecca, aged seven, and Jean, aged two years, and Harden Clark, a friend of the LaDato family.

The party was en route from Frostburg to Donora, Pa. When the car reached the point where the accident occurred, about two hundred yards east of Long Stretch school house, it is thought that the steering gear became jammed or broke and the machine was ditched, the car turning completely over and crashed into a telegraph pole, breaking it off about twelve feet above the surface of the ground. All of the occupants of the car, with the exception of Mr. LaDato were thrown clear of the wreckage.

The injured people were picked up by a passing motorist from Jersey City and taken into Frostburg where they received medical and surgical assistance at the office of a local physician and later taken to the Miners' Hospital in that town.

Mrs. LaDato and Mr. Clark were more seriously injured than the others in the party. The former sustained a cut on her head which required a number of stitches to close and also injuries to her side and possibly internal injuries of a serious nature. Clark had his leg broken in two places and also suffered several broken ribs.

Mr. LaDato was a former resident of Lonaconing as was also Mr. Clark. The party had spent Sunday in Frostbaurg as the guest of friends.

Playing the Health Game.

A message to the boys and girls of Maryland on "Playing the Health Game" from Secretary of Commerce Hoover, has been relayed to the "kids" in the State through the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. Here is the message:

"When I was a youngster it never occurred to our parents or teachers that the kids themselves must take the most important part in their own growing up in order to be strong and healthy. Moreover, in those times the world knew nothing about why contagious diseases were contagious; nothing about why and what food made for strong brains, legs or lungs.

"Our resolute mothers fought off illness, stuffed our tummies and hoped for the best from accidents in the swimminghole, from foul balls and slimbed trees.Many kids were thought to be condemned to be perpetually weak. To grow up normal and strong was mostly luck plus mother's effort and prayers.

"But since then medical science has discovered a lot of things. To know how to stop much contagious disease at its origin and to stop it from spreading. We know the rules by which to keep healthy from teeth to toes. We know a lot about safety methods to prevent accidents.

"We know that to have and to hold a good job and to be a good citizen we must have good health. We know know all this can he helped by play. It does not abolish joy or adventure."

He closes his message by saying that to win good health the youngster has to learn to follow the health rules that the doctors, the health autorities, mother and the teachers can not serve as his proxies; that it is up to each kid to play his or her part of the health game fairly and squarely. He also has something to say about this being a good time of the year for the grown-ups to consider their responsibility in regard to the health of the youngsters. But as an equally well known authority has remarked, "that's another story."

B. & O. EMPLOYES PLAN TO FARM ON COMPANY LAND

Many Requests Made for Permits to Raise Vegetables on Unused Property

Hundreds of the employes of the Cumberland division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad have requested H. R. Laughlin, superintendent, for permission to utilize sections of the company's right of way, which is not now in use, for truck farming.

For several years past the company has permitted its employes to grow vegetables on the unused right of way on the Cumberland division, the privilege having been inaugurated during the World War when the employes called the patches of land "war gardens." After the war they were called "victory gardens," and they plan this year to call them "peace gardens."

Not only do the employes benefit financially by the use of the unused right of way, but the corn, the tomatoes, potatoes and other vegetables in cultivation "brushes" up many otherwise unsightly stretches of land on the system.

Reports from employes who had truck gardens in the past indicate that many grew enough vegetables to provide for their families not only during the summer months but through the winter period as well. It has saved many of them large sums of money which ordinarily would go to outside sources, thus depleting their bank accounts and taking much of their savings.

This Contributor Gives Her Endorsement to A. J. Merrill's Letter Appearing in Last Week's Republican.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I saw and read Mr. A. J. Merrill's communication in last week's Republican in which he gave his views and experiences with the whiskey question. I was greatly interested in the article. If he i snot a minister of the Gospel I think he should be. We should have more men like Mr. Merrill at the head of our government and in the business world. I think if our ministers and others would come to the front as Mr. Merrill has and give the boys and girls who never go to church something to read it might do our country a great deal of good.

I have been a reader of The Republican all of my life and think it a very clean paper.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

My Idea of a County Fair and What It Means to the Citizens of the Entire Community.

By D. E. ORENDORF,
Field Secretary and General Manager of the Garrett County Fair.

"I think the County Fair should be considered and made a homecoming affair," said Mr. Orendorf, who has devoted much of his time in recent weeks to the interests of the Fair to be held in the fall of the year 1926. "It should be a sort of a family reunion, so to speak, of all the people in the county and of those who once lived in the county and now live near enough to attend. This should be one of the main objects in attending the Fair—to meet and greet old friends, renew acquaintances and make new ones. This in itself should afford more pleasure and genuine enjoyment than all of the amusements furnished by carnivals and the like. Aside from meeting old friends, making new acquaintances, etc., and probably first in importance of a county fair is the 'educational feature.' Many new and useful ideas may be gotten from the different exhibitors and their exhibits. The exhibits, however, whether farm products, live stock, poultry or whatever department they may be in, should be of the very best quality, variety and type produced in the county. Anything that does not possess merit should not be allowed exhibited or shown. If the animals or articles exhibited are better than the average it stimulates and encourages better production along all lines. Every one who shares in the county fair is bound to learn a great deal in the course of his efforts. He trades ideas with other exhibitors and goes home richer in thought. He discovers where the best seed, finest eggs and different breeds of livestock in the county may be obtained. He finds what farmers are in need of and what he may have to sell. From the producers' standpoint, it is the easiest, cheapest and best method of advertising what he has to sell. In no other way could he get before the people, in or out of the county, what he has for sale with so little ease and at so little cost.

"Educational and commercial exhibits should be encouraged and as many secured as possible. If properly shown and demonstrated they will prove very profitable, both to the exhibitor and to the observer. A good fair is a county booster. When a county has a good fair it advertises itself. Through the county press, posters and through the exhibits at the fair itself the very best kind of advertising is obtained each year. The county becomes known as a fine place for farming, a splendid place to have a home and a good place to come for worthwhile ideas, products and men.

"Much more might be said about the advantages of a county fair, but I shall not say more on the subject at this time except that I hope ALL the people of Garrett county will take an interest in this our annual Fair and make it the very best that we have ever had."

Resolution.

Inasmuch as the Almighty God has seen fit to call Brother Mahlon Glotfelty from our midst to a brighter world, we, the members of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ feel that in his death our class has lost a faithful friend and defender of Christian work, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That while painfully lamenting our loss we bow with reverent submission to the will of Almighty God; our thoughts and best wishes are with his children and we extend them our deepest sympathy. Be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and be published in our county papers and also in the Religious Telescope.

ABRAM AND THE KINGS.

Genesis 14:1-24. Read 11:27; 14:24; Hebrews 11:8-12.

In all these things we are more than conquerors thru him that loved us. —Romans 8:37.

THE EMIGRANT.

It is not where a life is born, but what the man does with it that counts. Into the heart of heathenism in the Euphrates valley there came the baby boy whose name was Abram. There were three boys in the house of Terah until one tragic day when Haran died, leaving his children, Lot, Milcah and Iscah to be cared for. Nahor settled one part of the problem by marrying his niece, Milcah, and the fate of her sister is unknown, but possibly it was in the harem of some Chaldean. But death unsettled the family. Was it because there was no answer to their plea at the gate of a grave that they grew dissatisfied with the faith in the moon goddess of Ur? Was God's message writ in tears? It often is and it may have been so here, for they packed their goods and essayed the journey at the call. However it was they obeyed, which is the ultimate test of any life. They were emigrants, leaving behind the civilization that has left its ruined cities, libraries and laws to be uncovered by the seekers of today. They turned their backs upon the storied splendors of a mighty empire that they might worship as they willed in a strange land—one that they knew not. It was a great adventure at the behest of conscience and Abram became the leader of the long line of pioneers who have subdued wildernesses on every continent.

The company reached Haran and found themselves in a fertile section, along the trade route between East and West, so that business made its appeal to shrewd old Terah. They might as well delay a bit while profits were good and the days stretched into weeks. The call of the frontier was dulled by the chaffer of trading and presently it was no longer heard. It was the acceptance of a lower good than that for which they had broken with the old life in Ur. Many a man does it today. A fine young leader turned aside a perfectly good opening. He still is active in the Church, gives generously, supports its activities, but his life is on a distinctly lower level than before. It was the tragedy of accepting the place on the plateau instead of pressing on to the heights. Again death stirred the spirit of the pioneer and tears washed away the obstruction across the great divide. Abram found his soul and fared forth, "not knowing whither he went," but knowing why—it was the new heard call of God.

THE FRIEND.

He had rare capacity for friendship. It was not a lonely journey for not many years later he could muster 318 fighting men born in his own house, so that it was the immigration of a clan rather than a single individual. He was in company with Mamre, Aner and Eschol at the time of the foray of the lesson. He had taken Lot with him and when they returned from Egypt with extensive herds, so much so that pasturage was difficult to find, there came the struggle that threatened dissention in the face of Canaan. Internal trouble spelled outside disaster. Abram was clear-headed enough to see the truth of it but he was sacrificial enough also to prevent a breach. That is something that the world is slow to learn. At Locarno the powers of Europe plunged into the unknown land of national brotherhood but when they reached Geneva and the strife between conflicting interests arose there was no Abram to suggest a surrender road except Sweden, and her voice was that of one crying in the wilderness. The internal cleavage foretells world peril. Churches and communities are of the same sort where denominational and industrial differences plunge the entire body into chaos for the exploitation of every evil force desirous of doing it. Abram said the keeping of friendship is worth any cost. That Lot took advantage of his spirit does not discount it as a world solvent. Abram kept the peace with man and God and was friend to both. And from him earth took a new beginning and the morning star hung its signal in the night sky of that ancient day.

THE CONQUEROR.

There came the war in the plains where on the hills there had been peace. That's just as true of the soul altitudes. A panting runner flung himself before the old sheik and shouted out the story of Lot's disaster and the cities' defeat. It was no concern of the pioneer. Lot had chosen the plain with its peril and was merely getting the pay for his bargain. And he had shown scant enough consideration for "Easy" uncle. Why should he risk his skin in repairing the damage his nephew had brought upon himself? Because he was like God and Calvary was part of his life. He won his victory over the pillagers because he won it first over his spirit. He refused to be mean though others might treat him so. And he did not send his servants—he went himself and faced the risk there was in rescuing the prisoners. He did not fight for himself, but when another's need called he sprang swiftly into the fray.

THE DEVOTEE.

Abram kept his altar fires alight. Coming back laden with the fruits of the victory he paused at the entrance to his hills and bowed his head in reverence at the prayer of the priest and received his blessing with high joy. It was a revealing hour. Five kings of the plain had been swept into the net of the invades. Four kings had conquered them and now after a hurried pursuit that had taken three or four days Abram had gained a decisive victory. In an incursion into the unknown world he had shown his ability to match himself with its best and beat them at their own game. And his God had given him his success. Who wouldn't be a bit cheesty under the circumstances? But now he meets one of an alien race—a strange figure in the record whose pedigree and posterity are unwritten—and admits his claim to knowing Abram's God more intimately even than himself. Not in the art of war but upon the chosen field of Abram's spirit this other man makes his challenging claim. Would the pioneer share his God? Was his faith big enough to include an alien in the circle of intimates with the Almighty? Here is a real battle upon the soul's own field. And gloriously Abram won it. Modestly he stepped aside and gave preferment to Melchizedec whose spirit of kindliness and service he recognized and acknowledged by his gifts. Guarding the stores of his comrades carefully he swept the whole spoil back into the hands of its owners—his reward was in the spirit, not in the spoil.

NEGLECT OF VOTING

Have one-half of the American people lost interest in politics and the government of their country? The figures show that fully one-half of the qualified voters fail to go to the polls. In his recent address on this subject President Coolidge pointed out that in the five presidential elections between 1880 and 1896 no less than 80 per cent of the qualified voters participated, but that in the elections of 1920 and 1924 less than 50 per cent voted. As for the Senatorial elections of 1922 "in not a single case did the successful candidate receive anywhere near a majority of the total possible vote;" and in some instances Senators who were chosen by a vote of 10 per cent or less. Such a state of affairs is the more remarkable because it is peculiar to this country among self-governing nations. Canada and Australia still maintain a votin gaverage of 70 per cent of the electorate, and even Italy shows 64 per cent. In the British parliamentary election of 1922 no less than 82 per cent of the eligible voted. Further comparative statistics show the same. There is good reason for the warning uttered by the President, as follows:

"If we are to maintian the principles that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed; if we are to have any measure of self-government; if the voice of the people is to rule; if representatives are truly to reflect the popular will, it is necessary that in each election there should be a fairly full participation by all qualified voters. This is very far from being the case in recent years. There is a wide-spred disregard by many citizens of the privilege and duty of voting. It is the only approach of some silent and unrecognized peril that needs to give us alarm. Such a situation will develop if the government ceases to represent the people because the public has become inarticulate. If the people fail to vote a government will be developed which is not their government."

There is one tangible reason for the great decline in the percentage of actual voters in 1920 and 1924 which immediately suggests itself. The 19th amendment doubled our voting population but failed to double the number of actual voters. The accounts then and since have clearly indicated that millions of women did not care to secure the voting privilege, or, having secured it, did not care to exercise it. This would account for a large part of the fall in the percentage. There is reason to believe, however, that there has been a great decrease in the number of actual voters among the men. Though this is in part due to lack of a sense of public duty, there is reason for the belief that it may be traced in no small measure to a waning of interest in politics or public matters. One reason for this is that the evasion of issues in which the people are keenly interested and on which they are sharply divided tends to breed indifference to a ballot-box which is supposed to call for little more than the election of office-holders. There are indications of a growing feeling among the people that they are powerless to decide public questions, that they can merely elect legislators who decide—too often under lobbying influences—and such a feeling inevitably breeds no small measure of apathetic indifferenee.

SIN AND RUST BOTH LEAD TO DESTRUCTION.

But, it doesn't make the fence last any longer. In fact, it has got to the place where it hardly lasts at all. For the lasting qualities of fence are in the amount and kind of protecting coating. When the protection is small, the life is short. It's a matter of common sense.

And the manufacturer can't afford to put on more zinc and take more care with the fence, because if he does, he has to charge more, and then someone else will get the business. Anyhow, he can't put much more zinc on, for as I have told you, he can't weave his fence without cracking the zinc off. They are all in the same boat, they all make about the same kind, the farmer has to have fence, so there you are!

What's the answer? What's to be done about it? The answer didn't seem to be to try to make more fence, or cheaper fence. It is about as cheap now as it can get. It seemed to us that the remedy was to make a fence that would last many times as long. But how?

We, make galvanized fence, and we know we can't put any more zinc on if we have to bend and twist the wire afterward. But the wire must be heavily protected if it is to last long. And it must be twisted and bent by fence looms after it is protected heavily.

And the protection must be absolutely weather-proof-something better than zinc. What shall it be?

CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.

Henry Ward Beecher said, "The mother's heart is the child's schoolroom." Mothers, be assured that your godly example will work for good in the life of your child. Sometime, somewhere, you will understand being a Christian mother is greater than to rule a kingdom or wear a crown.

Regular Attendance an Essential Factor in Fraternity.

From the eastern gateway of our beloved country, where the Statue of Libety rises in majestic glory enlightening the world, proclaiming our freedom of speech and thought to the western boundary bordering on the Pacific in all its grandeur, there exists a condition, while not of alarming proportions, nevertheless should be given serious thought.

We find this conditlon prevalent In our religious life; in fact lack of interest is manifested on every hand in all worthy endeavors. Every organization having for its purpose the betterment of mankind, whether by the practice of fraternity or otherwise, is confronted by this situation, namely the lack of attendance.

Clergymen, reformers and lecturers place part of the blame on automobiles, declaring them indirectly responsible for this condition. Popular opinion has it that a drive in a car on a sultry night is far more enjoyable than sitting in a church or a lodge room where the humidity is great. One will always find a handful of regulars, however, willing to endure either frigid temperature or humidity —if you please, the "willing workers."

In Garett Lodge, it is nonetheless true. Many reside in rural districts, others in remote places. These are in a measure excusable. Certainly we should consider it a privilege as a duty to attend whenever possible. We find young men lounging idly on the street corners, apparently with no object in life, no interest in current events, civic or national affairs. Many having plenty of time are uninformed on everyday topics. Newspapers and magazines have no place in their lives.

We admit that recreational agencies are vitally essential to a well-balanced life. In our local lodge there abounds sound reasoning, fraternity, educational features, business management, good fellowship. The facilities for recreation found in our club rooms, literature, radio, pool tables, etc., are second to none in the State.

We urge both old and young to attend better in the future. Encourage those who handle the affairs of your lodge. Do your part, however humble it may be.

We might write at length concerning attendance, and while it is not our intention to associate material thoughts with those pertaining to the higher realm, yet the thought we wish to convey might be more forcibly impressed if every one of our members will brush the dust from his bible and turn to Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, 10:25, and read at least the first part of the verse and it will do him no harm to read the whole chapter. Read it, Knights, and let us see your smiling faces Friday night.

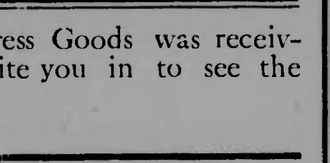
The Circus Is Coming!



Gentry Bros., Famous Shows now on its 39th annual transcontinental tour will exhibit in Oakland on Monday, May 31st.

Hailed with delight by the juvenile populace and the "older" boys and girls, the coming of this well known and honorably conducted circus is always looked upon as an annual festive holiday. The Gentry Bros., instead of operating two distinct shows as in other seasons have combined their interests for 1926 into one big, mammoth tented institution.

Features, novelties, curisoties and oddities gathered from all sections of the world form this season's program for Gentry Bros. Foremost among the stellar artists will be Cottrell-Powell Troupe of English riders; the Tresbores family of Mexican equilibrists and acrialists; Cadieux, a French somersaulting dancer on the tight wire; the Zenaros, Belgian mid air gymnasts; Mons. White who stands on his head is a lofty trapese; Clarksonian, European foot juggler together with more than two scores of artists famed in the annals of the white tops.

Gentry Bros., great herd of performing elephants with Modoe, the largest pachyderm in captivity with his new Charleston dance novelty; the society horse show; the balloon ponies; scores of educated Shetland ponies, dogs and monkeys all are again featured. It has been the history of Gentry Bros. never to repeat its novelties and this year an entire new program is offered.

A glimpse of Gentry Bros. constant growth and improvement will be seen in the immense and spectacular street parade to be seen on the downtown streets at noon. There will be trumpeting bands, tooting calliopes, cumbersome elephants and humping camels. Rumbling wagons of red and gold, allegorical floats and magnificient tableau wagons will all be seen in the spectacular line of march. There will be two performances at 2 and 8 P. M. The doors opening an hour earlier.—Advertisement.

"Doc" and "Sam" in Conversation.

By F. F. CORLISS.

"This is a cold night, Doc, and while we are sitting here toasting our shins in front of this cheerful fireplace, my heart always goes out to the poor, friendless, ne-er do well who is hungry and cold and who has no place to lay his head.

"In my younger days I felt as kindly towards them as you do, Sam. I have been charitable and tried to help them, but it is no use, Sam. They will even turn on you and bite the hand that feeds them; you can't teach them anything. They can learn only by hard knocks and suffering."

"In the language of life such people have not learned the alphabet. They are in the primer class, but in time they will unfold, evolve into a knowledge of better things, for the law of life is a progressive growth."

"Got any cigars, Doc My pipe is upstairs. Nothings gives one a peaceful contented mind like a good smoke, eh?"

"What do you know about re-incarnation, Sam?"

"Well, I know just as much about it as any one and I know nothing. Why do you ask? Why not talk about something that I can comprehend?"

"You see, Sam, to talk about these trite, common things that we see daily is like walking in a circle; we never get anywhere. Mentally we are like a dog trying to catch his tail. We would not know what we now know if in some past time we had not reached out for the unknown thing beyond us. We owe a great debt to the world's dreamers, the pioneers of thought, whom others have scoffed at.

"If men had not let their minds wander, had not searched the unknown to discover nature's laws, her forces and hidden resources, the world would still be burning candles, riding horseback and they would have then thought that the wireless transmission of thought was a fool's vision."

"Well, if you think that you know anything about this abstruse subject, Doc, go ahead and spout. I had rather smoke and listen to you, because when I talk it has got to be about something that is within my reach and less apt to give me brain fag."

"You surprise me, Sam. Because, at your age, retired and nothing to do but think and wait for Father Time with his scythe, this subject ought to be of the most vital interest to you.

"I know very well that you wish to live on and watch the march of events and benefit by the progressive improvements that man is, by the aid of God, bound to make. I am sure that I do. Now, if re-incarnation is just a myth and delusion, then you and I and the millions that are now living are headed straight for oblivion.

"I am not going to discuss theology with you, Sam, because I know that your mind is all befuddled now so that you don't know whether you are going or coming. But religion is something instinctive with all of us and in this short talk I wish to give you something basic on which to rest your religious hope and faith.

Every birth and death form a circle —a closed link as it were in an endless chain of progressive life. Death is the fulfillment of a law of nature and persists in all kingdoms—mineral, vegetable and animal.

In the vegetable and mineral kingdoms we can watch the elemental life die in one form to be reborn in another. This is not the re-incarnation that we are discussing, but is a lower, a primitive form of it. It exemplifies a law of nature that governs the evolution of life and mind. And when we discover a law that works on one plane of life we know that it works on all planes throughout the universe, because nature is a continuity of law and life and mind.

"Now these are facts of nature, Sam, that give philosophers and scientists a basis on which to rest their theories of a re-incarnation of the life of man."

"Hold on a minute, Doc. Your talk sounds logical, but I don't believe it will hold water any better than a sieve."

"I want you to forget about the science of things and listen to common sense. Moses must have passed out somewhere about five thousand years ago. Then there is Jesus, Buddha, Socrates, Shakespeare and a host of other great intellects and have you ever seen them come back? They have been dead to the world for a long time, and I am stating facts. The trouble with you, Sam, is this, you don't seem to know anthing save what you can see and handle.

"I will freely admit, Sam, that the aforesaid people are all dead and up to the present time may be dead to this planet. But the universe is quite a good sized place and for all we know these departed souls may be living in some other globe.

"I am not pretending to tell you, Sam, that we are reborn in the twinkling of an eye. What we call death is but the disintegration of the body—our outer garment. A self-conscious soul never dies, because it is an individualized part of the Infinite. The intelligent energy within us forever goes marching on; and it possesses the power to shape and re-shape matter and mould it to suit its needs and desires. Re-embodiment is a part of the cosmic scheme of things. It is a part of the evolutionary process by which mind and life are lifted, broadened and projected. It is simply God's working formula without which there would be no progression.

"You have already worn out ten bodies, Sam, and you don't seem to know it. You were not conscious for some time after you were born into this life and you will not be conscious when you pass out. When you are reborn it may be on Vega or Arcturus; you will probably not be conscious of how you got there and I have not the time tonight to explain all the details and further we do not need to know the how of everything so long as we keep on living, that is enough."

"You don't seem to believe in a spiritual existence after the dissolution of the body, Doc."

"No, Sam; I used to, but when I learned that the Creator could not express Himself in an invisible ether, that He had to make planets on which He could be objectified in material forms, I saw that it was an illusion. We all have to agree to the following, Sam—that the Creator is Omniscient; that He don't do foolish things, make mistakes and contradict Himself, and that the universe shows design.

"And the ultimate goal is to make life and mind progressive and raise them to the highest attainment of wisdom, character and experience through a material medium.

"Now, Sam, supposing there was a universal law that when every man and woman reached the age of seventy years the following is to happen: All buildings, all man's earthly accumulations of books, bonds, money of all kinds, all works of art, his automobiles, his yachts and whatsoever he has made or earned in a life-time is to be piled up and burned—everything turned back to ashes and the elements—so there is nothing for the children to inherit.

"Now I ask you how civilization could progress under such an edict? Is not man, who is mind, more worth preserving than his property? If so, why should he be annihilated and his property handed on to others?

"No, Sam; the Almighty don't raise man from the obscurity of a microscopic cell to the achievements of our civilization and then destroy His greatest handiwork. You see seventy years does not give man time enough to fill out the pattern of life that nature has designed.

"We all have separate tasks to perform, according to our fitness, hence one is a merchant; another a mechanic; another a millionaire; another a mendicant, but the ultimate object of the work of all men is to gain wisdom and experience in all its varied phases.

"Now, Sam, ask yourself what is the use of wisdom and experience and the recording of our every little act in our sub-conscious minds if it is not for future use and benefit?

"You said something then, Doc, that opens the door to a new view of life that covers a vast domain and I have never been able to get it into my noodle just what our sub-conscious minds were made for."

"Why that is the imperishable part of us, Sam. And when you pass on to the next higher grade in life's school you will know that it is the storehouse of memory. Then you will learn just how valuable your earthly experience has been in life's upward climb.

"God expresses life's values through the materialized man. Eliminate man —which phrase always includes woman—from the face of the earth and there is nothing left that matters.

"Man gives value to the soil he lives on and to all God's minor created things animate or inanimate. Without the embodied man there is no way to appreciate, enjoy and utilize God's wonderful works and resources.

"Here is a crude illustration, Sam, that may help you to see life as I do. An auto engine with gas in it and properly geared so that we call it a going machine, is a useful and valuable vehicle in many ways. The gas is the soul of it. God made the gas; also showed man how to embody it with steel and give it movable parts. Now remove the gas and the body becomes a worthless thing as a vehicle. But if you put that gas into a new engine you can ride on through wide valleys and pastures new to you.

"Until life becomes dynamic and embodied in forms tangible and movable it has no meaning to man and no usefulness to his Maker."

Six famous cooking experts agree

Pacific Coast, Gulf of Mexico, New England, and Lake Michigan! Six of the country's foremost cooking experts have just completed a rigorous test of the Perfection Stove.

THEY used every method of cooking from frying to baking, and were enthusiastic about the Perfection. Read what they say.

"Whether I broiled steak or French-fried potatoes, the results were fine," says Mrs. Rorer, famous Philadelphia cooking teacher.

Crisp Waffles

"My waffles were light and beautifully brown," says Miss Allen, director of The Boston School of Cookery. "They cooked on a hot flame, with yellow tips 1½ inches high above the blue area."

"I found the Perfection so dependable," reports Mrs. DeGraf, home economics counsellor. "I left a roast lamb in the oven for hours. The flame never wavered."

No Scouring Needed

"Eggs a la King and broiled tomatoes are delicious enough in themselves," affirms Miss Hall, nutrition expert, "but twice as delicious to the cook whose kettle bottoms need no scouring. Perfection's long chimneys burn every drop of oil before the heat reaches the cooking. No soot or odor."

"Using a Perfection is like cooking with gas," remarks Mrs. Vaughn, domestic science expert. And Miss Rosa Michaelis is of the same opinion.

Tested Cooking Ability

These are just a few comments made by the six experts, satisfied with only the best cooking equipment. They find the 1926 Perfection fulfills every cooking requirement.

DOLLING UP THE HUMBLE POTATO

Four Unusual Recipes by Four Famous Cooks

Don't think that after you've served potatoes mashed, creamed, and fried you've put them through all their paces. You don't have to begin repeating the old story. There are many delightful ways of preparing the humble spud, as several famous cooks have discovered. They actually glorify this homely American vegetable!

MRS. BELLE DE GRAF

Tamalpais Potatoes

Chop fine 3 cups cold boiled potatoes. Add ¾ cup of cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Pack very solidly in buttered custard cups, or muffin pans. Set in a pan in a very hot oven. Bake 30 minutes, or until golden brown crust has formed which will hold the potatoes together. Turn out in individual molds.

Baked Potato "Tips"

Mrs. Sarah T. Rorer, Philadelphia cooking expert, adds two or three artful touches to baked potatoes which make them taste unusually good.

"After scrubbing large, perfect potatoes, I soak them an hour in cold water," she says.

"I bake them on the upper grate of a medium oven, and turn them after 20 minutes. I let them bake another half hour, or until they feel soft when pressed in a napkin.

"Never try them with a fork, for this allows the steam to escape and makes them heavy. Serve in a napkin at once.

"The secret of good baked potatoes is a slow oven; for a hot oven hardens the skin at once and makes the potatoes soggy."

Stuffed and Browned

Miss Margaret Allen Hall, nutrition expert at the Battle Creek College of Home Economics, has a decided preference for stuffed potatoes. She fixes them like this:

6 medium-sized potatoes
½ cup milk or cream
3 tablespoonfuls butter
1 teaspoon salt

Select well-shaped potatoes about equal size. Bake until soft, then cut or break each potato at about the middle. Remove the contents, mash, add salt, butter, and sufficient cream or milk to cause the potato to beat up light. When very light, fill skins with the seasoned potato, piling it up in irregular shapes. Set the stuffed potatoes in oven a few minutes to brown.

a la Pittsburgh

Mrs. Kato Brew Vaughn, home economics director, of Los Angeles, teaches cooking to 100,000 women every year. Her Pittsburgh Potatoes are rich enough to serve as the only cooked luncheon dish, she says. If served with a good salad they provide a delicious meal. Here is her recipe:

1 lb. potatoes
1 cup grated cheese
1 diced pimento
½ cup bread crumbs
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
Salt and pepper

Dice potatoes and boil until soft. Put a layer of potatoes in baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese, salt, pepper, butter and chopped pimentos. Add another layer of potatoes and repeat with cheese and pimento. Pour over this one cup white sauce. Cover with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in oven until well browned on top.

Prepare the white sauce by melting two tablespoonfuls butter, and stirring in flour until smooth (2 tablespoonfuls), then add one cupful milk and salt and pepper.

* * *

There you are! Four tempting potato recipes, all easy to prepare, favorites of four famous cooking specialists. Try them on your family. They will welcome these unique variations of the potato theme.

For Oil Stove Users

Women who cook with oil will appreciate one of the newer oil stove models with a reversible, easily filled glass reservoir. The hands do not come in contact with the kerosene at all.

When to Use Salt

Underground vegetables, the roots or stems of plants, should be cooked in boiling unsalted water. They contain a certain amount of weedy fiber which is hardened by salt. Salt them when ready to serve.

"Top ground" vegetables, such as peas, beans, cabbage, and onions, are much better cooked in boiling, salted water. Cooked this way they retain their color, and their flavor is intensified.

Bravery and Fidelity of Employees Rewarded

Anna L. Lennan and Lloyd M. Atkins Given Tokens of Appreciation by American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

VAIL MEDALS AND CASH AWARDS BESTOWED FOR NOTEWORTHY PUBLIC SERVICE IN FLOOD OF 1924

Anna L. Lennan, chief operator, and Lloyd M. Atkins, combination-man, who are awarded Theodore N. Vail gold and silver medals, respectively. The gold medal award carries a cash prize of $500 and the silver medal, $250.

Anna L. Lennan, chief operator, Piedmont, W. Va., is awarded Theodore N. Vail gold medal and $500 cash award by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. This is the only gold medal award made this year.

Lloyd M. Atkins, combination man, receives silver medal with cash award of $250.

These two employees of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia are rewarded for acts of noteworthy public service during the severe flood which occurred March 29, 1924, at Piedmont, W. Va., where they are stationed.

Bronze Vail medals covering this service have already been made to these employees by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company, but the present awards are made by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, who has recognized the value of this service to the people of Piedmont and the Bell system.

"I told my mother I was not sorry I had stayed, for I thought we did a little good by so doing"—these are the words in which Anna Leonelda Lennan, chief operator summarizes her part in the events of March 29, 1924, when the Potomac rose sullenly above its banks and threatened to destroy the town.

Miss Lennan risked her life in order to reach her post of duty at the switchboard, stuck grimly at her task in spite of warnings and pleadings of her friends and relatives, and even the direct command of her superiors; resourcefully directed the efforts of other operators, and gave satisfactory telephone service to the stricken town throughout the emergency.

The award has just been announced by a national committee of award, which has considered scores of similar cases of devotion to duty on the part of employees of the Bell Telephone System.

Because he placed the interests of the public above those of himself or his family when a serious flood menaced the town of Piedmont, Lloyd M. Atkins, combination-man has been awarded one of the Theodore N. Vail memorial medals "for Noteworthy Public Service." These medals are awarded annually throughout the Bell Telephone System for acts of outstanding courage, resourcefulness or devotion to duty on the part of telephone employees. The medal awarded to Atkins is of silver and is accompanied by a cash award of $250.

Aroused at five o'clock on the morning of the flood and warned of impending danger, Atkins hastened, at once to the Piedmont central office, near the river and in the center of the flood zone. Here he rescued valuable company property at the river edge and, at about 7 P. M., returned to his home, which was also in the flooded area, just in time to rescue his family, but too late to save any of his personal effects.

Mr. Atkins at once returned to the central office and assisted in bringing three operators from the building, which was then surrounded by water waist deep.

Remaining on duty continuously from Saturday morning until Tuesday evening, Atkins saw his family for the first time after rescuing them at the outbreak of the flood. He could have rendered great service to them by remaining with them, and could undoubtedly have saved a considerable portion of his personal property had not an exceptional sense of his responsibility to the public prompted him to think first of the necessity of maintaining telephone service during the emergency.

Silver medals with cash awards of $250 each were also awarded Trygve Jorgensen, maintenance foreman of the New York Telephone Company, Brooklyn; Miss Ida M. Blanchard, agent and night operator of the Northern New York Telephone Company Natural Bridge, New York; Mrs. Katheryn C. Brisson, toll night operator for the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, Fitchburg, Mass.; Mrs. Aileen C. Smith, manager of the Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone Company, New Richmond, Ohio, and Hubert Harris, line foreman of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, Norristown

AD CLUB ELECTS

J. O. MARTIN IS NEW PRESIDENT OF WASHINGTON ORGANIZATION

J. O. Martin, editor of the Transmitter, employees magazine of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, was recently elected president of the Washington Advertising Club.

Mr. Martin is well known throughout the District of Colnmbia, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia and has a wide acquaintance among publicity men. He has been editor of the Transmitter since 1918, having been associated with that magazine since its first issue January 1, 1913. In addition to his editorial duties he supervises a large part of the telephone company's personnel work and is secretary of that committee at Washington.

Entering the service of the New York Telephone Company at Newark N. J., in 1906, Mr. Martin was later transferred to one of the offices of of that company in New York City, where he was employed until he became associated with the Transmitter

Then one day, about Christmas time, a group of boys and girls came by and stopping to sing a few Christmas carols into the night, one of them said, "Look at the new pole. How it shines in the moonlight! And see how the wires glisten and gleam! And hear the singing of the wind as it passes through them as they stretch far and away over the hills! Wouldn't it be wonderful to know where all the messages are going, and if they are happy ones?"

"Why, this is Christmas time, and of course, they are all happy ones," a tall boy replied. "All Christmas messages are happy, for at this time of the year people's thoughts go back to home and loved ones, and when it isn't so that they can see them they let the wires carry their messages instead. It's a great convenience and one that many people take advantage of," said the boy.

This conversation, as overheard by the chestnut pole, made him happy, and he knew then that he had reached a point of usefulness, and at last had become a part of something worth while, and that he was of even more value than his friend, the Christmas tree.

When the wind swept through the wires there was a low humming sound as if a million voices were striving to transmit their messages to every one. And then a miracle happened, as it always does in Christmas stories, and somewhere away off, new lines that had never been used before came to life and began their service of carrying messages of cheer, and as the pole listened, he heard happy voices talking over them.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS THE HOPE OF NATION, SAYS WRITER

While Criticizing Fairly, There Is a Measure of Comment as Many Phases of System

By T. G. POWNALL

To think outside the beaten path is to court criticism, but the fact that those of our country who would not follow the marked path, have wrought mightily for our welfare, emboldens me to write what follows.

Not long ago we had our choice whether we would have public schools or not. On the ballot was, "For school levy," and "Against school levy." My father was an ardent school man and he told me the names of all who were against the levy, and I didn't like them, and do not now like those who would vote against a school levy if they had a chance.

Here in Maryland, opposition to public schools was stubborn and defiant for a long period, and subdued and silent opposition still exists, despite the fact that we have finally established a splendid school system throughout the State and despite the further fact that it is generally admitted that the public schools are the hope of the nation.

But there may be "too much of a good thing." Any good thing praised and backed financially to the limit, is likely to become top heavy, and, in their ardor for it, the people often commit excesses which are not good for it and not warranted.

I am inclined to think that there is too much head work and too little useful hand work. Too much play; too many kinds of recreation calling for jaunts, uniforms, play outfits, expense and too much time given to "commencement."

High school students are rarely ever heard talking about the Garfield theorem, algebra, science, literature or political economy, but are effusive about baseball, basketball, football, radios, autos, hair cuts, society events and matters of love.

Young people in love have no gumption, and "puppy love" is rampant in every high school, and the curricula of the school, the morale, if you prefer, is weakened by "dates," petting parties," social events, regalia and athletics.

Co-education works well in schools to about the eighth grade, when children become from twelve to fourteen years of age. Children, if at all disposed to wilfulness, at this age, begin to doubt the wisdom of parents and chafe under parental restraint, and question the wisdom of teachers as well. From this age to twenty is the pitfall period of their lives, and I am inclined to think that the State should be relieved from responsibility during that period and not be forced to furnish parlors for youths to pass their adolescent stage.

There is a school in this country, and many elsewhere, for boys, where one-half of each day is given to work and one-half to study, and it is said that it was nearly self-supporting last year and that progress in studies was greater than in our high schools.

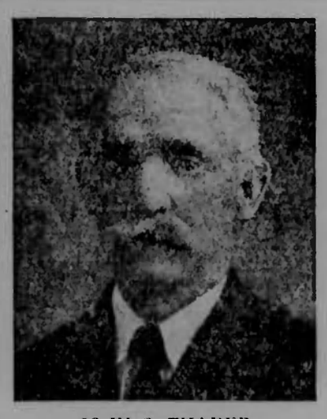
The time has come for teaching the dignity of labor, and for young men to know that blouses and overalls are better and more dignified than Oxford bags and knee trousers, and that to know how to do useful things and do them is more important than quoting poetry or being an expert in the latest in haberdashery styles or hair cuts.

It is as difficult to get anything useful in a boy's head while he is cultivating a mustasche as it is to teach a poodle dog to point birds, and it must not be understood that high school boys now are different from those in periods that have passed. They are not different nor worse. Our system squanders our resources in trying to educate young people of courting age, many of whom do not intend to try to get an education. It has developed a tendency to encourage idleness, promote waste and extravagance and cause the young to frown upon the man behind the plow and seek for easy places and short hours. The bulk opinion of a vast majority of the people is that the State should give the children a rudimentary education covering a period of eight years, but bulk opinion does not sanction keeping them in school until they are eighteen years old nolens volens. That was foisted upon us by those who are in great measure responsible for mounting taxes and forcing the State to do for children what they should do for themselves.

Boys or girls trained by the State from the age of six to fourteen, can get an education without help from anybody, if they hunger for it, and history shows beyond cavil that those who went to school and worked their way were superior to those who were sent to school, prepaid.

Young people who wish to go to work at fifteen should be permitted to do so, and if they find they made a mistake, they can correct it. At that age they have views of their future and it is not well for the State to destroy them, and parents from that time on cannot have everything their own way.

Paternalism is growing everywhere. It is only one step from high school to a law or medical school and if boosters have their way, colleges may become the wards of the State.



Thomas Jefferson, the sanest of all our great men said: "The people should help themselves. Governments should not do for the people anything that they can do for themselves. Self-reliant people are strong of fibre, but will become weak if the Government helps them when they do not need help."

Compulsory attendance at school is certainly proper and right for young children, and parents and the State do their plain duty by compelling attendance to the age of 14; but not after that. Parents cannot think for a boy or girl at that age. Right or wrong, they do their own thinking and if they do not wish to attend school it is folly to coerce them. If children at that age do not like spinach, they will not eat it, although it may be good for them, and if they do not like algebra, they will not study it, and both the State and parents blunder when they resort to compulsion and try to do the impossible.

Garrett County Board of Education

H. A. LORADITCH,
President.

JOHN O. THAYER,
Associate Member.

ROBERT L. WILSON,
Vice-President.

FRANKLIN E. RATHBUN,
County Superintendent.

At the meeting of the Board of Education held at its offices in Oakland Tuesday afternoon, with all members of the board in attendance, Mr. Franklin E. Rathbun was re-elected County Superintendent for the term of four years dating from August 1st, next.

Other officials connected with the school board are: H. A. Loraditch, president; Robert L. Wilson, vice-president, with Mr. John O. Thayer, of Oakland, associate member.

The selection of Mr. Rathbun to succeed himself in the position which he has so successfully and acceptably filled since 1912, came not as a surprise notwithstanding the fact that a determined effort on the part of some who, on account of personal animosities and for political reasons, worked unceasingly to have him replaced, losing sight of the fact that unless a better man could be secured than the incumbent the children of the county and the school system generally would be the sufferers. Mr. Rathbun was re-elected by a majority vote of the board, being placed in nomination by Mr. Wilson, which nomination was seconded by Mr. Thayer. Both these gentlemen are Democrats and to them through the election of Mr. Rathbun, may be given the credit of taking the schools of Garrett county out of politics—something that has long been desired not only locally but State-wide.

During his incumbency as a member of the board, Mr. Thayer has devoted much of his time to the business of the board and has visited nearly every school house in the county in his official capacity. He has also been identified with the movement of having buildings erected in quite a number of districts and has been untiring in his efforts to have the school properties kept in the pink of condition. He is a valuable asset to the educational interests of the county and has proven his worth in many particulars.

In commenting upon his re-election, Mr. Rathbun said yesterday: "This evidence of approval of the work of our schools, its teachers and others associated in the field of public education in our county is very gratifying, and it is also a strong endorsement of our school law and the State's educational program. My earnest hope is that the improvements shall continue in all departments of our public school system."

Under the administration of Mr. Rathbun, the schools of Garrett county, as a general proposition, have made greater progress than in any other county in Maryland which fact is a matter of the greatest importance to the people of the county.

Dr. Albert S. Cook's approval of Mr. Rathbun's election as superintendent was received at the office of the Board this morning.

"PICKLES" WENT OVER BIG WITH OAKLAND AUDIENCE

At the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, Friday Night—One In Cast Appendicitis Victim

The presentation of "Pickles," a three-act musical comedy, by students of the Frostburg State Normal school before an Oakland audience at the Maryland Theatre last Friday night went over big before a packed house.

The entire cast cosisting of sixty girls and boys came to Oakland in busses over the Naional Highway and were chaperoned by members of the school faculty. After the play the party returned to Frostburg. While in Oakland the students were guests at the William-James Hotel.

The play was directed by Miss Mary Louise Siler and Miss Anna Mae Knights.

While taking part in the presentation of the play in the local theatre Miss Minola Phares, one of the members of the chorus, suffered an attack of appendicitis and became so ill at the end of the first act that she was compelled to remain out of the play. Miss Phares was immediately taken back to Frostburg and received at the Miners Hospital as a patient where she underwent an operation Saturday morning at the hands of a Cumberland surgeon. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Phares, of Frostburg. At last reports from the hospital the patient's condition was favorable.

Next Week is Clean-Up Week.

In order to assist the residents of Oakland in the clean-up campaign, the women of the Civic Club have arranged with Dewey Shaffer to haul any accumulation of trash from the premises of the property owners on Monday and Tuesday, May 17th and 18th, and dispose of it in the usual manner. However, the women of the civic organization are obliged to make a charge for this service, but it will be a very moderate one. Anyone having trash to be hauled can make arrangements by calling Mr. Paul B. Naylor at 51-W, who will communicate with the drayman.

Community Singing Last Sunday Afternoon.

Oakland did herself proud last Sunday afternoon when the people of the town and community gathered at the Maryland Theatre and participated in singing hymns and songs arranged for the occasion by the Civic Club, assisted by the American Legion and the Boy Scouts. The choirs of the several churches were also present and lent volume and rhythm to the selections as was also the Rotary Club, this latter organization going to the playhouse in a body where they sung two or three songs of Rotary. The house was well filled and the afternoon was a most enjoyable one.

Card of Thanks.

We desire in this manner to express our thanks to the friends and neighbors for their help during the long illness and after the death of our father, the late Ami Rodeneaver.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

"What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of My Community."

JOHN A. SHAFFER,
Secretary Shadydell Grange.

Ever since the human race has existed on earth, agriculture has been the calling of man. If we review past history we find that products from this section, when placed in competition with those from other sections of the country, have received favorable consideration.

The County Fair offers a medium whereby each and every farmer may place his product alongside those of his neighbors.

JOHN A. SHAFFER.

An efficiency conference of Sunday school workers, including county and district officers, pastors and superintendents, will be held at the Lutheran church in Accident on Wednesday, May 19th, beginning at 2:00 p. m. Col. J. H. Cudlipp of the State staff, will conduct this conference and the session will extend through the afternoon and evening.

All are urged to come to this conference because this is perhaps the most important meeting of the Garrett County Sunday School Association, and you are therefore urged to sacrifice other things and attend. It is very important that the county and district officers take this opportunity of meeting with the pastors and superintendents and all thus obtaining guidance and instructions from the State leaders.

A conference dinner or good fellowship luncheon will be served at the church at 6 o'clock in the evening at 50 cents a cover. In order that preparations may be made for this it will be necessary to know in advance how many will attend and all are urged to notify Rev. Arthur Scrogum, Accident, Md., so that he may have word from you not later than May 17th.

Every Sunday school in the county should be represented by at least one —two, if possible.

Let us all work to make this conference a ssuccess and all try to attend.

Sugar Beet Seed To Be Distributed by an Oakland Merchant

Mr. Charles N. McIntire of the Oakland Hardware and Furniture Company, has purchased a quantity of commercial sugar beet seed which he will gladly give to a number of farmers of this vicinity for experimental purposes. The seed comes to Mr. McIntire from Michigan, where the sugar beet is cultivated extensively, nnd it is thought by a number of those interested in the experiment that the beets can be successfully grown in Garrett county, as the climate here is similar to that part of Michigan in which this variety of beet is so extensively and successfully produced.

Should the experiment prove successful in the county it may possibly lead to the establishment of a refinery being located here.

Mr. Charles VanBurr Bartholomeu, a young man who has resided in Oakland with his parents for the past year or more, has entered the Gnrrett National Bank as an assistant bookkeeper.

FARMERS BANK, OAKLAND, EFFECTS ORGANIZATION

Dr. N. I. Broadwater Is Chosen President of Institution by Board of Directors.

The Farmers Bank of Oakland, chartered under the banking laws of Maryland and authorized to do a general banking business, effected an organization Monday afternoon when a large number of the stockholders met in the banking room of the McIntire building and elected the following as a board of directors for the period of one year: C. N. McIntire, H. P. Stuck, N. I. Broadwater, John W. McCullough, R. D. Houck, W. R. Browning, H. M. Speicher, W. Carl Richards, H. M. Weeks, Ross W. Watson, A. L. Lee, M. J. Hughes, George D. Sprague, John Felty, U. M. Stanton, Robert Sheckells, Hurley Miller, Harry F. Paugh, Harvey Friend, A. R. Martin and B. H. Baker.

Following the election of the directors that body elected the following named officers: President, Dr. N. I. Broadwater; vice-presidents, John W. McCullough and C. N. McIntire; cashier, Berne Teter; attorney, W. Carl Richards.

The interest manifested at the meeting of the stockholders of Garrett county's youngest banking institution was most gratifying to its organizers, who had worked faithfully and diligently in bringing into being the new State bank and in having the stockholders select such successful business men for its board of directors.

Rotarians Entertained

Upon the occasion of his sixty-fifth anniversary on Tuesday of this week, Dr. Archibald Moore was host to the Oakland Rotarians when he and his estimable wife entertained the club at their delightful home on Oak street with a sumptuous eight o'clock dinner. There were twenty-four Rotarians present to enjoy the hospitality of Dr. Moore and his amiable wife.

During the evening's entertainment Mrs. Gordon Mealy added to the pleasure of the guests by singing two beautiful selections, one of which she repeated upon request of the Rotarians. Mr. R. R. Gilbert also added to the entertaing features of the evening by playing two or three selections on his saxophone and clarinet, Mr. Julius Littman being his accompanist.

The dinner served by Mrs. Moore was par-excellent and in serving it she was assisted by several of her kind neighbors and friends.

During the dinner, Dr. McComas, president, for the part of the Rotarians, presented Dr. Moore with a gold piece and in accepting it Dr. Moore said that he only took it "not as representing any intrinsic value but as gold from the hearts of those who gave it."

Another pleasureable feature of the evening was the singing of many of the songs of Rotary, all joining in heartily and with a will.

Dr. Moore, as district superintendent and preacher, has been in the service of his church for well on to fifty years and for more than a decade he has been a loved resident of Oakland. The expressed wish of his guests upon taking their leave of this most hospitable couple was that they may live for a long time yet and at the end of the journey come into their well deserved inheritance of joy and bliss.

THE NEWSPAPER A PUBLIC NECESSITY.

The British Government, putting out an official newspaper in the strike emergency, calls attention to the fact that newspapers generally have been forced to cease publication and that the nation has been reduced in this respect to "the level of Africa, depending only on rumors that are carried from place to place." Such rumors might cause panics and disorders and might demoralize the country. So the Government feels its newspaper is a public necessity.

The statement is particularly interesting because it is no academic defense of the newspaper. It is evidently an earnest expression of the conviction of men who are facing a great emergency. The crisis suddenly makes them realize that the newspaper is an essential factor in modern civilization.

Ordinarily people accept the newspaper as an incidental thing in the day's work. They do the usual complaining about the way it is managed—unhapily it has the faults of all human institutions. It takes some unusual situation like the British strike to reveal its real importance in community life.

JUST TALKING. THAT'S ALL

By F. F. CORLISS.

"Did you hear what Ruth just told Rebecca?"

"No."

"She said, 'Oh, it's nothing; Doc and Sam just talking, that's all.'"

"Tell Ruth there's no offense, Sam, as she did not feminize it as gossip. So long as we talk the truth and make it impersonal we ought not to hurt anyone's feelings. When telling the truth becomes personal and is tinged with jealousy, that's gossip, from which the male sex pray to be acquitted."

"Ruth's remark leads me to ask you a question, Doc, and as I know that you have had a wide experience, professionally and otherwise with life and death and with things seen and things only seen with the mind's eye, a microscopic or an electroscopic eye, I shall appreciate your opinion. What do you consider the noblest, the finest and most indispensible thing in the universe?"

"Sam, you amaze me by asking a question so simple and self-evident. Why, it's a woman, of course, and you ought to know it."

"I do know it, Doc; but I wanted to find out if you knew it, too."

"I don't suppose a plain answer is enough for you, Sam. You will ask me now 'how come,' and why and expect me to analyze her morally and mentally and then dissect her."

"Yes, Doc; I want to know just what it is that makes her supreme."

"Kipling says a woman is 'just a rag, a bone and a hank of hair.' He is an Englishman, Sam, and they never know how to appreciate woman or treat her right. They look on her as essential to the lordly, overbearing man's health and happiness, but treat even their wives as inferiors much as they treat their valets and butlers.

"Woman's the acme of all created things because God made her to be so. The early Jews would have us think that she was an after-thought brought forth after God had completed Adam and found that it was necessary to give man a helper."

"No, Sam; she was never made from a rib; not created by accident or made as an appendage for man. She is the personification of life and love, raised to the ninth power. In the language of the zoologist, she is superb, superlative and the most splendid specimen of animal life. To the psychologist she is a radiant soul that shines by virtue of an innate effulgence. To the biologist she represents life in all its complexities and contradictions—she is the mystery of all mysteries. To the philosopher, woman is an unfathomable, unknown quantity.

"She doesn't know herself or the why of her many whims and caprices. She is never fully known and understood by her lover, her husband or her intimate friends. She forever keeps one guessing. She is the incarnation of a life that is holy and divine.

"Physically she is made of finer clay than man. She is a beautiful thing and a joy forever to man. She was made to love and to be loved; to adorn and embellish life with her grace, graciousness and entrancing charm, and, Sam, she needs no tutoring in the use of her varied gifts."

"If all the old bachelors could find women like the one you have just printed I believe they would fall over each other in their haste to get married, Doc."

"Well, Sam, I always like to look on the bright side of things and if I can not speak well of everybody, better to say nothing, eh?

"I am aware, Sam, that a woman can make a man's life either a heaven or a hell, because she possesses the know how, but I was not going to speak of that type. I know that they are not all angels, Sam.

"A good woman is man's greatest inspiration. Man, left to himself, naturally becomes lazy, shiftless, often uncouth, but the influence of a good woman gives him pep, new life and an ambition to work, to achieve and reach the heights of his mental and physical capacity. She is like an invisible government.

"We all love nature and in the springtime we like to stroll along the water streams and listen to the babbling brook, and when we are out in the dense forest we feel a closer kinship to our Maker. The trees may talk, Sam, but they don't speak our language. They do not speak to us of love; don't teach us mercy, charity, patience, the highest attributes of the mind, both human and Divnie are lacking.

"But when we look into the sweet face of a noble-minded woman we behold more of the Divine presence and His highest attributes materialized than is otherwise possible and I would like not only to impress that fact on your mind, Sam, but have every human being realize that it is a fact.

"Have I answered your question, Sam?"

"Well, you have made me think better of the sex than I did before, Doc."

Lecture by a Converted Nun.

SIN AND RUST BOTH LEAD TO DESTRUCTION.

What metal is tough and pliable?

Why, LEAD of course.

LEAD is tough. You can pound, bend, and twist it, and it does not crack. It has been known from the beginning as the most durable of metals. It has been used for roofing thousands of years ago, and these roofs are still giving service. It was used by the Romans thousands of years ago for water pipes. They have been buried in the ground for ages, and are still good.

Old lead bullets fired a century ago are turned up by the plow upon old battlefields, and are still in good condition.

Leadelad fences, Leadelad barbed wire, and Leadelad roofings are protected by a thick, heavy, jacket of tough, everlasting lead. The jacket of lead upon Leadelad wire is seven times as heavy as the coating on our galvanized wire. Leadelad fences are in use upon thousands of farms--Leadelad Lawn fences are protecting thousands of lawns, and these folks will never buy any other fence again.

We are not trying to see how cheap we can make Leadelad fences and roofings. We are trying to see how good we can make them.

Folks who are seeking the cheapest fence they can buy, will likely buy galvanized.

Eighteen months' worth of silk "undies" is what "Chuck" Perry, of Uniontown, provided for his Sheba. The sweet thing complained to her hero that her lingerie was not of modern vintage, so, with all the valor of the knights of old, the young sheik went forth to right the wrong. Six pieces of silken underalls of excellent quality were procured by "Chuckie" for his lady fair, but he overlooked the small detail of enlisting the services of a clerk while doing his "shopping." Pink silk ribbons dangling from under the hero's coat suggested to a store detective that something out of the ordinary was doing. He relieved the customer of his store of the "purchases" and the judge said, "Eighteen months." It will be a long time for the Sheba to await the return of her gallant knight with the much-coveted "undies."

Was Your Baby's Birth Registered?

One baby out of every twenty-five that was born in the counties of Maryland in 1925 was not listed in the State records according to a careful checking up of the births registered during the year. The total number of births recorded was 16,500. Tests made to prove the completeness of the registration showed that 95.42 per cent—in round number 96 per cent—of all the births that occurred were reported. The four per cent not registered means a total of 791 babies whose names are not down on the State records. An annual omission of nearly 800 entries each year would mean the total omission of nearly eight thousand births from the State records in ten years.

As a result of the survey referred to above, the State Board of Health has recommended the prosecution of twenty-five physicians and four midwives for failure to report births in accordance with the State laws. It is expected that other prosecutions will follow in a number of cases still under investigation. Authority to take the necessary action has been placed in the hands of Mr. J. Davis Donovan, chief of the division of legal administration of the State Department of Health.

Speaking of the reason for the "drive" to make the regstiration of births in Maryland 100 per cent complete, Dr. F. V. Beitler, chief of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics said: "Birth registration is of equal importance to the State and to the individual. The State Department of Health is the official record keeper of the income and outgo of the population, that is, the records of the births and the deaths. Every plan made by the department to safeguard the health of the people of Maryland is based upon these facts of life and death.

"That is the State's side of the story. The child's side is of especial concern to the individual and to his family. Here are some of the uses for the official records of his birth:

"To prove his identity, his age and his citizenship; to prove his right to go to school; to prove his right to work; to prove his right to an inheritance; to prove his right to marry; to prove his right to hold office; to prove his right to secure passports for foreign travel; to prove his mother's right to a widow's pension.

"Compared with some other States, Maryland's record for birth registration is good, but we want to make it 100 per cent complete. Nearly all of the violations of our Maryland law requiring the prompt and accurate registration of births, are due to carelessness. Busy doctors forget to fill out and send in the records of births, not realizing that they may be depriving individuals of records that may be of the greatest importance to them in later life."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MAY 16,1926.

ABRAHAM AND THE STRANGERS.

Genesis 18.

All the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him.—Gen. 18:18.

THE FOURTH GRACE

Three graces are well known, for Faith, Hope and Charity have been long in the world. There is a fourth no less charming than any one of these and that is the grace of Hospitality. With all our advance in materials with which the life may be enriched, is there a lessening of the fine courtesy for which many a home was known in other days? Do We share our life as readily as of yore? Is the routine of the home so planned that a guest may be welcomed without jarring the whole machine? That old skin tent was the home of the fourth grace, for it is not upon the richness of the house that her presence depends. She lives in cabin, cottage or court if heartily welcomed, and she and Abraham were on the best of terms.

After his experience in battle there may have been some reason for God's assurance that "I am thy shield and thy exeeeding great reward." He had surrendered all claim to the booty and had created enemies by his activities so Jehovah lifted above him the Presence that both secures and enriches the believer in the promise. The stormy days of Ishmael and Hagar had passed, the covenant of circumsision had been entered into and Abraham's circle of tents that housed by this time a couple of thousand folks were in the noon-time hush that settles over an encampment during the heat of the day. But not all was stillness. Over the plain strode three figures. There was evidently some urgent need that brought them out at this hour; walking, too, instead of being upon some steed. Abraham came out of his doze with a jerk. With not a moment's delay this old man was running across the grass to meet them. There was no sending a servant, there was no hint of dignity that might be damaged by the race to relieve whatever it might be that forced the travel in the heat. That kindly heart would serve with no intervention of another. Like that other character who "had a tea-pot in her soul", so this was possessor of the fourth grace. Sueh an one is sure of angel visits. Even if the form be human, be that of pain, or sorrow, or tears, it may become a messenger of God to us if the fourth grace keeps company with us. All the hospitality of the tent was shared and apparently two hurried ahead toward Sodom while one remained to bring the richness of his company to the almoner of the tent and to leave with its owner gifts passing the wealth of kings.

THE GIFT OF LIFE

New life always comes with the visitor in any home. But there was a deeper hunger under the old tent than exists under many a modern roof—they were eager for an heir. Eleazer had held the place until the birth of Hager's boy, but within their hearts was the passion for their own. That little child that lives only in the house of dreams is the constant comrade of the heart. St. Franeis slipped from the monastery one winter night and fashioned with his deft fingers the form of a beautiful woman and a group of fair children. Putting them in a circle he sat there giving free rein to his fancy of the home that would never be. Finally he arose and kissed each one tenderly, then resigned the hope forever as he turned to the road in which the ehurch was to he his only bride. And the promise to Abraham was the satisfying of his desire for the reality of his dream. From the tent came a chuckle of laughter in which surprise, incredulity and happiness were mingled. Could even this visitor bring new life to the tent? But it was true and "Laughter" was taken as the name the child should bear and the trail of joy ran thru all their later years.

THE GIFT OF KNOWLEDGE

The rarest knowing eomes from contact with people. As these figures walked across the sloping sward toward the gash of the Jordan and the sea they reached the place where something of the outlines of the cities of the plain could be seen. There had been no explanation of what had driven these travelers out into the heat, but now there was to come the communication of the truth. What lies hidden in the story? Abraham had invested in Sodom both money and struggle. He had fought for its security. He had redeemed it with blood. Why should he be concerned over its fate? And Lot was there and this Shepherd of the Hill cared for his nephew perhaps the more that he was somewhat responsible for his being there at all. What would be the outcome of its wickedness? Now there was born into his mind the certainty of destruction following its sin. He knew in his own soul that doom was impending and he was certain it was from God.

THE GIFT OF RESPONSIBILITY

What would he do about it? Abraham was always all for action. It had been characteristic from the days of Ur until now and he faced God with the determination that he must take the part of the imperiled citizens. And that God he knew was just. What an anchor in the perplexities of life's disasters and defeats! He could rest on that and make it the basis of his appeal. If God were just then the righteous and the wicked could not be treated in the same fashion. So he began his prayer that gradually grew in its passion and in its certainty of response. God was speaking—there was no question of it and his prayer, born out of his sense of responsibility, would bring its answer. Righteous men would be able to save the city from its doom. And they are the secret of its safety today as then. The far journey we have taken appears in the utter absence of any plea for the children or the women. It was a men's world only. That eatastrophe that lighted the pitch and brought a firey close to the cities of the plain must have included far more than ten baby innocents who today would be the chief burden of our prayer. It was not a family matter with Abraham, however, for there was no mention of Lot in his petitions. It was the spirit that count all men of equal worth and that lies at the bottom of every missionary endeavor that runs through this wonderful old story of an experience that is as new as the latest prayer breathing something of the passion of our Lord.

The fallen leaves have all been removed from the grounds so that now property is out of danger of fire burning them should it get beyond the control of those engaged in clearing their properties.

The Mountain Lake Hotel had a very close call from burning on last Thursday afternoon when an outbuilding used as a pump house eaught fire from burning leaves carried to it from another property. The burned building was within a few feet of the hotel property and the wind then prevailing carried the fire directly away from the hotel instead of toward it, which fact alone saved it from destruction. As it was the extreme heat set the roof on fire but it was soon extinguished by the Oakland and the Park fire engines, which responded very promptly to the alarm.

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

BREADS AND BISCUITS AS 3 EXPERT COOKS MAKE THEM

(Ed. Note: This is one of a series of articles on cooking which 6 famous cooks are contributing to this paper.)

Bread can be much more than the uninteresting, prosaic "staff of life." It can be made so delicious that you eat it because you want to, not because you think you ought to. Famous cooks have unearthed many delicious bread and biscuit recipes from various parts of the country for you. Follow their recipes for pleasing variety in breads.

MRS. SARAH T. RORER

Easy Bran Muffins

Mrs. Rorer, the Philadelphia cooking expert, recommends her bran muffins for breakfast. "They are very nutritious and healthful," she says. "One might paraphrase the old saying into 'a bran muffin a day keeps the doctor away.' It would hold just as true.

"These muffins are easily made," she affirms. "Beat one egg, add a cup of milk, a half teaspoon salt, one tablespoonful sugar, and one tablespoonful melted butter. Sift one cupful flour with three level teaspoons baking powder, and bake in a hot oven, in greased gem pans for 20 minutes."

Nuts for Nourishment

Mrs. Rorer has a very appetizing and nourishing nut bread, too. Here's how to make it:

Chop enough pecans to make a half cupful. Put two cupfuls flour in a bowl, add four level teaspoons of baking powder, half a teaspoon salt, and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and sift. Mix in the nuts. Beat one egg, add one cupful of milk, mix and add the flour. Beat well, and turn at once into a greased bread pan.

Let stand 10 minutes. Light oven 3 minutes before bread is light. Bake half an hour at medium heat. Raisins may be substituted for nuts.

Nut bread makes very good sandwiches if spread with butter. Cream cheese may also be used for a simple, delicious filling.

Southern Corn Bread

Corn bread, that favorite of the South, is another nutritious change from the every-day white bread. Made with the recipe of Miss Rosa Michaelis, famous New Orleans cook, it's a welcome part of any meal. Here are the ingredients:

½ cup of sugar
4 cups cornmeal
1½ teaspoons salt
3 eggs
2 tablespoonfuls baking powder
1½ tablespoonfuls shortening
2 cups water (or milk, or the two mixed)

Sift corn meal, salt, sugar, and baking powder together. Add water or milk. Add yolks of eggs and shortening which has been heated. Add stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Put into a hot greased pan, and bake in hot oven. This can be served with butter or with syrup.

Real Beaten Biscuits

If you have a patient right arm, you are bound to make successful beaten biscuits. This is another old southern recipe of Miss Michaelis'.

1 quart flour
1½ teaspoons of lard
1 pint of milk
1 teaspoon salt

Sift dry ingredients. Then add the shortening and blend by using the fingers—ruh until smooth; add gradually the liquid and knead all together till the dough is formed. Should be a rather stiff dough. Then lay the dough on a biscuit board and beat with rolling pin half an hour. Knead lightly and beat again for ten minutes, till air bubbles form all over the dough. Then roll out and cut with cutter in any shape and stick top here and there with fork. Bake in moderate oven about fifteen minutes or till top and bottom are a light brown.

Use Oranges

Orange muffins are just the thing for breakfast. Toasted, they are delicious to serve with afternoon tea. Mrs. Bello DeGraf, San Francisco, formerly with the Pacific Coast Branch of the New York Cooking School, gives this delectable recipe:

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup orange juice
Grated rind of one orange

Beat eggs and add liquid. Sift and combine dry ingredients. Add melted shortening and first mixture. Bake in greased muffin pans, in moderate oven about 20 minutes.

You may serve a different bread or biscuit every meal. These recipes are especially helpful to women with the lunch problem, as different sandwich fillings may be used with all but the beaten biscuit with good results.

Much Ventilation

One manufacturer is selling an efficient oven with 108 holes. These holes provide perfect air circulation and carry away all surplus moisture and all odors. This oven is especially made for oil stoves.

For Oil Stove Users

Women who cook with oil will appreciate one of the newer oil stove models with a reversible, easily filled glass reservoir. The hands do not come in contact with the kerosene at all.

What 30 Years of Cooking taught Mrs. Rorer about Stoves

By MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER
Philadelphia Cooking Expert

"I PREFER oil stoves to any other kind. I speak from the fullness of 30 years' experience with them. Oil is clean, economical, and dependable. It saves a world of work. No coal or wood to carry in, no ashes to carry out. And no dust.

"I have just completed a special experiment on the 1926 model Perfection Oil Stove, testing it under all possible cooking conditions. I cooked many meals in my own kitchen. Every dish was deliciously cooked.

Immediate Cooking

"Steak began to broil and my molasses cake began to rise almost as soon as I lighted the burners. There was no waiting for the heat to 'come up.'

"The bottom of every utensil used in the experiment was as clean as a china dish. No scouring was necessary. Those long Perfection chimneys certainly are insurance against sooty kettles.

All at the Same Time

"I cooked many things at once. For boiling beef I used a very low flame. I French-fried potatoes over a hot flame with yellow tips about 1½ inches high above the blue area. I cooked white sauce over a medium flame.

"I used all grades of heat at the same time satisfactorily. All flames remained steady and even. They did not creep or 'crawl.' This is a real blessing to the cook. She can forget her stove and keep her mind on her cooking.

"Very Well Satisfied"

"Altogether I was very well satisfied with the Perfection Stove. And, my good opinion of oil stoves has increased, if that is possible."

4,500,000 In Use

The other five famous cooks were enthusiastic about the 1926 Perfection, too. And every day 4,500,000 women get real cooking satisfaction from their Perfections. You, too, will get the most cooking satisfaction the year around when you cook on the latest model Perfection.

See the complete line at any dealer's today. All sizes, from a one-burner model at $6.75 to a large, five-burner range at $120.00.

The hawk is the king of the woods,
The nightingale warbles a sweet lullaby,
While the hen comes across with the goods.

Orvil Schrock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Schrock, residing near this village, was badly injured one morning last week. The accident occurred as Mr. Schrock was turning a cream separator. While the machine was in rapid motion the bowl of the separator burst and a piece of the metal was hurled with great violence which struck the unfortunate man on his head and in close proximity to his eye. Dr. Ravenscroft, of Accident, was hastily summoned and dressed the wound, which was said to be rather serious.

MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM IS ARRANGED BY LEGION

Body Extends An Invitation to All Fraternal Societies to Participate Upon Occasion

Through the medium of The Republican the American Legion of Garrett county extends an invitation to all fraternal organizations, the high and grammar schools and the Boy Scouts and to organizations of the surrounding neighborhood to join the Legion and participate in the ceremonies attending Memorial Day and the decorating of the graves of the Nation's dead on Sunday, May 30th.

The parade will form in front of the Legion rooms on Second street and march from thence to the cemetery where an appropriate service will be conducted by the Legion and other organizations who participate and where Mr. F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent will deliver the oration.

All former service men, Civil war, Spanish-American and World War veterans are urged to be present and participate in the program.

The Legion has ordered and will sell upon that day several hundred poppies, which is the official flower of the organization.

Appropriate music by one or more bands will be furnished during the afternoon's exercises and at the cemetery a firing squad and bugler will render service.

Annual Rural Women's Short Course.

The Extension Service of the University of Maryland extends a cordial invitntion to come to College Park, June 14 to 19, 1926, to the fourth Annual Short Course, and to share in the instruction, the social life and the inspiration of the program that has been arranged by the Home Demonstration Department of the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

The purpose of this course is to give help to the rural home makers of Maryland through lectures and demonstrations in the art of home making. But equally important will he another side of this Short Course--the rubbing elbows with women from every section of Maryland and the exchange of ideas and experiences with them. That in itself will be greatly worth while. Besides, the week will give emphasis to the social side of community life. There will be a daily period of community singing, inspirational lectures and social activities.

This year's program of work includes such a variety of interesting subjects that one will be able to select just the right courses. There will be classes in foods, nutrition, clothing, household management, house furnishings, millinery, landscape gardening, home dairying, poultry, health, parlimentary law and citizenship. Numerous parties, musical programs and a sight seeing trip to Washington are listed on the social calendar.

Fifty-six rural women of Maryland are eligible to receive certificates testifying to four consecutive years of attendance at the Annual Rural Women's Short Course nnd the exercises incident to the presentation of these certificates will doubtless be one of the interesting and impressive features of the short course at the university this year. Mrs. H. P. Miller and Miss Lulu Shaw, of Grantsville, are among the fifty-six women.

The enrollment fee this year, as formerly, is but $6.00. This small fee takes care of all expenses for the entire week. Any woman interested in attending the Short Course may secure further information at the Home Demonstration Agent's Office, Oakland, Phone 132-W.

KEYSER RIDGE CREAMERY TO BE OPERATED AT ONCE

Has Been Purchased by McKeesport Interests; Farmers Will Find Ready Market

Some years ago farmers and business men, in the vicinity of Keyser's Ridge and Grantsville were induced by a promoter to invest heavily in the financing of a cheese factory which was built and equipped but which for a long time afterwards stood idle, but finanally some cheese was manufactured and marketed.

For more than three years it did not open its doors and was recently sold at public auction to satisfy some of the creditors, being bought in by a bank located at Addison, Pa., which held the notes and a mortgage against the building and land.

Through the efforts of County Agent Jester the Menzie Dairy Company of McKeesport, Pa., became interested in the property and a few days ago purchased it and will shortly open it as a creamery, thus giving a ready market for milk and cream produced by the farmers of the Keyser's Ridge and Grantsville communities, as well as those sections situated at a greater distance from the plant which is located half a mile east of the Oakland-Keyser's Ridge road on the National Highway.

MARRIED.

Bay—Orendorf—Miss Olive Orendorf, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Orendorf, of Oakland, was married to Mr. George Ernest Bay, of Huntington, West Va., the ceremony having been performed by the Rev. C. E. Butler at the Lutheran church of Huntington on Saturday, May 15th, at eight o'clock a. m. The bride was attended by Miss Gertrude Roberts, formerely of Oakland. Mr. Walter Bion was best man. The couple will reside in Huntington where Mr. Bay is an instructor in the public schools of that city.

Boy Scout News.

After the regular meeting of the troop on Friday evening, May 21st, no applications for membership in the troop will be accepted until after the annual camp which will take place some time during July or August. This ruling is put into effect about this time every year to discourage applicants whose aim is simply camping privileges. Only scouts who have passed their second class requirements are permitted to attend the camp. If you have a boy or are especially interested in one and he would like to be a scout, better have him place his application this week. We want every boy in this community who wants to become a real scout to be a member of our troop and to enjoy all troop privileges. A recruit still has plenty of time to pass all requirements, if he works hard, before goint camping.

It was also voted to accept no more student scouts—boys under twelve years receiving preparatorry instruction. This rule takes effect immediately. The ruling does not in any way affect the students already in the troop.

Scoutmaster.

Girls' 4H Club Camp.

Garrett County 4H Club girls and leaders are you going to the Alleghany- Garrett County Club Camp June 21-26? The Camp is to be held at the Girls' Friendly Cottage, near Grantsville, and will be under the direction of Miss Dorothy Emerson, State 4H Club Leader; Miss Maude Bean, Home Demonstration Agent, Alleghany county; Miss Lola Belle Green, Home Demonstration Agent, Garrett county. Assistance will be given by older girls who are Club Leaders.

Girls must learn to work as well as play and for that reason mornings at camp will be work time for all. To develop the hand and head H's there will be demonstrations on canning, cake making, etc., judging by all girls, courtesies taught, also time will be spent in making the camp beautiful.

That will leave the afternoon for rest and play—to develop the heart and health H's you know. You will like the games, the hikes to study birds and flowers, swimming (if you have permission from home.) Then in the early evening vesper service after which there will be songs, stories and stunts around the campfire—and early to bed for another busy day.

And what is the purpose of it all girls? That you may meet and know other club girls. That you may learn to work and play with them—that you may acquire a finer vision of the purpose of the 4 H's in your life and bring that vision home to your club and your community—"that you may make your best better."

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Olive Flick vs. James G. Flick. No. 2680 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procurre a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff, Olive Flick, from the defendant, James G. Flick.

The bill states:

1. That on the 10th day of October, 1922, she was married by a certain Rev. Price, a Methodist Episcopal minister, at Cumberland, Maryland, to one James G. Flick, with whom she resided at intervals in Garrett county, Maryland, until the 9th day of December, 1922.

2. That though the conduct of your oratrix toward her husband, the said James G. Flick, was always kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said James G. Flick without just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted her on the said 9th day of December, 1922, at Garrett county aforesaid, since which date she has neither seen the said defendant nor heard anything from him whatsoever.

3. That said abandonment has continued uninterrupedly for more than three years and in the opinion of your oratrix is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

4. That your oratrix and the said defendant, James G. Flick have had no children born t othem from said marriage.

5. That the said James G. Flick is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, but his present place of residence is unknown to your oratrix.

The bill then prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff from the defendant, for general relief and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon, this 3rd day of May, 1926, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, in equity, that the plaintiff, by having a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 4th day of June, 1926, giving notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 21st day of June, 1926, to show cause if any he has, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

SIX TIMES as many Paige cars have already been sold this year as were sold in the same period a year ago.

Three times as many Paiges have been built and sold these first four months as were sold during all of 1925.

And ten—yes, twenty times as many men and women are clamoring for this car as ever before aspired to Paige ownership.

Throughout all America—the pendulum is swinging to Paige!

The amazing fact that a Paige can now be bought for nearly a thousand dollars less accounts for some of this popularity.

But there is also the infinitely more significant fact that a great many shrewd motor-wise buyers are turning from cars priced much higher to this less costly but equally capable Paige. If you would know all the reasons for this tremendous popularity come in and drive this Paige, entirely without obligation.

GOOD SCHOOLS INFLUENCE FARM LIFE.

Georgia and Tennessee are two states which have recently been added to the growing number of those providing "equalization" funds to assist poor schools or districts. Where good schools are maintained in farm communities there also are found economic and social conditions favorable to wholesome content and happiness in farm living. Good schools are at the same time a basis for and a sign of reasonable economic prosperity. Fortunately for farm children, school authorities, legislators and citizens generally are beginning to appreciate the relationship between education and wholesome and prosperous farm life; as well as the fact that there are many rural school districts in the United States—some indeed in every state—in which there is not enough taxable wealth to give the children even a decent education if local sources of income are the sole support of the schools. There is too a growing belief that the theory that the State is responsible for the education of all its children should have a practical manifestation through financial as well as moral and supervisory support of schools from the State as a whole. The most common method of manifesting this practical interest on the part of the State is by no means of some type of "equalization" fund.

In March, 1926, the Governor of Georgia signed an "equalization" bill which, according to a Georgia publication recently received in the U. S. Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, is "the most far-reaching and important education measure in the history of the State. When the story of education in the twentieth century is written, March 10, 1926, (the day of the Governor's signature,) will be recorded as the greatest milestone in the history of education in Georgia." It is expected that the equalization fund will reach 10 million dollars in 10 years and will afford adequate school facilities to all children, however poor the county in which they live, before the end of that period.

The Tennessee Education Bulletin for March, 1926, a publication of the State department of education, is authority for the statement that the tax rate as fixed in 1925 in 73 of the poorer of the 95 counties, augmented by the State equalization fund, will provide a minimun of eight months school during the school year 1926-27 in these counties.

Folks who want to fence for those who come after them, buy Leadelad. They know that is real economy.

The long life of Leadelad is in the thick heavy jacket of lead, and not in the weight of the wire.

A light or medium weight Leadelad fence has the same long life as the heaviest Leadelad fence. The thickness of the wire in Leadelad has nothing to do with the life.

Lots of folks order all No. 9 Leadelad fence, because they are used to buying all No. 9 galvanized. It has become a habit with them. A No. 11 Leadelad fence will last just as long as an all No. 9 Leadelad fence and cost less.

A No. 11 or 12 Leadelad fence will last many times as long as a No. 9 galvanized and cost no more.

HELEN JACKSON COMING!

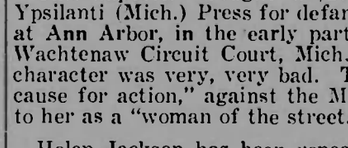
Handbills distributed this week announce the coming of the notorious Helen Jackson to lecture in Oakland, and the readers of The Republican may be interested in her history, as follows:

Her real name is Helen Barnowska. At the early age of 15 years she was committed to a Sisters' Reformatory at Detroit by her sister because she was unmanageable. This was in September, 1895. In December, 1897, she was permitted to return to her sister, then living in Pittsburgh.

Later she returned to the Good Shepherd Home, but this time to the Carthage (Ohio) Home, because her former superioress, whom Helen liked, was transferred to that Home. Even after she left the Reformatory the last time, in fact, even after she married, she and her husband called at the Detroit Home and were most friendly. Like the other insincere people on the anti-Catholic platform, she saw, during the present wave of bigotry, a chance to make easy money.

Helen now lectures in a garb which she represents as her nun's garb (of course she was never a nun); it is only a replica of the costume worn by the peasant women and girls in Normandy, France. The Sisters of the Good Shepherd allow their charges to wear that garb as a uniform during the period in which they are "on good conduct." No one who enters the reformatory under the Good Shepherd Sisters is ever permitted to become a member of their Order.

This imposter brought a $20,000 damage suit against the Ypsilanti (Mich.) Press for defamation of character. In the trial at Ann Arbor, in the early part of 1921, before Judge Sample, Wachtenaw Circuit Court, Mich., it was developed that Helen's character was very, very bad. The jury rendered a verdict "No cause for action," against the Michigan editor who had referred to her as a "woman of the street."



Helen Jackson has been repeatedly exposed in different communities at the very time she was speaking to big audiences; yet enemies of the Catholic church encourage her to go ahead.

Even the Ku Klux Klan will not always stand for Helen. "The Fiery Cross," Indianapolis, Ind., December 17, 1922, carried the following:

> "She makes a living out of the game and so does her husband. Her mission is purely mercenary. Mrs. Jackson was never a nun. She poses in what she says is a nun's habit, but it is not. Investigation always proves that these speakers do not have a pure motive or are in their questionable work for the benefit of themselves. Wherever she has been imported, she spreads her poison and does positive harm."

Respectfully, JOHN F. ECKENRODE,

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MAY 23, 1926.

ISAAC AND HIS WELLS. Genesis 26:12-25. Read chapters 24-27.

THRU HIS BOY'S EYES.

There is a time when "dad" is the outstanding hero in his boy's eyes. No one else is quite so strong, nor knows quite so much, and happy is he who capitalizes this early picture against the later day of more critical judgment. And his religion is the link with heaven in the child's thinking so that it was out of Joseph's life in that little white cottage in Nazareth that has come the dearest word for God that ever fell from the lips of our Lord, "Father." No eye sees quite so clearly as the unspoiled boy's and when after years of experience one can catch the impression made upon that open mind by father's attitude toward Deity a shaft of light is cast upon his whole character. And we do have just that in the word of Jacob as he faced Laban in the days of their differences and swore by "the God of Abraham and the fear of Isaac" that certain things were true. There lies the key to the two characters. Abraham was the "friend of God." In all his adventurous career that carried him pioneering across the world of his day and made him acquainted with three civilizations there was always the glad comradeship of Jehovah entering his tent, talking with him under the stars, and in that continuing intimacy he took every journey and lived every stop. He would walk in and sit by God's fire and warm his soul at its blaze. It is a perfectly wonderful picture and it is little strange that God made him the father of the faithful. But with Isaac all was different. He was afraid of God. He cowered where his father climbed. He had no enjoyment in his relationship with Jehovah. To him was always the Almighty making demands and thwarting ambitions, curbing instead of encouraging, taking away instead of giving. Was he not forbidden to go to Egypt? Wasn't the blessing diverted to Jacob when he desired it for Essau? God was hard fate. His religious sky was gray with never a gleam of color. Never allowed to travel a 100 miles in his whole life, Isaac was a fatalist, deep-dyed, with fear as its distinctive characteristic.

MAKING A BOY'S FAITH.

A man may change the faith of boyhood but it always is a struggle to do it. No less a tender spirit than Jowett was forced to think himself deliberately away from the picture that had dominated his early years. It was a great eye that followed him all over the room with its caption, "Thou God seest me," and the policeman idea was continuously at the threshold of his conscious thought. Abraham dominated Isaac and one day called him to follow him on a trip to the hills to worship. What boy would not be delighted to go with his father into such intimacy.? And this boy certainly left the old skin tent with high expectancy. Even the mysterious sacrifice added zest to the adventure; "what could it possibly be?" Then came the wind-swept top of rocky Moriah and he helped build up the stones all the while eagerly looking for the answer to the questioning mind. Then sudden horrow descended. His father was going to kill him! God was demanding his blood. And he felt himself lifted to the top of the rude pile, tied fast, and saw his father, with stern, convulsed face, get ready to plunge that gleaming knife into his throat. Could such a picture, burned into the sensative mind of a teenage boy, ever be effaced? Is it any wonder that such a God should always be a "fear"? The fact that sentence was reversed and the ram substituted would be utterly powerless to change its results. It was great for Abraham as he discovered new heights in the thought of God but it was the boy who paid the price with a life of night-marish religion.

THE MAN AND HIS WORLD.

It wasn't much of a world. Some men have spent their days within sight of their birth place and Isaac was much of that sort. Within the radius of fifty miles lived his life. In the incident of the lesson we find his farthest journey that brought him to Gerar within sight of the Great Sea. It brought an adventure in agriculture that gave plentiful harvest of grain as well as blows. It was not his territory it is true but it had been a part of his father's ranging and it held wells of water that had given Abraham a shadowy title thru the improvements. But the Philistines had wiped out the record after the old pioneer's death. And there's a mighty good reason for its being afterward, for man dared take liberties with Abraham. His son, who was inheriter of Abraham's place of leadership, had the same retainers and could have smote as swiftly as did his father when he rescued Lot, but he preferred to have peace not at any price but at any cost. He was the earliest pacifist. And it was in the days when force was king. Strong enough to fight he yet refused to struggle for bloody water, he preferred the labor of digging anew. This was no weakling son of a strong father but it was in an entirely new direction. It was the reaction against the struggle for place by the achiever of place. His world might be small but the Almighty meant him to have a place in it and if that were true then it would be his without fighting for it and shedding blood to get it. The later acknowledgement of Abimalech confirms it.

THE MAN AND HIS SPIRIT.

He could hold himself steady. In the midst of conflict, envy, confusion, deceit, there was no lack of self control. There was a touch of fatalism in it but it was magnificent just the same. We would have fought for the wells and have felt entirely justified in doing it. We are great on "our rights," Isaac on his "room." If we had gone thru the experience that he did with Jacob we would have blown the roof off the old tent and given Esau the filched blessing. Isaac didn't. He kept steady and sweet thru all the trying things that beset and thwarted his intent and that is a wonderfully great possession. It is a temper that is mightily needed in our day. It was and never is a mark of weakness. He who questions his cause is always noisy, he who is sure feels that he may well wait the vindication of the Almighty. To plod on in the little round and keep cheery when fate decrees differently from our desire is the evidence of a character of a worthy successor of the pioneer. For heroism in the humdrum is ever more difficult than among the blare of trumpets and the shouts of the crowd. And this was the type of Isaac.

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

FOUR DELICIOUS CAKES FROM FOUR CORNERS OF THE UNITED STATES

Who ever heard of a family without at least one "cake-eating" member? It's pretty certain that such a household doesn't exist. Usually there are several folks clamoring for cake and more cake. It's the one food which seldom has "left-overs."

MARGARET ALLEN HALL

It's also one of the foods which can be made just as rich or just as plain as the cook wants to make it.

For the Chocolate Fans

Rich Devil's Food Cake with Laplander frosting is a cake which appeals especially to those who like chocolate. Miss Margaret Allen Hall, nutrition expert at the Battle Creek College of Home Economics, gives this as her favorite recipe:

- ½ cup butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 4 eggs
- 2 cups flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 2 squares chocolate.

Cream the butter with one cup of sugar. Beat egg yolks, add the other cup sugar, beat until creamy. Combine the two mixtures. Sift baking powder with flour and add to creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Add melted chocolate and nuts, and fold in egg whites. Bake in deep pan, or in layers. Cover with Laplander frosting.

Laplander Frosting

- 1 egg
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 squares chocolate cut fine
- 3 tablespoons milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ⅛ teaspoon vanilla

Beat the egg, add milk, butter, sugar and chocolate. Cook slowly over flame, stirring constantly. When mixture comes to a boil, remove from fire, add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread.

For the Children

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, the Philadelphia cooking expert, has an excellent recipe for a soft molasses cake. "Give the children as much as they want," says Mrs. Rorer. "It's wholesome and nourishing."

Here is Mrs. Rorer's recipe: Dissolve one teaspoonful of baking soda in two tablespoonfuls of warm water. Add one cupful New Orleans molasses, a quarter of a pound of melted butter, one cupful of boiling water, and one tablespoonful of ground ginger. Add three cupfuls of pastry flour and beat until smooth. Bake in a shallow pan on upper rack in a medium oven for about 30 minutes.

This may be served with whipped cream as a delicious dessert.

Use Bananas, Too

- 1½ cups sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup mashed bananas
- 4 tablespoons sour milk
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1¾ cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup chopped walnut meats

Cream sugar and shortening, add the beaten eggs. Dissolve soda in sour milk and add. Sift flour, baking powder, and salt together and add. Mix well, and add nuts. Pour into two greased and floured cake tins. Bake in oven 350 degrees F. for 28 minutes. Ice with banana whip.

- 1 banana
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg white

Put all three ingredients in a bowl. With a Dover egg beater whip until mixture is of the consistency of stiffly beaten whipped cream.

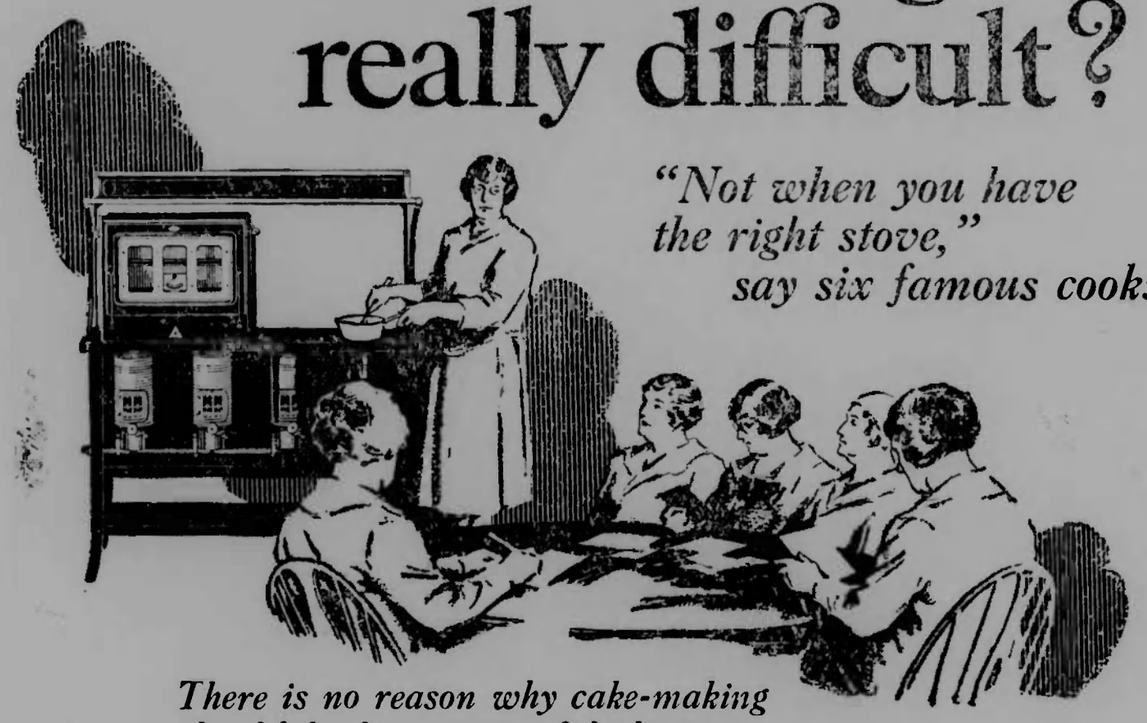
Sunshine Prune Cake

Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco, home economics counsellor, contributes her recipe for Sunshine Prune Cake.

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ cup milk or water
- ½ cup melted shortening
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 teaspoon lemon

Sift dry ingredients, except sugar; beat eggs until very light, add sugar gradually, beating with egg beater. When creamy, add dry ingredients alternately with liquid, mixing well. Add flavoring and melted shortening. Pour batter in a shallow, well greased pan, cover top with pitted uncooked prunes, placing the fruit in even rows, sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Bake in a moderate oven.

(Don't miss next week's special cooking article on this page.)



It's Worth It

Every housewife who uses an oil stove should devote five minutes to it each morning, filling the reservoir and wiping off the wicks. This care insures perfect flame and no soot or odor.

Vegetable Cookery

In cooking vegetables use as little water as possible. Have it boiling when the vegetables are put in, otherwise the vitamins, salts, and flavor are lost.

Is cake baking really difficult?

"Not when you have the right stove," say six famous cooks.

There is no reason why cake-making should be less successful than any other cooking operation—when the cook can depend upon her stove.

THAT is the statement of six famous cooks who have just completed a practical cooking test of the Perfection Stove. All six agreed in praising the Perfection highly for its baking ability, as well as for its general performance.

"Speaking of cakes, half the making is in the baking," said Miss Rosa Michaelis, New Orleans, domestic science specialist.

Delicate Angel Food

"An even temperature must be maintained while an angel food and other cakes are baking," added Miss Margaret A. Hall, nutrition expert of the Battle Creek College of Home Economies. "When I baked cakes in the Perfection oven I used a standard, portable oven thermometer as a check. The flame did not creep or crawl. You can depend on the Perfection flame to remain as you set it."

"My orange cakes and devil's foods were delicious," commented Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Los Angeles, household economics director. "The air circulation in the Perfection oven seems perfect. All excess moisture was carried away."

"It's the 'live heat' of the Perfection Oven which brings such good results," said Mrs. Rorer, famous Philadelphia cook.

"The Perfection oven is so roomy that there is room for several cakes at a time," said Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco. "And, through the glass door of the oven you can see just how they are baking. No need to open the door and lose any heat."

Miss Lucy G. Allen, of the Boston School of Cookery, commented on the visible oil supply. "You can see," she remarked, "whether you have enough for your cooking. If not, it's easy to refill the Perfection reservoir without soiling your hands."

High Praise

These are just a few of Perfection's good baking points which the six expert cooks praised highly. You will find many others when you bake on a Perfection. It's the stove which proves cake-baking is not difficult.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of This Community

By W. W. DAWSON,
Cashier First National Bank,
Oakland, Maryland.

MR. W. W. DAWSON.

The value of the Garrett County Fair can not be measured in dollars and cents, neither can the true value be determined in one, two or three years, but must be considered from several angles to ascertain if the undertaking is worthy of the support of the people of the county as a whole. In order to find out if the fair does warrant our support let us consider a few of its outstanding activities.

First: Any activity which brings the people of our county together certainly must tend to show a cooperative spirit and the value of this element alone will prove the progress we are making. I think we all agree that there is hearty cooperation in our county, but properly to develop it we should take upon ourselves the responsibility to do our part.

Second: Education is a predominating factor for our county fair, as it not only is the means to assist in this particular regard, but if properly conducted all our people will get results which will make us a better county as a whole. Competitive elements play a large part in the promotion of a better fair by the bringing of products from the farm, the household, the schoolroom and from various other sources; and it has been shown to have a decidedly benefitting effect in the better production of the articles produced or made by the individual exhibitor.

Third: From a financial standpoint we may not all agree as to the many benefits derived, but it is a proven fact that when better crops are prroduced, better stock is raised, or when the household or schoolroom turns out better work for exhihit that the country is not only better off from a progressive or learned point of view but is decidedly better off financially and we should not lose sight of the fact that we must be a success in this regard or we are not making satisfactory progress for the betterment of our county.

There are many and varied ways by which we could promote the interests of our county, but I think the GARRETT COUNTY FAIR is the one function which offers the opportunity to all for SERVICE.

Memorial Day Program.

Final arrangements have been made and everything is in readiness for the observance of Memorial Day in Oakland, according to an announcement made by one of the American Legion officials this morning.

All organizations participating in the day's program or in the march to the cemetery are requested to be in line not later than 2:15 p. m., Sunday afternoon. Autos have been provided for the old soldiers and they are requested to be at the Boy Scouts' headquarters at the time set above. Those having flowers to donate will please leave them at the American Legion romos in the Garrett National Bank building.

GARRETT COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Organization Has Been Active In Its Work During the Past Week Holding Conferences

On Wednesday afternoon and evening of last week, Col. J. H. Cudlipp, of Baltimore, and Mr. E. R. Jones, the Garrett county president of the Sunday School Association, held an efficiency conference in the Lutheran church at Accident at which about thirty Sunday school workers were present. Various methods for improving Sunday school work in the county were discussed. Plans were made for putting these in operation and some interesting addresses were delivered by Col. Cudlipp. The conference was very successful in every way and it is planned to hold a similar meeting once each year.

The Young People's conference held in the Methodist Episcopal church in Oakland on Saturday by Col. J. H. Cudlipp, State Counsellor of Young People's work in the Sunday schools, and Miss Lucy Trickett, County Counsellor, was attended by thirty-four registered delegates from various schools of the county, and two very interesting sessions of the conference were held. Various phases of Sunday school work among the young people of the county were discussed by the State and county leaders and by a number of delegates who had places on the program, and the entire session was instructive and helpful. Camp Royal, the Sunday school training ground of the summer months, to which an increasing number of young people of Garrett county, as well as of other parts of the State, go each year, received a good deal of consideration and the county expects to have a good delegation in camp this year.

A district convention for the Oakland District of the County Sunday School Association was held in the Presbyterian church in Oakland on Tuesday afternoon and evening of the present week, which was in charge of Rev. G. A. Teske, of Cumberland, and County President E. R. Jones. While the attendance at this gathering was not up to expectations, two interesting sessions were hled and a definite organization was effected. At the evening session Rev. Teske delivered a very interesting address on the eurrent Sunday school lessons, illustrating the same with about one hundred pictures. The officers elected for this district for the coming year are as follows:

President, Mr. Delbert Davis; vice-president, Mrs. E. G. Moon; secretary-treasurer, Miss Frances Miller; children's division superintendent, Mrs. B. H. Sincell; young people's counsellor, Mrs. Hervey Roth; adult department superintendent, Miss Marion Leary; religious educational superintendent, Rev. H. A. Grubbs.

Memorial Day Exercises to Begin at 2:00 P. M., Sunday, May 30th.

As annouced previously the American Legion will join with Garrett Lodge No. 115, Knights of Pythias, in the observance of Memorial Day.

There is a tendency on the part of the public to make of the day a time of festivities and pleasure. We have no criticism to offer in that respect, but we urge all to observe the occasion with due reverence. We do not entreat anyone to go around with a solemn face or present a melancholy appearance. Let us ever remember that although we now enjoy health and life, the time is not far distant when we will be numbered with the dead. Let every Knight participate in honoring our brothers who have fallen by the wayside. The Legion will assemble at their headquarters and Garrett Lodge will meet at Castle Hall promptly at 2 p. m., Sunday, May 30th.

If you desire an evening of pleasure, be at Castle Hall, Friday night, May 28th. Deputy Inspector Henry Lauer will present a three-quarter life-size portrait of Past Grand Chancellor J. C. Renninger to Garrett lodge that evening. Our lodge should be proud to have a picture of so distinguished a person adorning its Castle Hall. You doubtless remember that Bro. Renninger served in the capacity of Grand Chancellor of Maryland during the year 1921. At the last session of Grand Lodge he was appointed a member of the Grand Tribunal.

A special program will be given in connection with the presentation ceremonies. We are not prepared to state in detail just what the program will be, but you can depend on the entertainment committee giving you something worthwhile. Come and find out for yourself what is going on Friday night. PUBLICITY COM.

MARRIED.

Robinson—Rohrer—As the climax to a college-day romance, Miss Margaret Rohrer, the talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gorge W. Rohrer, Wayside avenue, Hagerstown, Md., and the Rev. Ralph Carlton Robinson, son of Dr. and Mrs. John G. Robinson, of Gettysburg, Pa., were united in matrimony at noon on Thursday, May 13, in Trinity Lutheran church, Hagerstown, by the Rev. J. S. Simon, D. D., in the presence of their immediate families and a group of friends of the bride and groom.

Following the ceremony at the church the entire party went to the Hotel Hamilton for the wedding dinner. The couple left on the afternoon train for a brief honeymoon, part of which they will spend in Bethlenem, Pa., attending the annual Bach festival. The bride attended Carl's private school in Hagerstown and was a student at Irving College and Conservatory of Music at Mechanicsburg, Pa. The groom, who is a native of Oakland, is a graduate of Gettysburg College of the class of 1923 and a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity and the National Military fraternity, Scabbard and Blade, at that institution. During his seminary course he has been a member of the well-known seminary quartet that has achieved distinction throughout the east and middle west.

The couple will remain with the bride's parents until July 1, after which date they will make their home in Landsdowne, Md., where the Rev. Mr. Robinson has been called to become the pastor of the Lutheran Church of Our Savior.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY ATHLETIC MEET TUESDAY

Will Be Held on Field at Mountain Lake Park With all County Schools Participating

The annual county-wide athletic meet will be held as usual in the base ball park at Mountain Lake Park on Tuesday, June 1st.

In view of the fact that many of the schools of the county will participate in the athletic meet, quite a large number of people is expected to be present that day, as has been the rule upon former occasions of like character and at which all enjoyed the day and the activities.

The committee in charge of the meet is as follows:

Mr. Oren T. Graser, chairman, Oakland High School; Mr. Roy A. West, principal, High School, Friendsville; Mr. Ralph T. Webster, principal, High School, Grantsville; Mr. Roger X. Day, principal, Accident High School; Miss Katharine T. Conley, principal, High School, Oakland; Mr. E. C. Ryall, principal, High School, Kitzmiller.

Getting Them Ready For School

In order that as many as possible of the children who will enter school next fall, may begin their school life, "100 per cent healthy," arrangements for health examinations of the five and six year olds throughout the counties are being made by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health with the assistance of the County Superintendents of schools, and the County Health Officers.

In a number of the counties the names of the children who will reach school age this year and who will enter school in the fall, have been obtained through the County Superintendents, and wherever possible, a preliminary child health conference will be held at some conveniently located center, either before schools close for the summer, or during the summer. The conference will be similar to the Child Health Conferences that are being held regularly in each county under the auspices of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, except that these examinations will be limited to the children who are getting redy to enter school in the fall. The physical examination will be made either by one of the local doctors or by a physician sent from the Bureau of Child Hygiene. The results of each examination will be reported to the family physician.

The object of the health inspections early in the season is to give parents an opportunity to consult their doctors concerning matters of the utmost importance to the future health of the children, such as the need for dental treatments, care of the tonsils, examination of the eyes, and for the undernourished children, change in diet, or general building up.

The fact that "good health makes educaton easier for child and for teacher" is emphasized in the letter sent by the Bureau of Child Hygiene to parents inviting them to bring their children to the conferences. "As you probably know," the letter says, "a considerable number of young children who are attending school in Maryland at present are not perfectly well; many are suffering from some physicial defect, or are undernourished, and some have serious diseases which have not been recognized. In the past it has been found that these children cannot keep up well with their classes and have to lose a great deal of time from school.

"The Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health is attempting this spring and summer to help in the examination of as many children as possible who expect to attend school for the first time in the fall. The results of these examinatons will be sent to the family doctor, so that he will be able to treat the children during the summer and have them in good physical condition when they begin school.* * * The examination will cost nothing."

The plan being carried out in the counties has the endorsement of the Parent-Teacher Association as it is in line with the nation-wide program of that association to secure the health inspection of all prospective first-graders before they enter school.

The blowing of the fire alarm last Saturday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock brought the volunteer firemen out in a jiffy. The fire was located at the residence of Mr. J. T. Duke where a wood house had become ignited from a spark blowing into it from a trash heap in his yard.

THE ART OF SELF-CONTROL —HOW TO ACQUIRE IT

By F. F. CORLISS

We are dual minded and the occultists teach us that self-control means controlling our objective animal minds by our subjective minds. In other words it is the joint action of the intellect and will compelling the lower mind to listen to the wisdom of the nigher mind.

All our sensations and emotions are manifestations of the objective mind, which function through the cerebral brain.

The subjective mind is the Divine consciousness in us and functions thru the sympathetic nervous system which centers in our solar plexus and forms our abdominal brain.

The subconscious mind is the executive head of our being and the storehouse of memory. It represents the real man, his will and intellect. Thru it we get our instincts and intuitions. It automatically runs the machinery of life, whether we are asleep or are awake.

Life is largely made up of our emotions and their name is legion, but when reduced to their lowest terms we have but four basic emotions, namely fear, sensuousness, sex desire and vanity.

All our emotions were given us to use and enjoy in a normal way. Fire and electricity are natural forces. We can use them constructively for our benefit when we learn how to control them, but if we use them blindly and ignorantly they are destructive. Morphine, strychnine and alcohol all have beneficial properties, but if we can not control ourselves in their use they are deadly.

Our animal instincts and intelligence reside in the objective mind whose positive aspect is desire and the negative aspect is reason. But for untold centuries men have indulged their appetites for the sensuous and sensual pleasures of life because desire in them was stronger than reason.

So when our emotions are gratified to excess—left uncontrolled—they cause suffering and pain that outweigh the pleasures.

The subjective is like a sleeping watch-dog who responds to the prick of pain quicker than to reason and it is only when will—the positive pole—unites with reason, the negative side of the objective, that they blend and become a stronger force that can control desire. This is the beginning of wisdom in man.

So the first essential to self-control is to awaken the will.

This wonderful positive force within us, working in conjunction with reason, can bring into manifestation in our lives and our environment things that to the uninformed seem miraculous.

The freedom of will gives us individuality. Its right or wrong exercise is what makes for nobility of character or what debases us to the level of brutes and beasts.

Fear is the first of the cardinal emotions. It is the prime cause of needless suffering; destructive to happiness and progress. It is the cause of anger, hate, jealousy, murder, theft and leads to doubt and despair. Abolish fear and substitute thought that are the opposite of its many aspects. When you have done this you have destroyed the tap root of the emotions that lead so many men astray.

Some people are continually harboring some fear, fear of distress, disease, failure and thus are ever absorbing elements that develop the things they feared and don't want.

Mind is magnetic and draws into our lives the characteristics of our predominant thoughts which show themselves in the company we keep, the books we read, the amusements we enjoy and in our conduct with our fellow man.

Our lack of independence and poise, of moral and physical courage are the results of fear. Some people are always dreading storms, in fear of accidents and death and worrying about the next to come. Others are always in fear of what people will think of them or say if they do this or that.

My neighbor's wife Mary, says, "John, Senator Pompous is home again from Washington and I would like to have you meet him."

"No, Mary; I always have the feeling that he thinks I am small potatoes and not in his class when it comes to discussing legislative questions."

"Now, John, don't be foolish in regard to what the Senator may think; be above such petty things. Remember that you could make him look like thirty cents if he tried to discuss the specialties of your profession."

"You are quite right, Mary. But I notice you do not follow the advice you have given me.

You can't go to the theatre or to church unless your hat is of the latest fashion for fear that people may say you look dowdy."

"Well, John, I believe you have me cornered. I think we are all too much governed by our base emotions, but if I can not control mine I wanted to help make a man of you, John, to help you rise above self-abasement and petty fears. Now, John, I want you to please me in this matter. I want you to go down and meet the Senator; draw him into conversation and incidentally tell him how you enjoyed his speech and the big appropriation he put through for our new school house. That will tickle his vanity and make you good friends. I am going to make the Senator's wife court our society and show her that we are their equals every way and not inferiors as they now think us. I know, John, that we all live in the excessive gratification of our sensuous appetites, our animal desires and that we have too many subtle vanities and too much self-consciousness, timidity and fear, that we may not meet the full approval of the opinion of others.

"This leads us into all kinds of extravagance, trying to have luxuries we can ill afford and trying to keep up a false front of living like our rich neighbors. Our objective mind, John, is the weak and wordly part—the thing that is the source of all man's troubles. We have got to talk to it like we would to an unruly child and make it obedient to the voice within..

"The voice within is the subjective mind. We must give it paramountcy in all our thoughts. It possesses will and determination and when in contact with intellect can carry us to the goal of our highest ideals."

"Well, Mary, you have told me considerable, but man alone is such a weak and vascillating creature that I believe the better way to gain self-control and make the mind within dominant is for every man to get a good wife for his moral uplift."

WHY is ESSO so much better than anything else you've ever used?

Why does ESSO do away with all motor knocks; why does it literally unlock all the latent power of your motor, make your car perform in traffic, on the hills, and over the long country roads in a manner so superior that there are no previous performance standards by which to judge it?

The answer is not difficult to find. It is because ESSO is not an experiment; not a chance product. On the contrary, ESSO has been developed out of the long refining experience of the Standard Oil Company (N. J.), and has been especially designed to give just this sort of super performance.

Test it today. Test it in any way you want.

Start clean with a tankful of ESSO. Watch traffic melt away as you beat the whistle. Start cold on the longest, toughest hill you know. Watch ESSO pick up speed, go sailing over the crest in record time—clean ahead of the rest of the field. That's exhilaration, that's power, that's speed,—that's ESSO.

After this test—we'll leave ESSO to your judgment.

Red in Color. Packed with Power. Costs 5c more—worth it.

"Standard" Gasoline

is the ideal fuel for normal requirements

ESSO is manufactured to meet the following special conditions:

1. For motors that knock.
2. For motors with excessive carbon.
3. For high compression motors.

6. For any motor from which the driver demands extra power and performance.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Olive Flick vs. James G. Flick. No. 2680 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procurre a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff, Olive Flick, from the defendant, James G. Flick.

The bill states:

1. That on the 10th day of October, 1922, she was married by a certain Rev. Price, a Methodist Episcopal minister, at Cumberland, Maryland, to one James G. Flick, with whom she resided at intervals in Garrett county, Maryland, until the 9th day of December, 1922.

2. That though the conduct of your oratrix toward her husband, the said James G. Flick, was always kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said James G. Flick without just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted her on the said 9th day of December, 1922, at Garrett county aforesaid, since which date she has neither seen the said defendant nor heard anything from him whatsoever.

3. That said abandonment has continued uninterrupedly for more than three years and in the opinion of your oratrix is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

4. That your oratrix and the said defendant, James G. Flick have had no children born to them from said marriage.

5. That the said James G. Flick is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, but his present place of residence is unknown to your oratrix.

The bill then prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff from the defendant, for general relief and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon, this 3rd day of May, 1926, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, in equity, that the plaintiff, by having a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 4th day of June, 1926, giving notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 21st day of June, 1926, to show cause if any he has, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

MEMORIAL DAY

Once more the day is approaching when we are accustomed to turn aside from our usual cares and vocations to honor the memory of those who sacrificed through four years of civil war in order that the nation might live. Many of the grizzled old heroes are still with us, but many more have passed to the distant country where there is neither war nor rebellion.

To say that the country is greater, inestimably greater, for their heroic sacrifices, is but repeating a truism. And the term "heroic sacrifice" seems the only one which even approximately describes their service to the country. Indeed the history of the nation, from its birth to its present greatness, is but little more than the story of the sacrifices of its heroic sons.

Many of these sacrifices have been on the field of battle, and the nation will never forget them—will never forget them in spite of the fact that there are many people now in the land, some well meaning, but the majority of sinster design, who decry patriotism as a time-worn doctrine, preaching pacifism and national submission as the latest thing in human doctrine.

Some of these anti-patriots would have the nation immediately lay aside its army and demolish its defenses—trusting to supine helplessness in time of national danger. To them the suffering at Valley Forge,the heroism of Saratoga, of Gettysburg, of San Juan and of St. Mihiel is but a mirage, and all war is a deadly error marring the pages of history.

It is not difficult to picture what America would be today had Washington and Adams and Patrick Henry developed into manhood as disciples of the doctrine of passive submission. Or, escaping this, it is not hard to see what would have become of the nation in the dark days of the sixties, had Abraham Lincoln been a pink pacifist and such sturdy warriors as Grant and "Pap" Thomas with the thousands behind them, followers of the doctrine that the way to make your enemy love you is to lie down supinely in front of him.

But so long as the laurels of the heroes of yesterday remain green in our memory, internationalism and pacifism will never become a real danger to the United States. That is why Memorial Day should be so important an event in our calendar.

BOOSTING THE HOME TOWN

Quite often we get good sound advice to the effect that we ought so far as possible to buy goods made in America. It is the theory of the protective tariff advocates that when American goods are bought and consumed the money goes to keeping American workers employed and American capital active.

And if it is true, as it undoubtedly is, that we ought to favor American goods wherever possible, it is also true that we ought in the same measure favor the goods which are manufactured and sold in our home community. For just as we are in favor of building up American industries as a whole, we should strive for the progress and prosperity of the town or city in which we live.

It is a good rule, therefore, to patronize the business men of our own community and to purchase so far as possible goods manufactured in the home community. A great many American cities feature this home consumption campaign. They ask the people to buy from local merchants, and they ask the merchants to push, so far as possible, the goods manufactured at home. And communities wheh feature this patriotic rule are always numbered among the most pogressive in the whole country. Their business slumps are few and far between and they are often prosperous and progressive when communities with less civic consciousness are floundering in the slouth of depression.

After all, it is the community in which we live that shapes our character and the characters of our children. If the community is clean, progressive, with a fine sense of civic pride, and with good local institutions, we are apt to be happy and progressive ourselves. And to form such a community we must keep the civic consciousness alive, and, as far as possible, keep our money at home for local development.

THE ORDER CHANGETH

The Civil War was fought to defeat sectionalism, to settle for all time that the Union is above all, supreme. The aftermath was not pleasant and there were many bitter memories. War, no matter how fairly and bravely fought, always has its hitter memories.

Sixty years have passed since the great struggle ended, and now sectionalism is passing, too. Two later struggles in which the boys of the North and South fought bravely side by side helped to wipe out the old feeling. The South has fully recovered and is now making strides along the path of progress and prosperity that may well astonish the world.

With the passing of sectionalism the old issues are passing too. The question of the tariff, for example, no longer brings an alignment of the North and the East against the South and West. For protective sentiment is growing more rapidly in the South than in any part of the country.

Good roads and myriads of automobiles are contributing their share. The northerner goes south in the winter and the southerner tours north in the summer. Each is finding the other a pretty good fellow and a good American.

Now we have a sterling American President, from old New England, journeying into the heart of the former Confederacy, taking with him not only a message of good will, but a modified theory of states rights, a theory which no longer divides us, North and South, Democrat and Republican.

The old order is changing, and the new order, if we stand firmly on fundamental principles, will bring us a better and even greater America.

GAUER

The social held at our school on Friday evening was quite a success.

A number of the people of this community attended church at Red House on Sunday evening.

Our school is planning to be present at Sunnyside exhibit on June 4 at Sunnyside Grange hall. We cordially invite everyone to come and spend the day with us.

Mr. Floyd Shaffer has several men employed hauling rocks and thus trying to improve the roads in this community.

NOVEL MEXICAN DISHES
Pacific Coast Expert Tells How to Prepare Them

Those words conjure up pictures of most palatable and spicy dishes to the Spaniard. And many an American has fallen for their tempting toothsomeness.

MRS. KATE BREW VAUGHN

Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, home economics director, Los Angeles, and author of several cook books, was taught how to make these dishes by a Mexican lady.

Fragrant and Delicious

Mrs. Vaughn gives the following directions for making enchiladas. The gravy may be made the day before. Its ingredients are: 4 ounces chili peppers, 1½ pounds tomatoes, 2 slices hard toast, 1 small onion, 1 pinch each of clove, thyme, pepper, sugar, and salt.

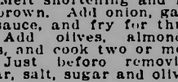
Open peppers, and if it is not desired very hot, remove veins and seeds. Soak in boiling water about 10 minutes. Skin tomatoes by holding over flame. Put toast and onion through food chopper and then strain all the ingredients in order to make a smooth gravy. Melt two tablespoons shortening in frying pan, add gravy, and simmer slowly until smooth and thick.

Filling for Enchiladas (Picadillo)

1 pound pork
1 tablespoon shortening
1 teaspoon chopped onion
Clove of garlic (chopped)
½ cup chili sauce
1 tablespoon chopped green olives
1 tablespoon chopped, blanched almonds
1 tablespoon raisins (chopped)
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 pinch salt
1 pinch sugar
1 teaspoon olive oil

Boil pork until tender, then chop fine. Melt shortening and fry pork until brown. Add onion, garlic, and chili sauce, and fry for three minutes. Add olives, almonds, and raisins, and cook two or more minutes. Just before removing add vinegar, salt, sugar and olive oil.

Make Tortillas, Too



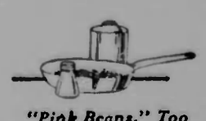
1 quart white flour
1 cup lard
2 teaspoons salt
Enough water or milk to make dough sufficiently thick to roll out like biscuit.

Divide into balls size of turkey egg and pat between the hands until thin and round and cook on top of the stove without grease. After frying, dip in hot gravy, place on plate, and place 1½ tablespoons of filling in center. Roll tortilla loosely and garnish with gravy, grated cheese, sliced opion that has been soaked in salt water a few minutes, a green olive, blanched almond, radish, and a sprig of parsley.

Spanish Rice

1 cup rice
1 tablespoon shortening
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 clove of garlic
½ cup tomato sauce
1 quart boiling water
Pepper and salt to taste

Melt the shortening, add the onion, and partially cook, not allowing to brown. Add to rice and fry until brown. Add the tomato sauce a little at a time, allowing each portion to almost cook dry before adding more. Add the boiling water. Do not stir, and allow to simmer slowly until done. If it is necessary to add more water, be sure it is boiling. Do not stir. Requires about 1½ hours of cooking.



Delicious String Beans

Here's a new way to prepare string beans—a la Ayre. Use 1½ pounds string beans or green beans, 3 eggs, and 2 teaspoons cornstarch.

Cook string beans until tender. Separate into bundles of eight or ten. Make batter by beating whites of eggs until stiff. Add slightly beaten yolks. Continue to beat, adding cornstarch. Place a bundle of beans on a large tablespoon and place in batter, working batter around the beans with the spoon. Fry in hot fat until brown on all sides. Serve with the following sauce:

1 teaspoon shortening
1 teaspoon garlic
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 small tomato
1 teaspoon cornstarch,
salt, pepper, and sugar

Melt shortening in frying pan and cook for a few minutes. Add the tomato chopped fine, and cook until almost dry. Add cornstarch and enough water to make a smooth sauce. Add salt and pepper.

"Pink Beans," Too

"Pink beans" (kidney beans) are very filling. Their Mexican name is "refritos." Take one pound of them, 2 teaspoons salt, 4 tablespoons fat, 2 ounces of cheese, and 2 small Mexican sausages.

Wash beans well, and cook with enough water to cover well. Boil about 2 hours. When adding more water be sure to add cold. When beans begin to get soft add the salt. When nearly and tender, drain juice from them, setting juice to one side.

Melt fat in frying pan. Add cheese and skinned, chopped sausages. Fry one minute, then remove to dish temporarily. In the same frying pan pour beans and fry for three minutes. Mash, add the cheese and sausages, juice from beans, and mix thoroughly.

"You will find these dishes very appetizing," Mrs. Vaughn says.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MAY 30, 1926

JACOB AT BETHEL. Genesis 27, 28. I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest.—Gen. 28:15.

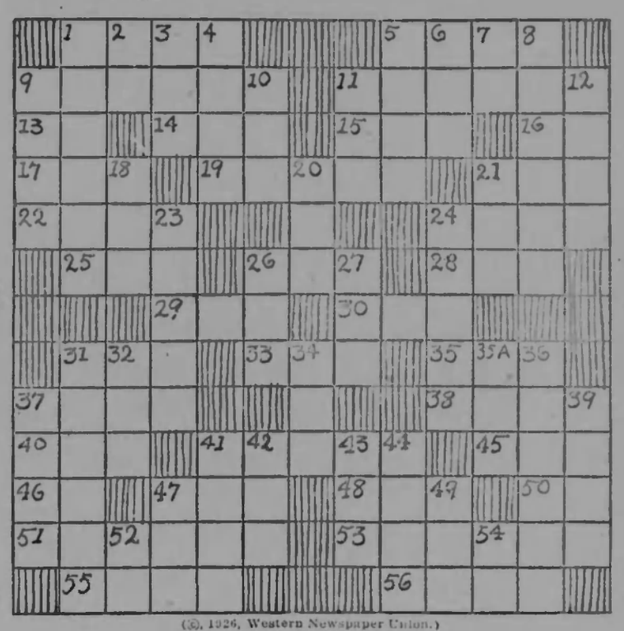
THE MAN FACTORY.

"The Smith Shop" said the sign. "Well," was the comment, "I never knew before where they all came from." It may provoke laughter but it is true that there must be some place for producing them or any other human. Where may we find the man factory? We have our "finishing schools" but where is our making shop? More than any other it is within the home. The tints woven into the fabric of the soul there are never lost. They may become a bit faded but they will always be a part of it and can be traced. The Church is like the ventilating system that attempts to keep air pure in which the work is done; the school provides patterns for the weaving but the real fashioning is the work of the home itself. Even the difference that appear in different individuals of the same family have their solution in those same workings. Take the case of the twins of the lesson. Isaac was old and left much to the tireless Rebecca. Esau was his favorite, a contrast to himself in his big boned form that rejoiced in the open and was winner in sports. Jacob, lesser in strength, and calling for more care was closer to his mother and was kept about the tent while his brother ranged afield. Forced by inability to get his way by blows he cultivated his wits instead, growing shrewd and tricky in consequence. Was he praised by Rebecca when he outdistanced the slower-moving mind of Esau? Unless mothers have changed he certainly was. Then that name of his was a terrific thing to hang to a boy. Give a dog a bad name and he is pretty sure to become one and the same process applies to boys. Think of the continual application of "Tripper" to this lad and imagine what its effect was likely to be. He would pretty certainly try his hand at it for no other purpose than to see if it were true. And his mother taught him that the supreme thing was successful achievement no matter how it was accomplished. "Do not lie unless it is necessary," was about the way she put it, "but get what you are after. The great thing is to get it." Under the circumstances the surprising thing is not that Jacob was what he was but that he wasn't worse. That he retained under such influence the spiritual instincts that made his later life possible is the marvel of it for the home with its favoritism and folly did stamp its characteristics upon the growing life. For out of it come all our men.

ON THE ROAD OF DREAMS.

Talk about the Annanias Club—Jacob could be its patron saint. With out a tremor he lied to Isaac and swore to it unblushingly until the coveted blessing was his. Esau was tolerant enough to wait for vengance until his father should be out of the way, so considerate was he of his feelings, but Jacob thought it better to take no risks. He packed up and broke the ties of home as he set his face toward far-away Haran. He probably sneaked off with only his mother's warm kiss for farewell. There was no particular hardship in the journey itself for any member of the trbe but it was risky to make it alone. Animals and fiercer men were easily encountered and to home-loving Jacob there was little joy in the separation. But he plodded on into the hills, passed Jebus where his mind stirred over the old tales of his grandfather's exploits, and finally reached the crest of the hills where the Jordan and the sea would also remind him of that same ancestor. Then as the dusk began to gather he found himself beside a curious pile of stones and recognized it as one of the markers of Abraham's journeyings, for he had left an altar upon this very height. Many times Jacob heard the story of his adventures and of his altar building at every stopping place and he would not fail to be carried into the presence of that fine old pioneer. And the God of that altar was the Lord of Isaac and as he looked at the great stairway of hills he went to sleep with a prayer as real as any he had offered under the direction of either Isaac or Rebecca. He wrapped his cloak about him, placed his turban on a stone and went to sleep. He wasn't sitting up with a stirring conscience because of his sin, nor regretting his aquiring the blessing. If he thought of Esau at all it was with a bit of a chuckle over the way he had fooled him. He was intent upon what lay ahead with no care for his own immediate past. It was to such a mind that God appeared in the night, taking the materials already in store and moulding them into a marvelous revelation of His continuous care for all the long way ahead.

THE RESULT OF THE DREAM.



There could be no break with one's past. The God of the vision was the God of the family and could not be run away from. It is a great thing that one has grown so familiar with the home God that He can be traced upon the journey into the great world outside, refusing to be left behind. It is the salvation of the marching youth. The ladder had its foot beside his grandfather's altar and happy is the father whose faith becomes the beginning for his child's ladder into a new life. It was a tragic confession that a man made when he said, "My boy heard me swear but he never heard me pray."

"God is not ancient history" writes James I. Vance. Jacob made the same discovery. Out of the dream hour leaped into the consciousness of the presence of God. A living Deity, speaking his language, interested in his destiny is the greatest finding for any youth. That hour of coming into the conscious awareness of God, call it conversation or by any other name, is always the high hour of vital religion for the experiencer and it marked the beginning of new life for the hero of this story.

Then he set up a memorial and marked off a bit of Holy Ground in his world. Whatever one may say about the Church its place has no substitute in making vivid and vital the committals of life to its Lord.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY

Of Oakland High School Graduates to be Presented Next Wednesday Evening.

The Senior Class of the Oakland High School will present their play, "Am I Intruding?" at the Maryland Theatre, Wednesday evening, June 16th, at 8:15 o'clock. The admission charge will be 25 and 50 cents.

The cast is composed of the major number of the graduating class of the school, and judging from former efforts put forth in dramatics by the same class, the play should be well presented.

"Am I Intruding?" is a thoroughly modern comedy, causing laughter galore, and based on a mystery plot that holds the attention from start to finish, and comes out quite differently from what anyone in the audience is expecting. There is really no big star part, all the people in the east having an unusual opportunity to shine as individuals.

Throughout the three acts of "Am I Intruding?" the rapid action brings about one situation after another in which are mingled thrills and laughs.

The comedy is natural, not forced, the characters have the little mannerisms which we see about us in everyday life, and the interest is well sustained until the final curtain.

Every character in the play is worthy of a star actor, and the cast has been selected with this in view.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of This Community

By CHARLES W. REAM
Coal Operator.
Crellin, Garrett County, Md.

MR. CHAS. W. REAM.

The Garrett County Agricultural Fair has many outstanding qualities that are needed in every community. One of its main values is to show to the public what can be produced on the farms of Garrett county in the way of agriculeural products.

The people that attended the Fair last fall well remember the exhibits and the remarks made by the visitors that they had never before seen such wonderful agricultural products. This alone is a great advertisement for our county.

The community booth exhibits shown by the different granges of the county are among our best attractions and show to the public what the granges are doing for community life.

Another very important asset to the people of the county is the educational qualities of the Fair. This is not only shown in the stock and agricultural exhibits, but in the exhibits of our schools, and the visitor who is interested in our schools can not keep from noticing the advancement they are making.

The Fair also has a social quality. It is a means of furthering our acquaintances with people of our county and those of adjoining counties. It helps us to realize that what helps our people helps everybody. Education and science has so linked us together that we are like an industrial plant. We must work in harmony to prosper.

I believe that the fraternal organizations of our county should co-operate with the Fair management and arrange for good, clean amusements to entertain the people. It is human nature for prosperous, healthy, happy people like we have in Garrett county to like to enjoy themselves, and I feel sure that both the Fair Association and the fraternal organizations would make it more beneficial by their co-operation.

ISRAEL SAID HE DID, WHILE NOAH SAID HE DIDN'T

Israel Ringer Paid Fine of $100 For Drunken Driving; Noah Moon Held For Selling Shine

Israel Ringer, of Vindex, who was unfortunate one day last week when he was overcome by "shine" and fell asleep at his steering wheel on his "Fode" car as he was ambling up Liberty street where he was overtaken by Constable Shartzer but who made his get-away while the officer was storing the car, came into town Monday and gave himself up to the State officer and went before Justice West where he was tried on a charge preferred by the constable of having been under the influence of liquor and driving his car at the same time.

Israel entered a plea of guilty and was fined $100 and costs, which he paid and was discharged.

At the hearing it developed that as Israel was coming into Oakland on the fatal day, he said that he had occasion to stop at the home of Noah Moon, located a few miles away, and while there Noah insisted that he purchase four pints of "shine", guaranteed to have a kick. Israel said he bought the home brew under protest, not being particularly fond of the brand Noah put up, but he bought it just to show that he was a friend and wanted to remain such, in cast that at some future time he could be accommodated with a drink should he want it.

Upon the information thus furnished, a warrant for the arrest of Noah was issued and in about two hours afterwards he was brought in by Constable Shartzer.

When arraigned before the Justice, Noah said he didn't; Israel insisted that he did sell him the moonshine. At any rate Noah was held for the action of the grand jury, which convenes on Monday and should that body find a bill against him he will have another opportunity to tell his story when he is brought to trial.

ATHLETIC MEET FOR THIS COUNTY IS POSTPONED

County-Wide Meet Will be Held At Mt. Lake Park Tuesday, June 15th.

The County-Wide Athletic Meet, which was to have been held at the athletic field at Mountain Lake Park on Tuesday of this week, by the Public Athletic League of the State and in which the pupils and students of the elementary and high schools of Garrett county were to have participated, was postponed, due to the rain which fell in the morning, thus rendering the field unfit for use, until ten o'clock on Tuesday, June 15th, at which time the meet will be conducted the same as was intended on Tuesday of the present week.

There are forty-five nurses engaged in public health work in the counties of Maryland—just five times as many as were on the lists in 1920 when public health nursing was first linked up with the work of the State Department of Health. In 1920, nine counties had some form of nursing service; now, each of the twenty-three counties is supplied with at least one nurse, and several of the counties have two or three or more. In each section, the activities of the nurses form a part of the public health program and are under the direction of the deputy State health officer or the local health officer, with advisory nursing service from the State Department of Health.

These facts were brought out by Miss C. Ethel Monroe, advisory nurse of the State Department of Health in a review of public health nursing in Maryland at the annual conference of State health officers and county and local boards of health, under the auspieces of the State Department of Health at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene at Baltimore last week.

"Encouraging as the development of public health nursing has been," Miss Monroe said, "if we are to keep pace with the opportunities, and with the needs for nursing service in each county, we should have at least one hundred nurses, not simply forty-five. Throughout the country, where special thought has been given to this subject, it is felt that there should be at least one nurse to each 7,500 of the population—not an extravagant estimate surely, for everybody will agree that any nurse who can give public health nursing service to a 'parish' of that size would have no time for loafing.

"On the basis of that estimate, since the total population of the counties of Maryland is approximately 740,000, we ought to have ninety-nine field nurses and that number and more are what we hope to have eventually."

The work of the public health nurses is financed partly from State, county and local appropriations, and partly from funds raised by voluntary organizations, county public health associations, local chapters of the American Red Cross and by the sale of the Christmas Seals by the State Tuberculosis Association. State or county funds finance the work of thirty-four of the nurses, and voluntary organizations that of eleven nurses. Allegany county, with a population of 74,201, has six nurses, the largest number of any one county; Baltimore county, with a population of 85,639, has five nurses; Washington, with a population of 65,402; Frederick, with 33,467, and Anne Arundel county, with 42,951, each have three nurses. Carroll, Harford, Howard, Montgomery, Prince George, Talbot and Wicomico each have two nurses. Each of the rest of the counties has one nurse.

Other phases of public health nursing were discussed as follows: "A County Child Hygiene Program," by Miss Louise MacConney, of Harford county; "Supervising Nurses in the Baltimore City Health Department," hy Miss Jane Newman, of Baltimore City; "The Advantage of a Postgraduate Course," by Miss Hermine Badenhoop, of Montgomery county; "Pre-paring a Nurse for Rural Work," by Miss Margaret C. Wohlgemuth, of Anne Arundel county, and "Voluntary Funds for Public Health Work," by Miss Margaret E. Newman, of Frederick county.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry A. Grubbs returned to Oakland Tuesday afternoon from Baltimore in which city Mr. Grubbs had been attending the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church for a week and where Mrs. Grubbs visited friends during the same period.

FIRST AID TEAMS

First aid teams of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company lined up for inspection at a competitive contest

Holding high the banner of accident prevention, telephone men all over the country are waging a campaign for safer working conditions.

Among telephone employees in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, there has been a very marked reduction in lost time accidents, since this campaign has been under way.

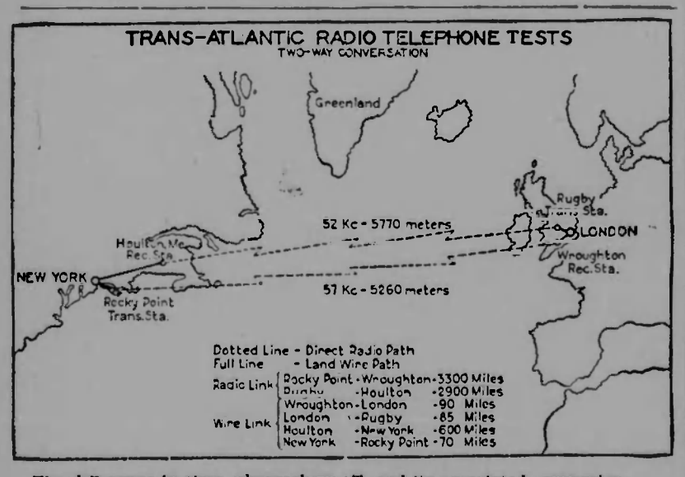
Last year among the 3,000 employes of the company's plant department there were only twenty-seven lost time accidents, a record that has never been equalled in the company's history. In 1924, there were thirty-three lost time accidents; thirty, the year previously; forty, in 1922, and 108 in 1921.

An important factor in accident prevention is a knowledge of first aid. First aid work was inaugurated among the forces of the telephone company in the fall of 1921, at which time sixteen men were selected from among the plant forces to take an intensive course in first aid training. These men were sent to Washington and given a course of training under the direction of Major Matthew J. Shields of the American Red Cross. On the completion of their work these men, rated as experts, returned to their respective districts, where they organized classes for the purpose of passing on their knowledge, which was planned eventually to reach every man engaged in plant work.

Following a scheduled and well-mapped program, the plant forces attended mass-meetings, demonstrations, and other first aid activities until all became interested in the work.

The first classes organized were among the supervisory officials in each district. When these had completed the course, they in turn became instructors to the foremen who instructed the men of their crews. With this part of the program well under way, all of the men on the "firing line" became active in first aid work. Within a few months after the inauguration of the campaign, 90 per cent. of the plant telephone employees had completed the initial course.

The men were then formed into teams which were drilled for competition with the teams of each district. In turn the districts were to compete with the teams of other districts and in this way, a great deal of interest was worked up among the forces. The forming of men into teams and practicing to perfect their individual, as well as the team, work with eyes set for the goal of supremacy in the organization, was an incentive of tremendous value. Step by step through the units of organization these teams have fought their way to the top—the successful team becoming the district champions and holders of the first aid cup for proficiency in first aid.



In the contests which are held in the spring of each year, the teams representing their districts are given problems, the nature of which are unknown before hand, with instructions to prepare the patient for transportation to the nearest hospital. For instance, a patient may be supposed to have sustained a severed artery, a fractured limb and sever shock. Bandages and splints are placed, the injured man is warmly covered and placed on a stretcher. In many cases stretchers are made of tools, with which the men work, put together with overall jackets or coats, and in this way, the patient is prepared for transportation.

With such courses worked along a well organized plan, telephone men have eliminated hundreds of serious accidents among their fellow workmen, and have been of material assistance in many accident cases with the public. Hardly a day passes that some telephone employee does not render first aid to the public.

Those who have witnessed such contests cannot help being impressed with the interest with which the men carry on the work of accident prevention and first aid. They realize the value to themselves, and vie with each other in demonstrating their ability to assist humanity in distress.

TRANS-ATLANTIC RADIO TELEPHONE TESTS

TWO-WAY CONVERSATION

The difference in time, phraseology, pronounciation and wave lengths played an important part in the recent transatlantic radio telephone tests. Eleven o'clock A. M. in New York is four o'clock P. M. in London, while differences of phraseology and pronunciation added interest to the conversations from the standpoint of the listeners-in.

"Americans invariably begin their conversations with the typically Yankee, 'Hello,' while now and then some Londoner used the equally typical 'Are you there?' To the 'Good bye' of the New Yorkers the Londoners were more likely than not to answer 'Cherio!'" says R. T. Barrett in his article, "Opening the Windows of the World."

In transmitting eastward, the speech is carried from New York over land lines to the transmitting station of the Radio Corporation of America, at Rocky Point, Long Island, a distance of some seventy miles. From this point it is transmitted by radio a distance of 3,300 miles to a receiving station of the British General Post Office at Wroughton, England, about seventy miles southeast of London. The land-line circuits of the British Post Office carry the speech current over this lap of the journey to the London headquarters.

In transmitting westward, the speech is carried over seventy miles of telephone lines to Rugby, northwest of London, and there picked up by the newly-built radio transmitting station of the British postal service, which transmits it through the ether to a receiving station at Houlton, Maine. This radio link is 2,900 miles in length. From Houlton to New York, the speech is carried over 600 miles of telephone circuits of the A. T. and T. and its associated companies.

The radio transmission from Rocky Point is on a wave length of 5,260 meters and the transmission from Rugby is on a wave length of 5,770 meters. The power used in transmitting from each end is about 100 kilowatts. Due to a special system employed in these tests, an output to the transmitting antenna of 100 kilowatts is as efficient as 300 kilowatts would be under the system commonly used for radio telephone purposes.

The present series of tests is a continuation of the experiments begun three years ago and is being carried out to determine the possibilities of giving regular transatlantic telephone service. It is simply a phase of the study of the problem of overcoming the great difficulty in long distance radio telephone transmission—the extreme variations in received signals due to continuously changing conditions in the intervening space.

At times, transmission conditions in America, in England and throughout the area that separates them are so good that even comparatively low power broadcasting stations in one country can be picked up by radio listeners in the other. At other times, conditions are so poor that no reception can be had.

In their statements to the press, telephone officials of both countries have made clear that it is not possible to predict how soon transoceanic telephone service can be made available. It is perfectly obvious that much intensive work remains to be done before an American telephone subscriber can take his receiver off its hook and call up a friend in London or vice-versa. This work is under way—the test of March 7 was a part of it—and will continue

The class night exercises will take place Monday evening, the 14th, at the Maryland Theatre, and on Wednesday night, in the same building, the graduating exercises will be held. Thursday night, the Senior-Junior dance will be given in Eagle Hall.

The grammar school held their annual lawn fete on the high school grounds, Thursday, May 26. Fifty children took part in the drills, singing and dancing. The trees, together with dogwood blooms and wild flowers, made a perfect setting for the occasion. The costumes worn were strictly in keeping with a May day fete.

A chorus of fifty children sang four selections, while the Stunt boys made the pyramid, the squash and snake with other athletic numbers; the Chimney Sweeps performed with a series of steps and Robin Hood and his followers had a contest of archery. The May queen was crowned and the May pole dance was performed with great skill by the children dressed in all colors. The Milkmaids did a fine dance, as did also the Villagers.

Miss Mildred Moore was the May Queen; Miss Lulu Sharpless was the good Queen Elizabeth; Mr. LaMark Moore was Robin Hood; Mr. Deval was the herald; Tony DiGustino was towncrier. Mr. Pyles had charge of the stunt boys and Miss Strachan was the leading singer.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Trout, of Pennsylvania, are visiting relatives and friends here.

Mrs. Annie Stemple, of Keyser, W. Va., is visiting Miss Rose Murray.

Mr. and Mrs. George Coffman motored to Keyser and spent the evening of Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coffman.

Father Stephens, of Keyser, W. Va., held services here on Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Lee, of Gormania, spent a few days in Kitzmiller recently as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Harrison Hart.

Born, on Tuesday morning, to Mr. and Mrs. William Bell, a daughter.

The program of the Epworth League for Monday evening, May 24, consisted of two parts. This was our anniversary service, so a brief play was given in connection with the ideals of Good Will Sunday. The other part of the program was an illustrated lecture concerning the work of the Methodist church at home and abroad, and was based on the idea of the theme, "To Serve the Present Age." One of the pleasing features of the evening's program was the singing of two selections by Miss Louise Everhart, accompanied by Miss Iva Bishop.

JACOB AND ESAU.

Genesis 33:1-11. Read Chapters 29-35.

...e ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you. —Ephesians 4:32.

THE DEFEAT OF BETHEL.

With soul elate Jacob continued his journey. Bethel's angel song was ringing in his ears and Jehovah was his friend. He had dedicated himself to the following of that Lord and plunged into the life beyond with sheer zest. His first meeting in Haran was in kindly service and joyous abandonment in spite of the word that might have warned concerning Laban. "O, yes; we know him. He was in love with God and man and Rachael added the lack in the fullness of his cup." Penniless he matched his strength and skill against her worth and gave a dowery of seven years that seemed but a few days. He was still in the glow of Bethel when he came to his bridal. Little did he dream that the veiled figure that greeted him and took his band was the shrouded Nemesis of that hour in Isaac's tent when for gain he made himself other than he was. In the dawn he knew. Laban smiled during his explanation. "It was the way of that world." Jacob should have known of course, that he had, though, after Bethel and Rachel, that all the world was new because he had changed. Because he was honest and had discarded his old trickery toward his brother these relatives would be the same sort. Those were bitter days for Jacob. He had fallen for the trick of another,been betrayed and over-reached and there is no record that the second seven years were as a few days. They were bitter years in which Jacob toiled, but in which he also determined to match his wits against that world in which he found himself. "If it was the way of that world," then he'd use that way, too. That's not ancient history. Youth with its high ideals and self-dedication goes out into the world eager and expectant to find its dream discounted and "big business" takes toll of his inexperience and his ideals. And he gets on as Jacob did by adopting the ways of that world. For he outmatched Laban, which is rather a sourse of rejoicing to the onlooker, as he went his deceiver "one better." But it is the defeat of Bethel. "I do not have to get on, but I do have to get up," was the shining sentence of a great soul. The tragedy of Jacob, as it is of thousands more, was that he determind to get on, regardless of whether he got up or not.

THE VICTORY OF JABBOK.

There came the day when it was neeessary to get away with the goods undemaged, for his success was creating an envy that threatened more than his peace of mind. So there was secret planning and the departure of a long caravan whose extent may be judged by the 580 animals that made up the gift of Esau, certainly only a small part of the procession. Jacob had made a regular clean-up. There was no lack of drivers, for he declined all of his brother's offers of help, so that there must have been in addition to his wives and children, a great company moving across the plain. Labon had reason to be suspicious both from what he knew he would himself have been doing and from what he knew of his daughters. Jacob faced him on the borders of Canaan with an outburst of indignation that seems to have completely cowed the elder member and they covenanted to keep apart in the future. On top of this successful venture Jacob had another vision of angels—he was in the mood to see God's hosts compassing him. But there was speedy distrust of their efficiency. That old wrong arose to plague him after twenty years of silence. Esau was coming to meet him with 400 warriors. When it eame to a fight he had never been a match for his brother of the sling and spear and bow, and if the settlement was to be upon the basis of that brother's choosing, there was need indeed. When it comes to a choiee between God and guns we are still prone to take the guns as a measure of defense, and Jacob lost sight completely of "God's host." To be sure he prayed quite a creditable prayer, but he set to work to answer it by his old shrewd tactics. He prayed for deliverance but expected attack. Didn't he divide the company so he would save part of it any way? Then he arranged his gift in the most attractive way for making its impression upon the mind of Esau who would see more fat cattle than sterile Edom had produced in all his years of ranging over it. And after his planning was done he sent his dearest over the brook toward Esau—he hadn't a douht in his mind that his scheme would work. Staying behind that nothing might be untouched and left in the darkness he had the battle of his life. Was this the road to the headship of the spirit? Would God accept its gaining by guile? Like the man in Hall Caine's story who fought the pursuing Troll until he had him at his mercy, and through a rift of cloud a beam fell upon the features of his antagonist and he saw his own face, so Jacob's struggle was with the God in his own soul, and when dawn came and "tripper up" went down before "Israel," who yielded all to his Lord, there dawned a new day for the people of promise.

THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN.

Having mastered himself, all other conquests were easy. The hold of the material was broken, the physical side limped, but the spirit strode to the meeting with his wronged brother with acknowledgment of his rights and the banishment of the old spirit of family feudism. Esau makes a fine figure, too, in this new day of reconciliation, and Canaan has a new start in the cementing of the old unions. And later they joined hands at the grave of their wronged father. God's love, like the tide upon the beach, washes out all the filth and covers all inequalities. Differences die when He enters the heart.

But Jacob had a long journey before attaining the heights of life. Coming into the rich valleys about Shechem there was increase of flocks and business opportunity too tempting to be passed and the caravan tarried for many a day. Trouble and sin drove them out at last and he set his face once more toward his place of dreams, Bethel. And then to his surprise he found that in his home were the clinging idolatries that he had supposed discarded with Jabbok. He had to carry his family with him if he would indeed be a prince of Jehovah. Sin in the home smudges the altar flame. Home life must keep pace with the Church's progress. Then they journeyed back to his place of dreams, back to the pillar of memory, back to that first altar where he had seen God, back to the holy ground of his earlier dedication, and there another altar was reared and a new benediction of Spirit was received with a joy that confirmed the princeliness of the man new made.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

The Field Meet at the Park Tuesday, has been postponed until Tuesday, the 15th inst., because of the rain which began falling about 11 o'clock, rendering the track and the grounds unfit for use. A large representation from nearly every public school in the county was present to take part in the events which had been scheduled.

While the rain was needed very badly many expressed the regret that it eame just at an inopportune time.

Several more families from various towns and cities have arrived at the Park and have opened their homes for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph, of Washington, D. C., are in their cozy bungalow, having as their guests Mrs. Joseph's parents, whose home is in Ohio.

Mrs. Skiles has opened the Allegany House for the summer.

Miss Mollie Hamill also has the Dixie Cottage open for the accommodation of the people who are coming to spend all or a portion of the summer months in the Park.

Mrs. Parsons, of Washington, Pa., is now in her cottage.

Mrs. Mary H. Effindorfer, of Shinnston, West Va., is here putting her cottage and tennis court in condition for the season.

4. That your oratrix and the said defendant, James G. Flick have had no children born t othem from said marriage.

5. That the said James G. Flick is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, but his present place of residence is unknown to your oratrix.

That Famous Old Highway

The finding of the original survey field notes of the National Pike from Cumberland, Md., to Wheeling, West Va., carries with it the probabilities of a mass of litigation to establish title, define the center of the famous old highway—the heretofore missing clue that was necessary and for the lack of which previous litigation to establish the line ended in naught—and to do away with encroachments by private property owners on property which now belongs to the states.

Several years ago litigation was started by officials of Ohio county, W. Va., to define the lines of the National Pike. The present Congressman, Carl G. Bachmann, was at that time prosecutor for the county and, in that official capacity, represented the County court. There was no satisfactory conclusion of the court action from the standpoint of the county government or the general public.

It was known in a traditional way, and to some degree in a legal one, that the pike in Ohio county should be 66 feet wide, 33 feet on either side of a central line, but there was no way to ascertain the central line. It can now readily be established since the finding of the original survey field notes. In very few places, if any, is the Pike 66 feet in width after it enters West Virginia from West Alexander, Pa., and winds its course to the Ohio river at Wheeling, a distance of 16 miles. It has never been known which was the National Pike after it merged into the streets of Wheeling, whether it was south on Market street to the suspension bridge, or on Seventh, west on Main, to the river front. At times there have been disputes between the several governing bodies in Ohio county, in which the State government was also a party, as to which was responsible for the repair and upkeep of the road.

The present owner of the National Pike in West Virginia—Ohio county is the only part of the state it traverses—is the State of West Virginia. Title was conveyed to the State Roads commission several years ago. But the state does not know definitely just what it does own, whether it has encroached on private property and where, and where private owners have encroached on the right-of-way. It seem to be true from an optical survey of travelers over the Pike in Ohio county, that the road is not 66 feet throughout the 16 miles. Indeed it is not easy to recall that it is 66 feet wide at any point. Along practically the entire 16 miles runs the tracks of an electric transportation company, and it has long been thought that much of its right-of-way is on property originally reserved for the National Pike.

All these points in controversy can now readily be settled by the original survey field notes which have just been found and turned over to the United States engineers bureau of the war department. Examination disclose that they are in a splendid state of preservation. It will be no difficult thing whatever to run the lines of the National Pike from Cumberland to Wheeling and establish the rights of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and define those of property owners whose properties touch the historic old roadway. In establishing the rights of these three states, it may, indeed probably will, show that many property owners have encroached upon the public property; in some cases, the reverse may be shown.

The statute of limitation does not apply in such cases. It will be the duty of officials to go into the courts to establish the lines. Aside from considerations of duty, the necessity for taking action is one urged by considerations of public policy and accommodation. The National Pike is the most traveled highway, it is believed, of any of the great roads; if not the most traveled, one among the most used. It is used at all seasons, but in the six months auto tourists season, many thousands travel upon it, almost continuous lines of motor vehicles moving from east to west, west to east.

It was for many years believed that the original survey field notes had been destroyed in a fire which burned the Capitol at Richmond years ago. It is due to the confidence in his belief that this was not the case of Col J. William DeGrange and his indefatigable work and interest in searching for these lost records that resulted in them being found. They were found in the posession of H. G. Shirley, chairman of the Virginia State Highway Commission. They were turned over to him by Henry Shriver, of Cumberland, whose ancestor, Joseph Shriver, made the notes in 1819-1821. They are now in the possession of the War Department and photostat copies have been made of them in anticipation of requests being made for them by officials in the states of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Col. DeGrange is a West Virginian who has been in charge of the records of the engineers' bureau at the War Department for 35 years. He was one of the organizers of the West Virginia Society in Washington, which heads the list of State organizations here as having the largest membership, and has been an officer in the society ever since it was founded.

Congressman Bachman has sent letters to Governor Gore of West Virginia, detailing fully the importance to that state of the finding of the original field survey notes of Joseph Shriver. Also a similar letter to Chas. E. Hiner, executive head of the West Virginia State Roads Commission.

There is perhaps no landmark on the old National Highway about which centers so much interest as the old stone bridge that spans the classic Casselman River, one miles east of Grantsville, Garrett county.

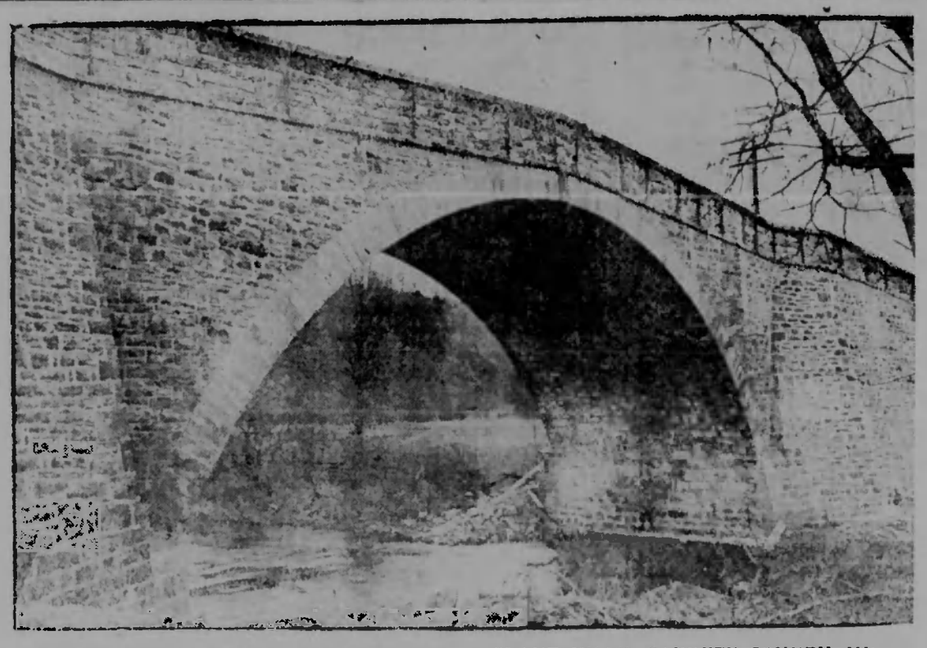
This old bridge has been widely photographed, the picture of the stately arch appearing at different times in many of the outdoor magazines and good roads periodicals with different bits of history concerning it. Among the views on sale at the town of Grantsville and other places along the highway none sell so readily as does this picture of the bridge.

Could the old bridge speak it would be able to relate many interesting stories as it is more than an hundred years old, having been built in 1818 by David Shriver, a contractor of Cumberland. The Shrivers in those days helped make history in Western Maryland. At the time the bridge was erected Garrett county was a part of Allegany county. Many of the Shriver descendants are still living and taking an active part in affairs of the two counties. Mrs. F. Funkenberg, of Oakland, is a member of the family.

The building of the huge, magnificent structure required several years, being completed, as above stated, in the year 1818. The graceful arch was constructed upon wooden falsework, which was held together with a key pending the time when the stone work should be completed and the bridge thrown open for traffic.

Considerable douht was felt among the natives and others as to whether the structure would hold, many predicting that when the falsewok was removed the stone masonry would collapse.

It is said that these rumors and suspicions so preyed upon the mind of the young contractor that in the dead of night preceding the day set for the formal opening, he, with a chosen few of his most trustworthy workmen secretly visited the scene of his handiwork and removed the key holding the great structure intanct. Needless to say their fears were unfounded. The old bridge stood then as it now stands, unshaken in its might, and the next day was thrown open with due pomp and ceremony.



In those days the travel upon the old pike was exceedingly arduous and made chiefly by stage coaches with relays of horses each twelve miles, their speed being about seven miles an hour. History tells that the greatest volume of traffic was reached in 1842 to 1852. As early as 1830 macadam was used on the highway, being so named for the inventor, John L. Macadam. This was packed to a depth of nine inches and made solid by the incessant travel over it.

About the year 1863 the stage coach method of travel ceased, thus doing away with a most unique and more or less exciting and enjoyable mode of travel.

For a number of years mail was carried between Frostburg and Grantsville with a buckboard and one horse. This mode was replaced later by a two-horse conveyance and now the mail is conveyed between the two points by automobile and a splendid bus service is used for passengers.

The old bridge marks another interesting and historic point in the early annals of the nation. Just below the bridge George Washington, then a captain in General Braddock's army with his men forded the Casselman River on their ill-fated journey to Fort Duquesne. The old Braddock road, still observable, winds through the woods and fields in this section and may be followed through valley and over the hills to the end of the journey at Pittsburgh.

In the year 1918 a celebration was planned to mark the centenniel of the bridge, but owing to the War the activities of the committee having the matter in hand were abandoned. Some years ago, the old structure, which had fallen into decay was restored to its original grandeur and remains through the years a point of interest for tourists and a source of pride to the people of not only Grantsville but to those of Garrett county because of memories, associations and historic interest.

HOW TO FIND GOD AND SERVE HIM.

By F. F. CORLISS.

The old lady had looked all over the house for her spectacles, when suddenly her husband appeared and she said, "Zeb, do you know where my glasses are?"

Zeb, replied, "Take a look at yourself in the mirror and I think you'll find them." And sure enough there they were pushed up on her forehead.

"For lands sake, Zeb, what an old simp I am. I looked under the bed and the bureau and every impossible place for those specs, and then to find that they were with me all the time laughing and keeping step, just makes me feel foolish."

"Well, cheer up, Mandy; you are not the only one who does foolish things. Now listen. The great majority of human beings for centuries have been searching to find God just as you have been hunting for your optical eyes. They have sought for Him in the infinite void and inaccessible places, while all the time He was an indwelling spirit, the very life, mind and soul of those who were seeking Him."

"Well, Zeb, you may be right. I have never thought of my Maker as being as close as my breathing. You have some very queer ideas, Zeb—that is, queer to me with my limited understanding. I don't know how or where you get them, Zeb, but I will say this that all the parts of your philosophy of lif dovetail together into one complete and harmonious whole, making a unity of ether, energy, life, mind and matter throughout the universe."

"You say, Mandy, that I may be right, leaving room for doubt. Well. I am either right or wrong; there is no middle ground. You can compare life to the putting together of a picture puzzle made of blocks. There is only one way to do it, while there are many wrong ways in which you can bungle it. Now it may be true, Mandy, that I have not all the blocks it requires to fill out the life picture, but we have all the blocks that have been given us, and remember that each philosophical block has but one place in which it will fit and make a perfect picture. One philosophical block misplaced spoils the picture of the cosmic scheme of things.

"Yes, Mandy, life throughout the universe is a variegated mosaic and each one of these inlaid blocks is endowed with life and intelligence sufficient to enable it to carry on and absorb into its skeleton frame enough of the ethereal substance to fill out the pattern of its little block and automatically slip into the place designed for it.

"Mandy, I have diverged from the thought I had in mind when I began to talk to you. Showing you how to find your glasses has prompted me to show you how to find yuor Maker. Many there are who have worshipped false gods, imaginary and imitation gods, and having been disillusioned feel forsaken until they find the one and only true God—the God of all peoples and all planets.

"The things that are eternal in time and space and the things that give value and meaning to life and motion to matter are invisible and spiritual. And if the things spiritual forever remained in the realm of the invisible, remained static and dpo mmn ble—remained dormant and static, the universe would have no meaning, no utility to God or to man.

"Hence it is obvious why God has strewn the infinitude of space with suns, stars, satellites and planets. Throwing worlds into objective reality demonstrates the potency of Infinite mind to mould the substance of His being to suit His will and meet His future needs, forming an arena for the objective expression of His higher attrbiutes of life and mind.

"It must be remembered that while God is the soul and source of all wisdom and power. His marvelous attributes have never been fully expressed. God knows what perfection is and like man has His aspirations and is ever unfolding and manifesting Himself in innumerable ways throughout the universe. But perfection in the absolute is, to Him, as it is to man, like the desert mirage, a thing that allures and invites on and as we near it, it ever recedes. A state of perfection would be ennui, satiety and boredom. Hence a spiritual life in a realm of invisible ether is an impractical, impossible existence.

"We know that planetry life, in time and space, is but finite and transitory, ever in a state of flux and change; that it is ever undergoing a series of births and deaths, yet ever mounting upward, ever progressing. Man is no exception to the universal law that governs the growth of life and mind as embodied in matter as the medium for its expression.

"God is the subconscious mind within us all. And only, in man and thru man can He express the highest attributes of wisdom, love and helpful service.

"Man is a complex—a composite of many antecedent minds, all of whom, though subordinate, carry the impress of the one infinite mind.

"There is some evil in the best of us and some good in the worst of us, but so we were made to be.

"Now, Mandy, whenever you walk the street or meet a human being, know this, that you nre meeting a partial expression of your God in embodied form. And if you would have the true religion of humanity, it is your duty to treat others as you would have others treat you.

"God as a Spirit, a static force, in nature is powerless to help man in his hour of need. He can impress us, teach us how to make medicine from His herbs, how to grow corn and wheat, but He can not deliver the goods to our doors in sickness and distress without the aid of man. It requires a surgeon to set our broken bones and remove the appendix; a Newton to teach us the law of gravitation; a Curie to discover radium; a Marconi to use ether for the transmission of thought.

"Jesus taught us idealism; so did Confucius, Gautama Buddha and others. But God can not be localized or isolated in any one human form. And His expression in all things is limited by man's capacity for mentally understanding Him.

"So, Mandy, if we really wish to find God, to know Him and do His will, we must stop looking for Him in the stars and far off invisible space or idolize Him in some miraculous, special creation. We must learn that He is one thing but of many parts—that He is the aggregate of all humanity, past, present and future.

"So as we learn to understand man better, to treat him better and give to each other a life of helpful service, so we shall find what God is and where He is nnd be co-workers with Him in the unfolding of His evolutionary plans.."

FIVE WAYS TO PREPARE CHICKEN

These Are Favorite Recipes of Four Famous Cooks

Chicken is a universal favorite. Very few folks can find it in their hearts to refuse a second helping of this appetizing fowl. Four famous cooks give tempting recipes for cooking it—fricassee, fried, broiled, stewed, and soup. There's variety enough for everyone!

MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, the Philadelphia cooking expert, has a recipe for a delicious chicken corn soup.

"This is an excellent dish," she says. "With a salad, coffee, and a bit of ripe cheese it makes a wholesome meal."

Chicken Corn Soup

Her directions follow: Singe, draw, and cut up as for stewing a two year old hen. Put it in a kettle, and cover with three quarts of cold water. Bring to a boil, and cook until tender—about two hours.

Remove chicken, skim the broth, and put it back on the burner. Add two medium sized onions chopped, a teaspoon of salt, dash of pepper, and a box of noodles. Add one pint of canned or fresh cut-off corn. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add the chicken cut into small pieces. When hot, serve. If too thick, add milk to thin.

Delicious Fricassee

For chicken fricassee, made according to the recipe of Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Los Angeles cooking expert, select a young chicken, weighing about 3½ pounds. Season pieces of chicken with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and fry in hot fat until brown. Place in casserole, add water and cook in hot oven, 350 degrees F. for one hour. Keep the cover on the casserole.

As They Cook It "Out West"

Pacific Coast fried chicken is delicious. You have the word of Mrs. Belle DeGraf for that. Mrs. DeGraf is a domestic science counsellor in San Francisco.

For this dish cut one medium sized young chicken as for fricassee. Sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Heat four tablespoons butter or chicken fat in frying pan. Fry chicken until well browned. Cover with hot water. Add one tablespoon minced onion and cook until the chicken is tender, using a low flame. When chicken is done, remove to serving plate. If any liquid remains in pan, drain off in cup.

Put 2 tablespoons of butter in the pan. Add 2 tablespoons of flour. Mix until smooth, then add 2 cups of thin cream, or cream and liquid left to make 2 cups. Stir until creamy. Then add one tablespoon finely shredded green pepper, and ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer a few minutes, then pour around, not over the chicken.

To prepare the green pepper pour boiling water over it and let stand 10 minutes. Shred with scissors.

Two Southern Methods

Miss Rosa Michaelis, New Orleans domestic science specialist, comes from the south, where chicken is one of the most popular dishes. She gives two southern ways of preparing it.

For southern broiled chicken, she says, select a very young chicken. Clean, singe, and split it down the back. It will almost lie flat. Season with salt and pepper, and brush melted butter all over it. Have a broiler ready over a moderate fire. Place chicken in it, and let it broil slowly for a half hour or a little longer if the chicken is not so tender.

Turn the chicken once in a while to brown both sides. When done, place on a heated platter which has been garnished with sprigs of parsley or lettuce leaves. Pour melted butter over chicken, and serve hot.

With Brown Sauce

1 chicken
2 tablespoons lard
1 sprig each of thyme, parsley, and bay leaf
1 onion
2 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper to taste

Clean and cut chicken in small pieces. Season well with salt and pepper. Chop onion fine. Put lard into deep pot. When hot add onion and let brown. Add flour. Let this brown, and add chicken. Let simmer a few minutes with thyme, parsley, and bay leaf chopped fine. Stir often. When all is nicely brown, add 1½ pints boiling water. Stir until it begins to boil.

If necessary, add more salt and pepper. Cover and let simmer until tender (about an hour). The gizzard, livor, and heart may be cooked with sauce, and served with boiled rice.

No matter if the chicken is old or young, you can make it taste good if you choose one of these recipes.

New Toaster

It really pays to invest in a good toaster which lasts a life-time. Many hardware stores are displaying a new blue glazed toaster. It makes four evenly browned slices of toast at a time. It does not warp. Very handy too, for crisping breakfast cereals. Its handle is ever cool. It can be used with equally good results on oil, wood, coal, or gas stoves.

FARM INTEREST IN RADIO

Radio is changing the marketing methods of entire groups of farmers, according to a survey made recently by the national farm radio council, says the Washington Post editorially.

The purpose of the survey was to determine just what radio means to farmers and also to find out the exact time in the day or evening when farmers make the greatest use of their receiving sets.

Ninety-five per cent. of the farmers who own radio sets think of their radios as a utility as well as an amusement device. It is a utility because it brings to them market reports from 24 to 48 hours earlier than are obtainable in any other way. This enables the farmer to market his produce to the greatest advantage. Weather reports often save him hundreds, perhaps thousands, of dollars.

The radio enables the farmer to keep in touch with the leaders, to hear their talks on matters of current importance to the agricultural industry.

The maximum farm audience over the radio is between 8 and 8:30 in the evening. The size of the noon farm radio audience is astonishing, reaching a little more than 60 per cent. of the farm radio owners. In some States this percentage reaches 75 or more.

Orchestra or band music takes first place in choice of amusement, educational talks and weather reports taking second place. Jazz is pretty generally given last place on the list.

Without doubt, the radio on the farms is a powerful agency for broader education, and for closer union between the farm and the city. One of the big problems of the day is how to keep the young people contented on the farms. "The call is to the city and unless modern science and invention can meet the demand, and satisfy the cravings of the boys and girls and men and women on the farms, there will be more abandoned farms than ever.

WIRED PHOTOGRAPHS AID BANK NOTE CO.

The telephotographic service of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company proved a real friend in time of need recently to the American Bank Note Company, which is one of the latest of the large industrial organizations to experiment with this service.

A client in California desired the company to proceed with the preparation of a large quantity of stock certificates, but the time allowed for delivering the certificates was rather short, in view of the work involved in getting corrected proofs, in preparing the steel engravings, in printing the actual certificates and in making delivery. In this emergency the telephotographic service was tried and a photograph of the stock certificate model was sent to San Francisco. The next day word was received from the client that the model was approved and work started immediately on the engravings in New York.

"ON THE JOB"

The part played by the telephone in aiding the police was strikingly illustrated the other day in New York City, says Telephony.

A telephone rang on the desk of Lieutenant George Thompson, in charge of the detective bureau at police headquarters. The call came from Arthur S. Clear, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who reported the theft of his automobile from in front of his house, but while he was still on the line Lieutenant Thompson's other telephone rang. The Scarsdale man was asked to hold the wire while the lieutenant answered the other call.

This call proved to be from a detective in Jersey City, who reported that two negroes in an automobile, which was believed to be stolen, were being held at Jersey City headquarters. The license number of the automobile turned out to be the same as that which the police lieutenant had just jotted down as belonging to the man in Scarsdale. Mr. Clear, still on the line, was notified that his car, he had just reported stolen, was at police headquarters in Jersey City.

This is the first time a stolen automobile has been reported found at the same time that it was reported lost.

SELECTING CENTRAL OFFICE NAME IS NO LIGHT TASK

Designations For New Telephone Exchanges Chosen Only After Painstaking Study

Some people have the idea that when telephone officials get ready to christen a new telephone exchange, all they do is to sit down and think for a while when—presto—a suitable name comes to mind and it is chosen. This, however, is far from the real facts. Naming a telephone exchange requires a long time and involves labor on the part of a large number of persons.

In other words, names for telephone exchanges are not simply plucked out of the air. They are selected only after much care and investigation. Whenever possible, names to fit the locality are chosen, but the first and main consideration is that the name shall be easily distinguishable in ordinary conversation; that it is not similar to the name of some other exchange in the same local area, and that a word is selected that is easily spelled. In order to be suitable for use in machine switching offices, the first three letters must not be used in the same area as the code corresponding to another name.

Accordingly, exhaustive tests are made by telephone engineers to determine the phonetic suitability of a word. Words are tested over telephone wires by different people. After a long list of words has been subjected to a suitable number of tests, ordinarily many thousands, the results are summarized, and those on which the smallest number of errors have been found are set aside for use, the name ordinarily being graded in accordance with its apparent desirability.

TELEPHONE NOW FIFTY YEARS OLD

On March 10, telephone people throughout the world in general and the United States and Canada in particular, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the telephone, and in this way paid honor to Alexander Grahnm Bell, the inventor, and Thomas A. Watson, his assistant, in the early experimental work. Each of the 300,000 telephone employees in America were furnished a blue button on which appeared a big white nnmeral, "fifty," to wear in honor of the occasion. Speech was first transmitted by telephone March 10, 1876.

Fiftieth anniversary celebrations were held in many cities throughout the country. In the territory of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company and associated companies, meetings were held at Washington, and Baltimore, and Richmond, Norfolk and Roanoke, Va., and Charleston, Wheeling, and Clarksburg, W. Va.

The significance of those memorial gatherings lay in the fact that it was the one event among many in which every telephone man and woman in the United States and Canada could participate personally. It probably marked the first occasion in the history of the Bell system, and perhaps the only occasion in the lifetime of the present personnel, when each member of the telephone group could simultaneously register by a simple and universal act his or her respect for the profession and indicate faith and pride in the future of the organization.

IMPROVING THE SERVICE

The 1926 construction program of the Long Lines Department, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, contemplates plant construction to cost more than $28,000,000. Plant costing approximately $19,000,000 was constructed in 1925.

The proposed expenditures for Plant construction during 1926 are divided among various projects about as follows: Aerial wire, including new pole lines, $5,160,000; long distance cables with associated pole lines, loading coils, building and equipment, $11,200,000; switchboards and other telephone and telegraph equipment, $8,130,000; line work not included in the aerial wire and cable projects, $3,860,000.

The new facilities will provide for increases in long distance telephone traffic and will also make it possible to furnish more dependable and faster service.

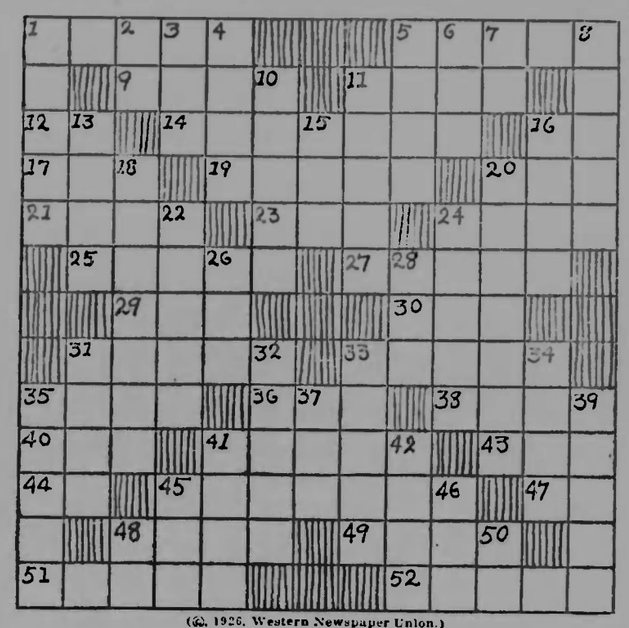
Feeding The Children



THE "old woman who lived in a shoe" had no monopoly on the vexatious problems connected with large families. There are plenty of women today, both old and young, who have so many children they don't know what to do. Even with one child, and living in a much more commodious domicile than a shoe, a mother has worries enough.

But the modern mother has one advantage over the ancient shoe-dweller of Mother Goose fame. The feeding problem is solved for her by ready-to-serve foods. The well-read woman knows that she can rely upon canned foods, not only for convenience and economy, but for their highly nutritive qualities.

She buys canned corn for dinner because it is rich in sugar, starch and fat, which supply the body with heat and energy. She selects peas and stringless beans because of their protein and vitamin content. Canned spinach her children must have because, besides being rich in vitamins, it serves as a broom to sweep out the digestive tract. She orders plenty of canned tomatoes because they contain both fruit and vegetable acids, mineral salts and all the essential vitamins. Prepared spaghetti, flavored with cheese and tomato sauce, and thus containing practically all the body-building elements, is included in her purchases. Baked beans and a variety of canned and fresh fruits she will also want.

It is not likely that children fed on these healthful foods will ever drive their mother to the extreme measure adopted by the old woman who lived in a shoe.

CHIEF JUDGE W. C. WALSH CHARGES THE GRAND JURY

June Term of the Circuit Court Convened In Oakland Monday

C. J. Gnagey, Foreman

Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock the June Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett County convened in Oakland. Chief Judge William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, is presiding during the term, who delivered the charge of the grand jury, of which body Mr. Gideon J. Gnagey, of Grantsville, is the foreman.

The civil docket of the court is short and the indications are that the term will be of short duration, depending somewhat upon the finding of indictments by the grand jury. A large number of witnesses have been summoned to appear before that body and testify concerning infractions of the law.

In charging the grand jury, Judge Walsh said:

"Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:

"During the present term of court you will constitute an important part of the county government, and the Court is confident that you will realize the responsibilities of the grave duties you are to perform, and will perform those duties with credit to yourselves and to the community.

"Your chief duty will be to determine who is apparently responsible for the violations of the criminal law which have occurred in the county since the last grand jury adjourned in December of last year, and upon the thoroughness of your work in this regard depends to a larrge extent the proper administration of criminal justiee in this county. Under our system of law no one can be punished for a serious crime unless he has been first formally accused of it by a grand jury and afterwards tried and convicted. In other words, the initial step in the prosecution of criminal offenses must be taken by a grand jury.

"We are told, and I believe truthfully told, that crime is becoming more and more prevalent in America and an almost limitless number of reasons are assigned for this condition by various people, but, whatever the real reason may or may not be, it is undeniably true that in this State the primary duty of checking this tendency, wherever it exists, and of preventing its inception where it does not exist, rests upon grand juries. You know from the newspapers where crimes are committed publicly; you know from your own observation whether or not the laws are being observed in the localities in which you respectively reside, and you can call upon the State's Attorney, the Sheriff and his deputies, and all other peace officers in the county for additional information regarding the condition of affairs throughout the county. Of course, you gentlemen are not detectives yourselves, and you are not supposed to spend your own time and the county's money in personally seeking out those who have violated the law or in securing witnesses to these violations, but you have the right and it is your duty to bring before you such persons as you have proper reason to think know of the commission of crimes and to require the officers above mentioned to give you the names of witnesses and all other information they possess regarding the non-observance of the law. Furthermore, it is the duty of these officers to investigate all criminal violations and to apprehend those whom they think have committed them; it is your duty to report to the Court any dereliction of these duties which you may find among these officers. You are the only official body which can do this, and your failure to do it in any proper case may produce very grave and harmful results. This brief outline will, I trust, serve to illustrate to you how really important your duties are and how much the proper performance of them has to do with the prevention and punishment of crime.

"In referring to the alleged prevalence of crime in different parts of the country, I do not wish to be understood as stating that such a condition exists in Garrett county, nor were any references to your duty to check up on the various county officials intended as an intimation that any of them have been lax in the performance of their duties. As a matter of fact, so far as the Court is advised, conditions throughout the county are excellent, and it is a matter of gratification to the Court to be able to say that we believe all the county officials are prompt, expeditious and efficient in performing their work. The Court knows of but few criminal violations of a serious nature, nor are we advised of the existence of any large number of lesser violations, but the fact that the Court knows of only a small number of criminal offenses does not mean that others have not been committed, nor does it mean that you should be any less active, vigilant and careful in your investigations. The Court is by no means omniscient,and many things may and do occur of which we have no knowledge and no means of obtaining knowledge, and even if there are no large number of violations, the surest means of preventing an increase is the prompt and vigorous prosecution of those which have occurred.

"There was at one time some question as to whether or not the various laws of the State of Maryland relating to or prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors had been repealed by the adpotion of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, but it has been determined by the Courts that these laws are still in force, and hence any person whom you find has violated them should be indicted. Some difficulty is being experienced in various parts of the country with the enforcement of prohibition ,and in many places differences of opinion exist regarding the wisdom of such laws, but so far as the Courts are concerned, and so far as officials charged with the duty of enforcing the laws of the land are concerned, there is only one attitude to take on the matter—whatever law exists must be enforced. If the people of the country do not think that some particular law is a proper one, there is a constitutional way in which

What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of This Community

By H. T. PORTER,
Prominent Jersey Breeder of Oakland

MR. H. T. PORTER.

Leaders in any line of industry are those men who visualize future possibilities and work and study to make their dreams come true. The realization of an ambition is what men call success.

In agriculture, with its many different branches, there is room, even in small communities, for several leaders, and an opportunity for the realization of many dreams and the gratification of great ambitions.

An agricultural fair, as the name implies, is an exposition of the products of the soil. And since nothing is great or small, except by comparison, the Garrett County Fair offers to the individual an opportunity to ascertain the relative merits of the products of his or her brain, hands and soil.

The ideas and methods which have been most successful in producing the desired results are the ones that should be more generally employed. The exchange of ideas and comparison of methods then becomes of even more importance than the comparison of the products themselves.

By taking advantage of these opportunities, all those who attend the Garrett County Fair will come to realize that it is primarily an educational institution and should mean opportunity to each individual.

The officers of the Garrett County Fair are endeavoring to cover the entire field of agriculture as it relates to Garrett county and adjoining counties, not only by having on exhibition the best of material products, but by divulging the methods that have been employed to make these exhibits of more than ordinary merit.

No matter in what phase of agriculture you are interested, the Garrett County Fair will be an opportunity, and should be an inspiration for each individual who attends or who may have an exhibit on display at the Fair.

Sunnyside Group Exhibit.

A splendid exhibit was given at Sunnyside Grange Hall, Friday, June 4th, with nine public schools of the Sunnyside group represented.

The exhibits showed the varied types of educational work which is being carried on throughout Garrett county as well as the progress being made over last year's work.

Due to weather conditions, the athletic features of the day's program was greatly hindered.

The schools that received the highest number of points were as follows: Lynndale, first; Cherry Creek, second; Bernard, third.

"TOURISTS" TEST LIQUOR AT INNS NEAR GRANTSVILLE

Visitors Were Federal Enforcement Officers Harvey and Jarvis. Who Made a Still Hunt

Two tired "tourists" drove westward from Frostburg Saturday afternoon on the National Highway and stopped at several roadhouses for refreshment. They halted first at Ruffo's Inn, seven miles west of Frostburg, at the top of Meadow Mountain in Garrett county, and ordered liquor, as it was a cool, raw drive over the intervening mountains. After the alleged liquor was served, the tourists —they were Federal Prohibition Officers William R. Harvey and Cleveland D. Jarvis—produced search warrants. The officers arrested Tommy Ruffo, the alleged proprietor, charged with sale and possession.

Ruffo was taken to Grantsville and given a hearing before Justice Zeller, who held him under a State charge preferred by the officers.

Officers Harvey and Jarvis also stopped at Hilltop Inn,near Grantsville, where they allege they made a purchase of liquor. They also produced search warrants at this Inn and after making an inspection of the premises, they claim to have found a quantity of liquor which was hidden on the property. Frank Knecht, the barkeeper, was arrested and taken to Grantsville where he was held under $500 bond by Magistrate Zeller for his appearance at the present term of the Garrett County Circuit Court in session in Oakland.

From Hill Top Inn the officers went to the farm of John Wilburn, near Grantsville. They say a young man whom they identified as Wilburn's son, ran to the woods with a seventy-five gallon still on his back. The officers gave chase and the still becoming too weighty, the carrier dumped it down on the road for the officers to take home as a souvenir. Harvey and Jarvis continued deeper into the woods and found a twenty-five gallon still and two barrels of whiskey mash. Wilburn was arrested, charged with manufacture and possession, and was held under a bond of $1000 for the action of the Garrett county grand jury.

They also dropped in on George Swauger, a farmer, looking for a reported still, but met with no success. Harvey says Swauger had some fifteen gallons of homebrew beer cooling on the back porch and offered the officers a taste. He was cited to appear in Cumberland Monday and explain to the United States Commissioner.

MASH FOUND IN SPRING HOUSE ON SAVEDGE FARM

Alleged Owner Reported to Have Left State—Kight Farm Also Raided; Home Brew Found

State and Federal officers made several raids in this community during the past few days which netted one arrest and the seizure and destruction of a quantity of mash and more than a hundred bottles of "home brew."

Saturday afternoon Sheriff Guy Yutzy and Deputy Sheriff W. D. Casteel, acting upon evidence which recently came into their possession that all was not what it should be on a farm located near Deer Park, which is owned by Charles R. Savedge, visited the place and in a spring house they found two barrels of mash, alleged to have been the property of Savedge. The mash was destroyed and search was instituted for Savedge, but he could not be found. Yesterday word reached the sheriff's office that Savedge had left the State and was at some point in Virginia.

Monday evening Prohibition Enforcement Officers Harvey and Jarvis accompanied by Sheriff Yutzy and Deputy Casteel went to the farm of E. G. Kight, a few miles south of Oakland, where a search of the premises resulted in the discovery and confiscation and later the destruction of 134 bottles of "home brew" beer.

The arrest of Kight's son, a youth of about nineteen years, followed, who gave bond for his appearance. The farm is operated by young Kight and his brothers, the father being employed at some point in Ohio.

Harry Mosser, of Swanton, who recently sent a letter to Deputy Sheriff Casteel that he would not be taken alive, for whom a warrant was issued two weeks ago for having assaulted L. H. Friend, of Swanton, was captured by Sheriff Yutzy, Deputy Casteel and Constable Shartzer early on Saturday morning in Swanton. Mosser was found asleep by the officers and he accompanied them very peacefully to Oakland where he is being held in jail pending a hearing to be given him tomorrow by Justice Edward I. West.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

BEAUTY AND EXPLORER

TRUESDALE ROVER, the famous explorer, traveler and hunter, never failed to dazzle and awe the young women who had the honor to be introduced to him at the social gatherings at which he was in such great demand. So now, sitting behind a potted palm with beautiful young Magazine Ootie at Mrs. Piggyback's reception, he prepared for an easy conquest as he launched into a description of the China sea snoottish, which climbs aboard ships and bites sailors in half.

"Yes," she nodded brightly. "I've seen them. Aren't they exciting? But the sea oxen off the coast of Labrador are much more dangerous, because they hunt in flocks and butt holes into boats with their heads. Have you seen them?"

"Eer—no," admitted Rover. "Now, the flying weasel of southern Zanzibar is a curious animal. It flies revolving with its tail in its mouth, for great distances, and yet never has been known to grow dizzy."

"Oh, yes, I've seen them often," replied Magazine brightly. "But I prefer to watch the Hellespont camels of central Hindustan. They walk backwards, you know, on their front legs, yet never bump into a thing, somehow. You've seen them, of course?"

"Well—er—no," said Rover, reluctantly. "I must tell you of the Bulgarian goulash bug, which sings like a mouth organ and drinks through a straw. When I first—"

"Oh, yes!" she interrupted. "I've watched them often. Have you ever seen the Patagonian pinmdog, which—"

"Stop!" cried Truesdale Rover hoarsely. "How on earth did you, at your age, get to see all of these things in all these places?"

But Rover had staggered off to 'phone in his resignation to the Geographical society.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

CO-OPERATION

IT IS remarked by observing students of cause and effect that, in all activities of minds and hands, we as a people are decidedly delinquent in co-operation.

In other words, instead of working together as a whole, we are at odds, leaving off the mastery of today's perplexities until tomorrow and likely as not forgetting them, or putting them off altogether in pursuit of outside activities of an alien nature.

In the office and in the home, if you will look about you with impartial eyes, you will not be long in discovering that there is frequent lack of co-operative forces, due not so much to the individual workers, but to the inefficiency of those whose duty it is to direct, encourage and spur up workers to do their best and keep in touch and tune with others.

In great office buildings, or in factories where large numbers of both sexes are employed, there are efforts made to bring about the full co-operation of forces—a work filled with difficulties, calling every hour for rare patience and diplomacy.

If examined critically these efforts will be found meager as compared with what might be done if co-operation of forces should be organized and directed by competent captains.

While results in the last decade have improved, they are far from being wholly satisfactory.

There still is much waste of energy and loss of time without any apparent curtailment of expense to the anxious, hard-working manufacturers, merchants and employers generally who provide the money for pay days, irrespective of the state of business.

The care-worn housewives have similar experiences, and meet like conditions simply because of a laxity in organization and the co-operation of forces.

For all deficiencies, whether mental or physical, we must in some way or another pay the penalties imposed by cause and effect upon all mankind.

The thing to do to avoid these oft-repeated impositions is to bring about a more effective means in the co-operation of forces, not only in the home and the factory, but in every department of the state and the nation.

Not until this shall be done can we escape burdensome taxes or hope for reduced prices in anything that goes upon our backs, into our homes and upon our tables.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"ALL FOR A SONG"

"HE HAS sold his future for a song," they said of a rich man's son who, instead of taking advantage of the unusual opportunities open to him for a worth-while career, was whiling away his golden years on the Great White Way.

"All for a song" has come to mean to us "paying too much for a whistle," any undue sacrifice or waste for something that is worthless or only of transient moment, particularly the superficial. It has come down to us from the day when its significance was literal.

Queen Elizabeth, as a token of her appreciation of the poet, Edmund Spencer, had ordered Lord Burleigh to present him with £100, which in those days was a small fortune. Upon this Lord Burleigh is said to have exclaimed: "All this for a song!"

WHO WOULD HAVE GOLD?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHO would have gold? It isn't hard to gain:
Go plant the seed, the Lord will send the rain

Who gold desires? Then sow the rolling hill,
Or plant a little garden, if you will,
Or put a box upon a window-sill.

And plant a bulb, or give a root a hold,
And then some day observe a flow'r unfold.
It isn't hard to gain—who would have gold?

The summer sun will ripen all your wheat,
A yellow rose will make your garden sweet,
A yellow jonquil cheer your window-seat.

Upon your path the summer's petals fall,
And autumn's yellow leaves adorn the wall.
Who would have gold? It isn't hard at all!

CHEESE AS FOOD

CHEESE is one of our most valuable protein foods; is concentrated and has very little waste. When the price is high compare it with meat, one of the other proteins which we all like, and notice the difference in waste.

Cheese Omelet.

Beat two egg yolks until thick, add two tablespoonfuls of water, salt and pepper to taste. Beat the whites until stiff and add one cupful of grated cheese. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a hot, smooth frying pan; when hot pour in the lightly mixed omelet. Cook until well set, place in the oven to finish cooking on the top. Serve at once on a hot platter.

Welsh Rarebit.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended add one cupful of hot milk; cook until smooth and creamy. Add one cupful of grated cheese and when the cheese is melted serve on buttered toast or hot crackers. To make the dish a little more tasty add half a dozen chopped olives.

Cheese Fondu.

Pour one cupful of scalded milk over one cupful of soft bread crumbs, add three-fourths of a cupful of soft cheese cut into bits, one tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Beat five egg yolks until thick, add to the cheese mixture and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a well-greased dish for twenty minutes or until puffy and cooked to the center.

Cheese and Celery Salad.

Select firm, crisp, tender celery and choose the stalks which have deep grooves. Cut into inch pieces and fill with seasoned cream cheese to which chopped onion, green pepper and nuts have been added. Heap a half dozen of these filled stalks on lettuce and serve with a French dressing.

This same method may be used for longer stalks and serve them as a salad accompaniment.

Hot Ham and Tomato Sandwiches.

Saute thin slices of lean ham very quickly in a frying pan. Peel and slice thin some ripe tomatoes. Have ready slices of white bread cut one-fourth inch thick and lightly toasted. Spread toast with salad dressing, cover with ham, then a slice of tomato and spread with salad dressing and chopped lettuce leaves. Cover with toast spread on one side with salad dressing. Cut into triangles and garnish with sliced pickle. Serve with coffee.

Baked Mackerel.

If salt soak over night, skin side up, changing the water several times. Put to bake skin-side down, adding a few teaspoonfuls of water. Cook 20 minutes, or until the fish loosens from the bones. After ten minutes cover with sweet cream and baste often during the baking. Serve with sauce poured over the fish.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SUNDAY, JUNE 13, 1926.

JOSEPH'S FIDELITY.

Genesis 39:1-33. Read Chapters 37 and 40.

Seeist thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings —Prov. 22:29.

CHIPS FROM THE OLD BLOCK.

Jacob brought much more than he expected from Haran. Those years of battling with dishonesty had filled his tent with children whose entry into Canaan held little helpfulness for its inhabitants. Swift to strike, ungovernable in temper, self-willed and cruel they were a problem to the patriarch even tho they were a source of power. Joseph was not more than five or six when his father crossed the Jabbok and while the difference in motherhood must not be forgotten, there must be another explanation for the character of the boys. For Joseph is princely in his make up and an idealist in his thinking. Yet all are chips from the old block of Jacob. The elder boys had been guided solely by the hatreds of Haran, and Jacob had been too busy to give them much attention. He who cheated Laban was anything but a model for his boys' honesty. He who tricked his way to success; who played the game with the best of the Haranites and chuckled over his winnings; who forgot Bethel in his business should not have been surprised at seeing the same traits developed in the boys who called him father. With Joseph it was different. Jabbok had intervened and Bethel had been climbed for a renewal of the consecration of the earliest day. Jacob was now Israel, a prince with power with God and men. Moreover the boys had taken over the herding of the sheep so that there were many days when no task occupied the hands of the energetic Jacob. Rachel was dead and the whole heart of their father was wrapped up in her children of his love. To Joseph, just entering his teens, he gave all the best of both Bethel and Jabbok, with long hours spent in hiking about the country, in sleeping together out under the stars, in lying luxuriously beside the lone camp fire from which the odor of the fish new caught, or the bird new snared stirred the hunger of them both. Resourcefulness, ability to stand hardship, the willingness to work and do his share were all learned in these forming days. Best of all the God of his father became the reality of his life. He was a chip from Israel's finest development while the rest of the boys who claim no admiration from any of us were from his worst. They are not to be defended but they can be explained.

DIGGING STEPS IN THE SIDE OF THE SLAVE PIT.

No one likes to be told on, still less to have one's future discounted but when one doing it is paraded as a model then Little Lord Fauntelroy is pretty certain to have a bad hour somewhere. Models not big enough to take care of all contingencies are in a perilous situation as Joseph discovered. Jacob was attempting to make him a prig after all the good things he had done for him. Sixty miles on an errand reveals the dependability of the youngster and the distance gave the opportunity for the exercise of the worst passions of his brothers who sold him into slavery and lied to cover it, even as Jacob had done. In Egypt, in the midst of a civilization ages beyond that of the skin tent Joseph was put in school in the finest surroundings possible, the household of a cultivated, trusted officer of the Court. Not knowing a word of the language Joseph used his keen wits and resourcefulness to good advantage and instead of being sullen served with his "gang" in a way that caught the attention of the overseer. "You got a bargain in that Hebrew boy," he told Potiphar and his master began to watch him, noting the difference from the attitude of fear of the ordinary slave. Presently as he learned speech he was made the head of the "gang," then he was promoted to the house staff and presently he was the chief steward under whose direction all the affairs of the men's household came. He was digging out instead of in and rejoiced in the friendliness of the household that salved not a little the home-sickness that crept under the darkness. Particularly was he pleased with the pretty wife of the Courtier, so different from the women of the tents with their tousled hair and roughened hands, and shoulders stooped with burdens. Fresh from her bath of perfumed water, clad in silken attire and ready for a court function she was a dream of beauty to the lad of the tents and his open admiration pleased her immensely while his deft and ready service made him in constnnt demand. Good it was that "dad's" teaching thru those forming years had been of the best for he needed it all in his days of temptation. And the anchor held.

WHEN GOD GOES TO JAIL.

There wasn't much else that Potiphar could do except what he did, for there would have been rare rumpus and possibly some trouble at court if Mrs. P's family were as prominent as they were likely to be. Into the prison went Joseph. Now if any one ever had the right to complain over fate this one had. He had done his best at home and what had he gotten? A slave's lot. He had done his best in Egypt and what had he gotten? A prison. What was the use anyway? Why not be a crook if all one gets is a crook's lot? "Why hadn't he lied?" was the prodding question in a school boy's mind when truth brought him punishment while his comrade who lied was feted. "I wonder why God made me?" said one of George McDonald's characters, "I'm sure I don't know where was the use." "Perhaps not much yet." was the reply, "but then He isn't done. He is making you now and you don't know it." That was the situation with Joseph, God was still making him and in order to do it Jehovah went to jail with him. Here is a case of the imprisoned God. For in every jail of circumstance, of pain, of disaster, of defeat, of disappointment, of friendlessness, into which any one of His children is sent He goes also.

So once more Joseph began to dig steps up the side of his pit. He never whined but did his best and soon was promoted to the place of "trusty" and given charge of the other prisoners. To these he gave every consideration and sought to keep their minds cheery in the midst of the conditions that were as hard for him as for them. Never did he lose his dream of better things ahead, and never did he cease to work at what lay at hand. He was finding that there may be an unbeatable trio in any life—God, work and dreams. And these finally brought his head above the top and he stepped out into the largest liberty.

GRANTSVILLE

Mrs. Anna Yutzy Beachy, wife of Jonas J. Beachy, of Mt. Nebo, near Grantsville, died early Sunday morning of pneumonia. She was one of the oldest residents of this section, being aged 86 years, her brithday occurring in January. Mrs. Beachy was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Yutzy and was born near Pocahontas, Pa. Her mother died when she was nine years of age and she then made her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Brenneman, of New Germany. She was married in 1864 and spent her life on a farm. Twelve children survive: Mrs. Christina Unzieker, Goshen, Ind., who spent several weeks with her mother during her illness; Edward J., Katharine and Leo, at home; Mrs. Mary Custer, Mrs. Simon Orendorf and Elmer J. Beachy, and one sister, Mrs. Barbara Beal, of Sand Patch, Pa. Her husband, who is nearly 96 years of age, is enjoying good health. Her daughter, Miss Katharine, who has so faithfully cared for her mother and crippled brother Leo, for years, cannot be praised too highly for her devotion and care. The funeral was held at the Miller Amish church near Grantsville Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, Rev. Jonas B. Miller, the pastor, conducting the service and preaching the sermon. The pall bearers were Ralph Engle, William Durst, Daniel Baker, C. J. Otto, P. H. Yost and Jacob Beachy. Interment was made in the cemetery nearby.

Mrs. Thelma Shearer and Mrs. C. Oliver Bender jointly entertained their Sunday school classes at the home of Mrs. Shearer Monday evening. There were seventeen present. After the regular business, refreshments were served.

Grantsville Camp, Woodmen of the World, held memorial services Sunday afternoon which were largely attended and were very impressive. The members of the lodge formed at the hall and marched to the cemetery, led by the Crellin Boys' Band. The uniform rank, with Mr. A. C. Stanton as captain, and the lodge with its banner made a pretty procession. Charles Leist, of Elk Lick, Pa., was master of ceremonies. Prayer was offered by Rev. Sigler, of Elk Lick, Pa. Attorney J. C. Renninger, of Oakland, gave a splendid address and a selection by a male quartet was rendered.

Miss Ruth Keller, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Keller, of Grantsville, will sail Thursday, June 10th, from New York on the Steamship DeGrasse for Havre, France, to continue her study of the French language. Miss Keller is a graduate of Western Maryland College, Westminster, and received a master's degree from Columbia University, New York. She was a teacher of French and English at Fredericka, Del., the past winter. The Beautiful Ryan's Glade.

By John W. Kimmell.

I rode down through a sugar grove
Near the beautiful Ryan's Glade
And saw the keelers hanging
Where the maple sugar is made.

'Twas on the thirty-first of March—
A balmy air was blowing;
The robin sang beside the brook,
The Rhode Island Red was crowing.

I gazed across the fertile fields,
The white lime piles were gleaming;
I sat upon my saddle horse—
I knew I was not dreaming.

I rode down by the old mill site—
The burrs had ceased to grind;
I thought of early boyhood days
And those we've left behind.

Here many a rugged bare-foot boy
Who fished this old mill stream,
Brought many a load of wheat and corn
With mule or oxen team.

My heart turns back to the sugar grove
Where the maple sugar is made,
And the grand and peaceful homes
In the beautiful Ryan's Glade.

FINAL EXAMINATIONS

It is a somewhate fateful moment in the experience of students when they take those final examinations, the result of which in some cases will determine whether they will get their coveted diplomas or not.

Those who have done good work all through the year approach these tests with confindence, that even if they miss some things, the general average of their attainment will pull them through. Those who have looked for the short cuts and smart excuses can well do a little healthful trembling and reslove in future to have things done yesterday rather than put them off until tomorrow.

To be ready for an examination, a student must not merely know a lot of facts, but what is quite as important, he must have reflected a good deal over his subject and looked into its inner meaning, so he can do something more than repeat a parrot like lesson. Examiners are usually lenient to those who seem to have used their brains.

FAILURE AND SUCCESS

Are you discouraged by failure? Then you will fail.

Most of the little failures and little successes are unimportant skirmishes in the battle of life. They are the maneuvering, the testing of the opposing lines, the finding of weak spots and strong spots.

In the hour of skirmish lost, or in the zest of skirmish won, it is well to remember that the great battle is yet to be fought. The man who is stricken in heart by the little defeats and the man who is palsied in mind by the little victories, will be on a par when the real test comes.

Our little successes and little failures are about equally willing to serve us. They will be very useful if we will give them the chance. But if we accept either blindly, as the gift of fate and circumstance, we might as well quit the fight.

The man who, in defeat, can put his finger on the cause of his defeat—the where, the why, the how of it—is already well on the road to ultimate victory.

And the man who, in victory, knows how he won, and wherefore, will win again, and more gloriously.

THE AMERICAN HOME

Improvement of the American home so that people might be turned from what was called the "mad flight after irresponsible pleasurer," toward family enjoyments, was emphasized as the ideal in the report of the president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the recent convention at Atlantic City.

The creation of more attractive homes is a fine and lovely aim. There is a question if the younger people will ever fully return to the old homey ideals when the women devoted most of their energies to fine housewifery, and the young people gathered for home enjoyments.

It seems a long distance back to the time when people would gather on their doorsteps to sing old fashioned minstrel songs, while some romantic girl would thrum her guitar and merriment would resound over the neighborhood. Today the children of those people are probably at the movies or dancing at some public resort or burning up gasoline.

It will be interesting to see what the club women do to promote some revival of this old spirit. Probably if the girls made more of a study of household arts, and learned like the older folks to take pride in their very fine cooking, and In maintaining a very well ordered home, it would have some effect. People find pleasure in doing something when they do it very well.

Music is always a great promoter of home enjoyment. Occasionally one now hears some little group in the homes tuning away on a piano and saxophone and violin, and something like that, and they do not worry the old people much. Things seem to go by action and reaction. After a period of restlessness, people may return to the old feeling of affection for the home nest.

GETTING NEW BUSINESS

The progressive business firm finds that it needs to be constantly making new friends and creating a new circle of customers. If it just depends on satisfying those who have previously bought its goods, it is likely to see its trade diminished. Population changes more rapidly now than formerly, and if a firm has a certain list of customers this year, it can expect, as a result of all the changes that naturally occur, that a considerable proportion of those customers will not be on the list in a year or two.

Also people are changeable in their habits, and unless a very energetic effort is made to hold old customers by advertising, a lot of them will go elsewhere, attracted by the various inducements that are offered them.

People are not much inclined, as they were often formerly, just to trade at one place or a few places right along year after year. They are quick to get the idea, if some firm seems to be hustling a little harder than its competitors to please the people, and no feeling of habit or sentiment of loyalty is apt to hold them, if they think they can do better by going elsewhere for something they want.

By an active campaign of advertising, a firm can keep making new business friends to make up for those who drift elsewhere. It does not take elaborte persuasion to win such new customers in these times.

People are ready to go to any place of business where the spirit of enterprise and hustle seems to prevail. A concern that makes it a regula practice to advertise, even if it does not take any great amount of space, will have a constant stream of inquirers entering its doors, who will more than make up for old customers who go elsewhere.

it may be changed, but as long as the law remains on the statute books, it is the unmistakable duty of the Courts and of the responsible officials of the government to enforce it, and it is also the unmistakble duty of the individual citizen to obey it. Here in Garrett county the majority of your citizens voted for a local option law sometime before the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, so that whatever may be the case elsewhere here in Garrett county the State law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor has not only the sanction of authority but also has behind it the weight of a majority public opinion duly expressed at the polls. Under these circumstances, there can be no argument of any sort brought against its enforcement, and I am sure that all of you will realize the propriety and necessity of promptly indicting those whom you may find have violated it.

'The Court also wishes to call your attention to the law prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons. A strict enforcement of this law is always necessary, because its violation often turns trivial disputes into very serious offenses, and may result in grave injury to individual citizens.

"There are certain statutes which the Court is required to call to the attention of each grand jury in this county, and these, briefly, are as follows:

Section 3 of Article 27 of the Code of Public General Laws relating to abortion;

Section 79 of Article 27 relating to defaulters (this latter refers only to those officials whose duty it is to collect money due the State or county);

Sections 283 to 286, inclusive, of Article 27, relating to the selling or giving away of narcotic drugs;

Sections 41 and 42 of Article 39 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland prohibiting the catching of certain fish at certain times of the year.

"The foreman appointed by the Court is the head of your body, and will preside over your deliberations, and you should also select two of your members to act as clerks. One of these clerks should keep a docket on which should be set out the name of the accused, the charge against him, the names of the witnesses examined and the disposition which you make of the case. The other clerk should keep as full a memorandum as possible, consistent with the prompt dispatch of your business, of the testimony of the various witnesses. This memorandum is important as an aid to the State's Attorney in the subsequent trial of the cases, and it also enables him to determine whether or not witnesses change their testimony at the trial.

"You should, so far as practicable, first take up the cases of those persons who are confined in the jail in order that any prisoner against whom no presentment or indictment is found may be released from custody; next consider those who are out on bond, and finally consider the cases of those who are charged for the first time before you, or whose cases arise in the course of your investigation.

"After hearing the witnesses in a case a vote is taken on whether or not you will present or indict the party charged, and in order to bring in a presentment or an indictment at least twelve of your members must vote in favor of such action.

"In your deliberations, you have the right to call upon the State's Attorney for assistance and advice, and you will usually find it to your advantage to have him present to aid in the examination of witnesses, though you have the right to exclude him from the grand jury room at any time you might desire to do so, and you are required to exclude him and all others who are not members of the grand jury when voting on a presentment or indictment.

"You also have the right to ask the advice of the Court should any matters arise on which you wish such advice.

"You will recall that your oath binds you to secrecy, and we wish to impress upon you the necessity of a strict observance of this rule. Any information divulged by you as to what goes on in the grand jury room may, among other things, result in the escape of someone who has been indicted, and hence, for this reason alone, you should be very careful not to discuss with anyone, not a member of your body, what goes on during your deliberations.

"In conclusion, we wish to warn you against those who will come before you through spite or in an effort to have their private troubles settled at the public expense. You will have little difficulty in picking out such people and scant attention should be paid to them. However, where the criminal law has been violated, you should have no hesitation in indicting whomever the evidence justifies you in believing guilty.

"You should be as expeditious as is consistent with the proper investigation of the matters brought before you, so that the county may be saved unnecessary expense. Usually the grand jury completes its work in less than a week, but you are in no way bound by this, and should take whatever time you deem necessary for the proper performance of your duties."

Monday and Tuesday with Judge Walsh on the bench the various civil dockets were gone over and entries made in uncontested cases. In addition, the Court heard motions from various attorneys respecting cases to be tried next week and the disposition of several appeal cases.

Judge Walsh returned to Cumberland Tuesday afternoon, leaving the grand jury in session. This morning Judge Doub took his place on the bench and at eleven o'clock the grand jury made its report and was discharged from further service at this time.

It is understood that fifty indictments were returned by the grand jury and that more than 140 witnesses were examined.

Court will re-convene on Monday at which time the criminal docket will be taken up.

Yet it is not unlikely that you will lose a thousand dollars in a few years time, without realizing that it is gone.

You will lose it in the form of small, needless expenditures—little sums that slip through your fingers every day.

A bank account will help you keep some of the money that flies away. You will find that small sums can be saved as easily as spent. A small deposit every week soon grows to a substantial balance, increasing with compound interest all the time.

A Word to The Wise.

Going on a vacation to the mountains, or to the seashore? To a summer camp, or on a hike, or on a week-end trip? Before you buy your bathing suit, or get your traveling togs together, go to your doctor or to the nearest health officer and get him to vaccinate you against typhoid fever. This the advice of Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health to every Marylander, big and little, young and old, who hasn't been vaccinated against typhoid within the last two years.

The typhoid vaccine is furnished free of charge to all physicians by the State Department of Health. Three visits of not more than five or ten minutes each, a week apart, to your doctor or the nearest health officer, and three shots of typhoid vaccine, will complete the job, and you will be protected for another season.

Since typhoid is no respector of persons, or of ages, the advice in regard to vaccination is given to everybody. A report made by Dr. R. H. Riley, Chief of the State Bureau of Communicable Diseases, at the health officers' conference in Baltimore, showed that over a thousand people in the counties of Maryland—1057 exactly—had typhoid fever last year, that is, one person out of every seven hundred had the disease. In 1924 it was less prevalent. That year, 828 people had typhoid, or one out of every nine hundred in the population. And these cases ranged in age from babies three months old to men and women of eighty. While no age was free from it, two -thirds of the cases of typhoid —or nearly seven hundred cases, occurred among children and grown-ups from five to twenty-five years old.

"One of the things that makes it so difficult to prevent the spread of typhoid fever," Dr. Fulton said in urging vaccination against the disease, "is the fact that many persons who recover from the disease are perfectly well themselves, but are known as 'carriers' of typhoid. Very often these people handle milk or other foods, and spread the disease in that way to the members of their household or to other people. If the discharges from the persons who have typhoid or who are carriers of it, are not caefully disinfected and disposed of, the typhoid germs may pass into nearby streams and persons who drink from these streams may easily contract the disease.

"The State Department of Health is cooperating with the State Roads Commission and with all local authorities in inspecting and protecting drinking water supplies and sanitary conveniences at the tourist camps and at all other summer camps throughout the State. It is also making special inspections of the sanitary conditions of the workers' camps at canneries. But it is best for the individual to take no chances. Before you go off on your hike, or your auto trip, or your summer vacation, go to your doctor or to the nearest health officer and get him to give you the necessary three inoculations of typhoid vaccine, so that you may be protected from typhoid fever wherever it may be found.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

AN ECHO FROM 1865

I RATHER guess they have been telling this one ever since the war between the states. Indeed for all I know to the contrary it may date back as far as the first and second Punic wars. For a good story never really dies. It merely goes into retirement for a season or a decade or a century and rises up again when occasion suits with its youth miraculously restored.

Now this present story may be of any age you please, but to the best of my personal knowledge and belief it belongs to our own Civil war period.

I know I first heard it years ago from an old gentleman who had served in a Texas regiment from 1861 to 1865. I had almost forgotten it when here the other day a friend wrote me telling the same yarn and saying that he had it from his father.

The narrative runs that in the last days of the war a rugged, wornout, hungry, half-dead Confederate straggler was limping along a Virginia highway striving to catch up with his command. Where there was a puddle in the ruts he stopped to bathe his bruised and bleeding feet. As he sat at the roadside dabbling his swollen toes in the water a Union skirmisher, well fed and lusty, stepped from behind a tree with his musket raised to his shoulder and yelled out exultantly:

"Now I got you!"

"Yas," drawled the Southerner, "an' a h—l of a git you got!"

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE
BY JOSEPH KAYE

At Twenty-one Senator Edge of New Jersey Was a Journal Clerk.

AT THE age of twenty-one I was about to graduate to the position of journal clerk in the New Jersey senate. I served two years in that position, and two years later I was made secretary of that body. For the next three years I held that post. —Walter E. Edge.

TODAY: Mr. Edge is the Republican leader of New Jersey as well as being the senator from that state.

In 1916 Senator Edge was elected governor of New Jersey with a plurality of nearly 70,000, and 1,500 over this number was the plurality given him when he was elected senator.

Democracy is still upon trial. The civic genius of our people is its only bulwark, and neither laws nor monuments, neither battleships, nor public libraries, nor great newspapers, nor booming stocks; neither mechanical invention, nor political adroitness, nor churches, nor universities, nor civil service examinations can save us from degeneration if the inner mystery is lost. That mystery, at once the secret and the glory of the English-speaking race, consists in nothing but two common habits, two inveterate habits carried into public life—habits so homely that they lend themselves to no rhetorical expression, yet habits more precious, perhaps, than any that the human race has gained. They can never be too often pointed out or praised. One of them is the habit of trained and disciplined good temper toward the opposite party when it fairly wins its innings. The other is that of fierce and merciless resentment toward every man or set of men who break the public peace.

BOSTON SCHOOL of COOKERY
Tests and Approves

Miss Lucy G. Allen, director of the school, tells her experience with the Perfection Oil Stove.

MISS LUCY ALLEN, director of the conservative Boston School of Cookery, is one of six famous cooks who recently put the Perfection Stove to a rigorous, practical cooking test. Like the other five famous cooks, Miss Allen cooked by every cooking process, and gave us her opinion of the Perfection.

Uniformly Good Results

"I cooked many meals on the Perfection Stove," says Miss Allen. "The results, whether using the top of the stove, the oven, the broiler, or the toaster were uniformly good. There were several features sufficiently pronounced to recommend the stove to the most particular people.

Easy to Work on

"The Perfection is an easy stove to work on. There is no reaching across several hot plates, as there is with a gas or coal range.

"The flame never varied from the point at which it was set, whether it was low for stewing down pumpkin or high for baking beans several hours.

Clean Kettles

"There was no black deposit on the cooking utensils, even when the high, yellow tipped flame was used for broiling steak.

"The long chimneys burn every drop of oil completely before the heat reaches the utensils.

"We were so well pleased with the 1926 Perfection Stove, both as to results and operation, that after completing the test we kept it to use for auxiliary work in our classes," she concluded.

* * *

Tested and approved by the Boston School of Cookery! That means that the Perfection was used under all possible cooking conditions—for slow cooking, for fast cooking; for baking, for frying, and for broiling. In every case it was found efficient.

Six Cooks Agree

The other five famous cooks who tested the Perfection were enthusiastic, too, about the results obtained. And, every day 4,500,000 women get real cooking satisfaction from their Perfections.

See these 1926 Perfections at any dealer's. All sizes from a one-burner stove at $6.75 to a five-burner range at $120.00. When you cook on a 1926 Perfection, you, too, will be well pleased with it.

She has contributed to this unusual cooking series recipes for six typically New England dishes.

Boston Bake Beans

It's the preparation and the slow cooking which makes Boston Baked Beans superior to all others.

Pick over one quart of pea or kidney beans, cover with cold water and soak over night. In the morning, drain, cover with fresh water and simmer until the skins begin to break. Drain again. Wash and score a one-pound cube of fat salt pork. Put the beans in a big, earthenware bean pot. Bury the pork in the beans, leaving the rind exposed.

Mix one tablespoon of salt, one tablespoon of molasses, three tablespoons of sugar and one-half teaspoon of dry mustard; add these ingredients to one cup of boiling water and pour over the beans. Then add enough boiling water to cover the beans. Cover the bean pot, put in hot oven and bake six or eight hours, uncovering the last hour of cooking.

Steamed Brown Bread

For a most delectable meal, serve steaming hot brown bread with the beans. It's a prime combination. Many folks like to eat catsup with the beans. Here's the original New England Brown Bread:

Mix two cups cornmeal, one cup of rye meal, two teaspoons of soda, two teaspoons of salt, one-half cup of molasses and about three and one-half cups of milk. Let stand for one hour, stirring occasionally. The bread is better, if the meal swells before the mixture is put into the tins. Butter baking-powder tins, fill a little over one-half full, cover and steam several hours.

And Chowder

A hearty dish, liked especially by men, is fish chowder. It's economical too. Buy a four pound haddock, skinned with the head left on. Remove the fish from the backbone, cut into two inch pieces and set aside. Put the backbone broken in pieces and the head into a stewpan, add two cups of cold water, bring slowly to the boiling point and cook twenty minutes. Put into the chowder kettle an inch and a half cube of fat salt pork cut into small bits, and fry out.

Add one sliced onion and fry for five minutes. Add three or four medium sized potatoes cut in thin slices. Strain the stock from the fish bones over the potatoes and cook until they are soft.

Add the fish and simmer ten minutes, then add one quart of milk, one tablespoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper, three tablespoons of butter and either three or four pieces of pilot bread or six or seven cooking crackers. The longer a chowder can simmer or stand before serving the better it will be.

Codfish Balls

Wash one-half pound of salt codfish and cut into small pieces using kitchen scissors to make one cupful. Wash and pare potatoes and cut into pieces the size of an English walnut to make one and one-half pints. Cook the fish and potatoes together in boiling water until potatoes are soft.

Drain thoroughly through a strainer, return to kettle and shake over the fire until the moisture is evaporated. Mash thoroughly, add one-half tablespoonful of butter, one egg well beaten and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper. Beat well with a fork to make fluffy and add salt if necessary. Drop by spoonfuls into deep fat and fry.

Pumpkin Pie

Pumpkin pie when made right is a real delicacy. And this recipe for it is especially good. For a more elaborate dish it may be served with whipped cream.

For the pastry, measure two cups of flour unsifted and sift with one-half teaspoon of salt. Cut in, using two knives, three-fourths cup of lard. Add three-fourths cup of medium cream mixing with a knife. Chill before using.

For the filling, mix one and one-half cups of cooked and sifted pumpkin, with two-thirds cup of white sugar, one teaspoon of grated nutmeg, one-half teaspoon of salt, two eggs slightly beaten and two cups of milk or if liked rich, use part cream.

Nice Brown Doughnuts

Try frying sour milk doughnuts according to this good New England recipe of Miss Allen's. The kitchen will be a most attractive place to all members of the family when they smell these tempting doughnuts.

Beat until light one whole egg and one egg yolk, add gradually three-fourths cup of sugar, beating all the time. Mix three-fourths teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of grated nutmeg and two cups of flour.

Mix one half teaspoon of soda with one half cup of sour milk having the milk rather rich. Add milk and flour alternately to the egg mixture, roll and pat out, handling as little as possible, then cut and fry in deep fat.

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

A QUARREL

KIDDIE KATYDID and Leaper the Locust quarreled so loudly over a message marked "For Mr. Grasshopper" that they soon drew a crowd around them.

"That message for 'Mr. Grasshopper' is certainly meant for me," Kiddie insisted. "You know yourself how you have objected to being called by the name of 'Grasshopper.' Why, only last night you refused to stop when Freddie Firefly shouted it after you."

"And you—" cried Leaper the Locust—"you paid no attention when Chirpy Cricket went up to you just as the moon rose this evening and said, 'How-dy do, Mr. Grasshopper?' right in your ear. You have no right to open the message. And I promise you that I shall make trouble for you if you don't mind your own affairs."

"I Promise You That I Shall Make Trouble for You."

"Well, well—what's all this row about, anyhow?" asked a strange voice. It was a newcomer in Pleasant Valley who had just spoken. He elbowed his way briskly through the throng until he reached the center of it, where Kiddie and Leaper the Locust faced each other angrily.

People noticed that the stranger looked as if he had traveled a long distance. And he had a mail-pouch slung over his back. Furthermore, he was enough like Kiddie and Leaper to be a cousin of either one of them.

A person couldn't see his horns, on account of the hat that he wore.

When this traveler asked about the dispute, everybody hastened to explain the quarrel to him.

He listened carefully, and when he had heard the whole story he said:

"This message—do you know where it is? Do you know who has it now?"

"No!" Leaper the Locust cried, while Kiddie Katydid echoed the word.

"Ah! I thought not!" said the stranger, "I thought not, because I have it in this mail-bag. And now I must confess that I'm puzzled myself; for I don't know which one it's intended for." And he pulled off his hat and began fanning himself with it.

It was perfectly plain to everyone that he was sadly perplexed.

Then Leaper the Locust gave a great shout.

"You're a Short-horn!" he exclaimed. "It can't be that you would have a message for a person with horns like his!" He pointed a scornful finger at poor Kiddie Katydid.

One glance at the stranger's head—now that he had removed his hat—told everybody that Leaper the Locust was not mistaken.

The stranger's horns were short. There was no denying that fact.

"I believe you must be the Mr. Grasshopper I'm looking for," said the stranger.

Then he put his hand inside his mail-pouch and pulled out a letter.

Leaper the Locust made a sudden jump for the message. But he was so eager that he sprang too far. He sailed far over the stranger's head and landed some distance away.

"Hullo! He doesn't want it!" said the stranger. "It must be for you!" And he shoved the message into Kiddie Katydid's willing hands.

Almost immediately Leaper the Locust jumped back again.

But, of course, he was too late.

HOYES

Quite a severe wind and hail storm passed over our community Monday of this week, but no serious damage resulted so far as can be ascertained.

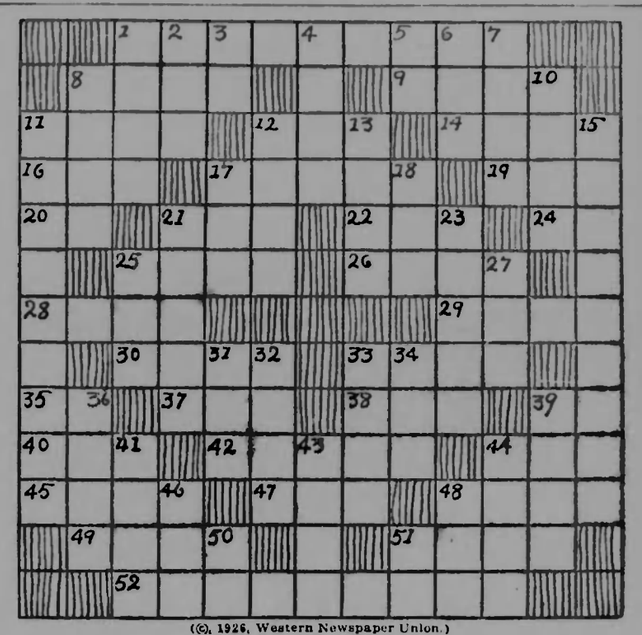
The families of Asa Friend and Arthur Custer spent last Sabbath with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rush near Friendsville.

Mr. William Ewing and family, of Mountain Lake Park, and Mr. Joe DeBerry and family, of Oakland, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. D. O. DeWitt.

Another school year is drawing to a close, much to the regret of both teacher and pupils. Miss Jane Hannon, of Frostburg, is the teacher at the local school and deserves much credit for the past successful school term.

Miss Ruth Fearer is spending a few days this week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Glover, at Friendsville.

The members of the M. E. Sunday school at Hoyes are preparing a program to be rendered on Children's Day, which service will be held some time during the present month. We approve very much of these services, as they teach a lesson to the little ones which they remember throughout their lives.



Mrs. Frank Feather and infant, of Oakland, are making a visit to Mrs. Feather's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Callis.

Mr. and Mrs. Burl Ayers, of Washington, D. C., Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Smith and little daughter, of Point Marion, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Smith, of Oakland, all spent Decoration Day with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, at this place.

OWEN T. TREACY
GENERAL MERCHANT
SECOND AND OAK STREETS OAKLAND, MD.

"THAT'S Henry Hammond's son," explained the House Detective.

"That's why I do not like him," answered the Hotel Stenographer, looking after a young man who had just given her some dictation. "I have no use for a boy who is celebrated because he is somebody's son.

"A lot of sons of famous men loaf around Peacock Alley here in this hotel and several of them have tried to make me. I turn them all down promptly.

"I play with a lot of boys whose fathers I never heard of. Some of them were hod carriers and some of them were preachers; some of them were small-town merchants and some of them were farmers. I never care. I am interested in their jobs, not their ancestry. I never loved a dog because its papa and mama were registered and had been in a bench show. It's the dog I like and nobody can pick out their ancestors, anyway.

"A lot of boys think they can get by in the world because of what their papas did. They may be able to get their money that way, but they can't get me.

"I would rather know a boy who had taken a half-nelson on the world and twisted a living out of it for himself. When I am with him I may have to ride in a flivver but with good roads everywhere a flivver is good enough. I may have to go to the 'movies' instead of having orchestra chairs in a swell theater but the 'movies' are often better than the theater, anyway. I wonder what certain rich boys would have done if they had gone to public school and had a paper route? Would they spend so freely if they knew how hard a dollar is to get? Every boy I play with is a possible husband and I always wonder what father's son would do to make a living if papa's money ran out and I was married to him. Nix! Give me a boy with a union card and a good trade."

Cause and Effect

When Eddie Laemmle was making "Spook Ranch" it was only natural that the boys got to telling ghost stories. Finally some one asked a darkey who worked in the cast if he had ever stayed in a haunted house.

"Ah sure has," admitted the black man, "But never again!"

"Why, what happened?"

"Well, suh, long 'bout two in de mawnin' Ah wakes up, an' dar comes Mistah Ghost right through de wall, jes' like dat wall wasn't dar."

"And what did you do?"

"Me? Ah went through de other wall de same way."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

AN ITCHING NOSE

THE idea that an itching nose means that "company is coming," or "a stranger is coming" is now merely a common and widespread superstition. But it was not always thus. There was a time when the nose actually announced the coming of company or a stranger, not by itching, it is true, but by the exercise of those keen olfactory powers which it possessed in the days of our primitive ancestors.

Scientists tell us that primitive man's organs of smell were so well developed in acuteness and kept sharp by constant use, that his olfactory powers were equal, if not superior, to those possessed today by the lower animals remarkable for their gift of scent. Many tribes of savages retain to this day extraordinary powers in this respect. Mr. Caveman was, in all probability, a rather high-scented creature and when he went with a party of friends to visit the dwelling of Mr. Cliffdweller, if the wind was right, that gentleman could smell him coming a long way off, just as many of the lower animals today "snuff the tainted gale" and become aware of the approach of their enemies before they can see them. Civilization has caused the sense of smell to become atrophied in modern man but though the nose has lost its power it has retained its reputation by means of a popular superstition.

"Being a man of convictions is nothing to brag about," says pertinent Polly, "the rogue's galleys is full of them."

REPORT OF THE JUNE GRAND JURY TO COURT

Submitted Last Thursday Morning, When The Body Was Discharged

The Grand Jury for the June Term of the Circuit Court for Carrett county, in session from Monday, June 7th, until Thursday noon last, submitted its report to the Court and was excused from further service at that time. The report in full follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland:

The Grand Inquest of the State of Maryland for the body of Garrett county for the June Term of the Circuit Court of said county for the year 1926, respectfully reports to the Court that we have been in session for the past four days, and during this time have to the best of our ability enquired into all violations of the laws, and have endeavored to faithfully perform all of the duties required of us as Grand Jurors. We listened attentively to the instructions of the Court, and in the performance of our duties have been aided and assisted thereby.

We have had before us and have examined 129 witnesses, and have found presentments and indictments in all cases which we believed the evidence warranted.

We have looked over and examined the records in the several county offices, and are pleased to find that they are kept in a neat and systematic manner, and we commend those in charge for the manner in which they conduct the affairs of their offices, and for the uniform courteous treatment extended to the patrons thereof.

We are pleased to note the neat and clean manner in which the grounds surrounding the court house, sheriff's residence and jail are kept.

We find that several districts of the county are without constables and magistrates, and we are informed that these vacancies are cause primarily by the insufficient pay provided by law for these officers, and we feel that proper steps should be taken to remedy this defect, for it is evident, owing to the large area of this county, that no district should be without these important officers.

The Jury desires particularly to refer to the matter of the illegal sale of liquor, and other violations of the prohibition laws, and to state that under the present limited laws of the state and county it is, indeed, difficult to apprehend the violators of these laws, and instead of condemnation of any of the officers entrusted with the enforcement of the limited liquor laws now in force, we congratulate them upon their earnest efforts and for the success with which they have met.

It is the sense of this jury, and we recommend, that the laws of the State, and particularly for Garrett county should be so revised and amended, so as to give the officers entrusted with the enforcement thereof some latitude and power to suppress the illegal traffic in liquor. We would advise and recommend that a law be enacted for Garrett county which is broad and which comprehends the suppression of the liquor traffic in this county. We do not want a law which is surrounded with limitations to the extent that it can, only with difficulty, be enforced in certain isolated cases. We would recommend a law for this county which prohibits the manufacture of intoxicating liquors. We would also recommend that a search warrant be provided in proper cases in order to enforce the liquor laws.

We further feel that great good could be accomplished in this community by the appointment of a prohibition officer whose duty would be to give his undivided time and attention to the enforcement of the liquor laws; of course we do not mean by this to relieve the present county officers of their duties in the premises, but would expect them to continue their efforts and to co-operate with such prhoibition officer.

We feel that for the past year there has been a marked improvement in the peace and good order of the county, and we feel that there has been fewer violations of the laws in this time, including violations of the liquor laws.

From our investigation, and comparatively speaking, we are proud to report that we consider the general moral condition of the county good.

We have had before us the Mine Inspector for Garrett county who has reported to us that the conditions of the mines in the county are good, and that the mining laws are generally being observed, and that violators of these laws are being prosecuted and punished.

We have been informed by the State's Attorney that in practically all criminal cases in which magistrates have jurisdiction under the laws of the State of Maryland, these cases are being disposed of by the several magistrates of the county, and that he gives these cases personal attention and endeavors to see that the cases are expediciously and properly disposed of. We commend this practice and feel confident that it carries out the purposes of the law which gives to the magistrates jurisdiction, avoids delay and saves considerable expense to the tax payers of the county.

We have examined the interior of the sheriff's residence and the county jail, and are pleased to report that the same are neatly kept and are sanitary, and that the prisoners confined in the county jail are properly and comfortably provided for.

We have exmained the several county buildings and find that they are in general good condition, and have been informed that the repairs needed to the same will be provided by the County Commissioners.

We are impressed with the neatness and manner in which the records found in the office of the clerk of the court are kept, and we commend Mr. Tower, the clerk, for his thoroughness and for the ability he displays in the discharge of the many duties of his office.

We are pleased with the system of book keeping adopted by Mr. Lee, the treasurer. This system shows a daily statement of the financial condition of the office, and we commend Mr. Lee for adhering to this system in handling the money of the taxpayers.

The State's Attorney, Mr. William R. Offutt, has been with us during the present session, and has been untiring in his efforts to prepare and present such matters as should come to our attention, as well as to expedite the work and save expense where possible. The Jury feels that he is to be commended for the able, efficient and thorough manner in which he conducts the office of State's Attorney.

We desire to extend to your Honors, Judge Walsh and Judge Doub, our thanks and appreciation for your consideration and courteous treatment.

We now beg to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,

G. J. GNAGEY, Forman.
HAROLD M. DAWSON, Clerk.
GEO. W. BREUNINGER, Clerk.
WM. F. FRAZEE, Juror.

SERMON TO GRADUATES DELIVERED SUNDAY

Commencement Exercises To-Morrow Evening.

The baccalaureate address to the class of 1926 of the Oakland High school was delivered last Sunday evening in the Methodist Episcopal church, by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Archibald Moore.

Dr. Moore took for his text for the occasion a part of the 14th verse of the fourteenth chapter of James, "For what is your life," and he delivered his sermon in such a manner that it will be remembered by those young people who are stepping out into the school of life.

The entire week has been a busy one for the graduates of the O. H. S., which is the usual occurance. Last evening the class day program was presented at the Maryland theatre to a crowded house. The class, in connection with the class day exercises, presented a three act play, "Am I Intruding," which met with very favorable acceptance by the audience.

This evening at the Maryland theatre are the closing exercises of the Oakland Unit Elementary schools, when certificates of promotion to the High school will be presented to the young folk who have successfully completed their work in the grades.

Commencement exercises of the Oakland High school will take place at the Maryland theatre tomorrow evening.

EXPRESSION OF THANKS

We are deeply grateful to our many friends and neighbors for their loving acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy during the recent illness and death of our devoted wife and mother. To those who donated their cars and services at the funeral we are most thankful. To the splendid and comforting words of the pastor, and the beautiful music rendered by the choir, we are especially grateful. J. W. KIMMELL and FAMILY. Advertisement 1t.

HICKS HOUSE AT LOCH LYNN RASED TUESDAY

Incendiary Suspected and Owner Is Jailed, Later Released.

The Hicks House, located near the station at Mt. Lake Park, was leveled to the ground by fire of undetermined origin early Tuesday morning.

The alarm was given by railroad men who saw the blaze from their moving train, and it is alleged that when one member of the crew left his train and called J. J. Singleton, owner and manager of the house, which is a hostelry, and who was the only occupant of the house at the time, that he appeared immediately fully clad It is also stated by residents of Loch Lynn who appeared on the scene a short time after the alarm had been given, that they found the house to be on fire at six different places, which aroused their suspicion and later caused the arrest of Singleton.

Singleton was arrested late Tuesday evening on a warrant issued by citizens of Loch Lynn and was lodged in the county jail until yesterday when he was released pending further investigation by the State's Attorney and the sheriff.

The house was built by W. D. Dunn about 25 years ago, who operated it as a hotel for many years. It had thirty rooms and was three stories in height.

Singleton was to have been given a hearing last night, but owing to the fact that several witnesses, who are engaged in railroad work, could not appear the hearing was postponed to a later date.

Mr. Proud was painting the structure at the time of his accident and fell from a scaffold in the rear of the building into the bed of a small creek which flows along the building. He was taken to the hospital in Davis where he was made as comfortable as possible until Saturday when an operation was deemed necessary and death came while he was on the operating table.

TWO RELIABLE CITIZENS ANNOUNCE CANDIDACY

Mr. A. D. Naylor For State Senator and Mr. H. V. Leighton For Commissioner.

At a late hour this morning two sterling citizens announced their candidacy for the nomination of offices of great importance to the voters of the county, subject to the Primary election.

They are no other than Hon. A. D. Naylor, who represented this county in the Legislature in 1920-1922, and Mr. H. V. Leighton, one of the most substantial gentlemen in the county.

Mr. Naylor aspires for the nomination of State Senator on a platform of conscientious representation of his people. He has been a resident of Oakland since 1884, or 42 years, and has been most successful in his business undertakings. He very ably represented Garrett county in the Legislature in 1920 to 1922, and won a host of friends by his endeavors. Mr. Naylor is a member of the directorate of the First National Bank in Oakland.

Mr. Leighton is also a gentleman of high ideals and exceptional ability and would make a most efficient County Commissioner, to which office he aspires for the nomination. He has been a very successful business man, having spent his entire life in this community, and is one of the large tax payers of the county. Mr. Leighton has had wide experience in road building, and farm work in the county and has always been active in the bettermennt of the public school system. He states that it has only been upon the solicitation of the substantial business and farmer men of the county that has led him to announce his candidacy.

Mr. Naylor made the following statement when he consented to announce himself for the Senatorship:

"Some time ago I was solicited by quite a number of my friends from various sections of the county to offer myself as a candidate for the office of State Senator but after considering the matter to some extent I decided not to become a candidate and so stated. Since then, however, I have been strongly urged to reconsider this decision and the support offered me has been such that I do not feel that I should longer refuse. I have accordingly decided to announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for the State Senate from Garrett county, subject to the primary election. If nominated and elected, I will serve the people of the county as a whole to the best of my ability."

JOHN T. M'GRAW SUMMER HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

Estimated Loss Said to Be Upwards of $15.000.

The blaze was discovered in the roof of the dwelling at 4:30 o'clock by Mrs. Tresa Martin, of Oakland, who was the housekeeper and the only person in the house at that time. It is believed that the fire was caused by a defective flue, as there was a trash fire of rather lage proportion in a fire place in the residence when the fire was discovered burning thru the roof.

The residence was built in 1866 by Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, and was an old land-mark in Garrett county. It was later purchased by Col. John T. McGraw, who occupied it until the time of his death several years ago, since which time it has been the summer home of his sister, Mrs. Rose McGraw deBerriz, of Washington, D. C. Mrs. deBerriz and her sister, Mrs. Warder, of Fairmont, had come to the Park for the summer but had returned to their respective homes for a short time yesterday morning, leaving Mrs. Martin in charge of the property.

An estimate made by a reliable resident of Deer Park places the damage at about $15,000 and it is understood that only $5,000 of insurance was carried on the property by the owner.

There were 25 rooms in the building, all of which were furnished, the furniture, however, for the most part was carried from the structure unhurt.

Anna West McComas

Anna West McComas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. McComas, died of pneumonia at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, last Saturday night, after having suffered with the malady for a weeks time.

Ann, as she was known to her many friends, was born in Oakland on February 10, 1897, where she remained until she completed her elementary education, after which she entered Eastern High school in Baltimore, from which institution she graduated in the spring of 1917. She returned to her home in Oakland where she remained for a years time before entering Johns Hopkins Hospital in pursuit of her degree in nursing, which she obtained with honors in May, 1921. She devoted the remaining portion of her life to her profession in the institution from which she received her training and at the time of her death was assistant superintendent of nurses in the Harriet Lane Ward, the infant department of that famous institution.

A cloud of gloom was cast over the entire community when news of her death was received, and the sympathy of each individual goes to her family in this their great bereavement.

She is survived by her father and mother and by two sisters, Mrs. Edward Lawrence, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Paul McIntire, of Oakland, and by three brothers, Harry, and Carlton, of Oakland, and Henry, of New Kensington, Pa.

Funeral services were conducted on Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the home on Second street, by Rev. Dr. Archibald Moore, her pastor, assisted by the Rev. H. A. Grubbs, with a host of friends in attendance. Burial was made in the family plot in the Oakland cemetery.

By the life of Anna West McComas we are given a beautiful example of self-sacrifice, and by her death an unselfish and useful life has been called home for higher and greater service in God's Kingdom prepared for His loved ones.

When the Death Angel plucks from the garden of youth and takes one of the most perfect flowers just in the morning time of life, we would stay her hand and ask why it should be so? But, when we remember that this life Is only our training school for the life eternal, we can hear His voice saying "well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of the Lord." So while her life was soon cut off, she will live on in the lives of those unto whom she ministered, in the lives of her parents to whom she was so attentive, and in the lives of her host of friends of one who lived so unselfish and so well. A FRIEND.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JUNE 20. 1926.

JUDAH'S PLEA.—Genesis 44:18-45: 15. Read Chapters 41-50.

A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.—Psalm 51: 17.

THE DREAM COMES TRUE.

Last week we followed the dreamer into prison. Step after step, he had gone down where his dream seemed more and more unlikely to be other than a vapor of the night. But each was one toward its fulfilment. God was in that old dungeon and where He is life climbs high heights even if men declare it is moving downward. The sudden summons from the palace brought the careful dressing of one who had listened with rare discernment to the stories of the court and had learned that clothes count even with kings. Probably he borrowed a coat from Potiphar. Self-possessed, sure of himself even in the unaccustomed surroundings—he had not gone to school under Egypt's officers for nothing—he stood, a striking figure before the throne. He listened respectfully, spoke confidently, admitted that he followed God, went farther than he was expected to go in suggesting a remedy for the troubles ahead and was suddenly told to go to work at his plan. "All the world gets out of the way of the man who knows where he is going," and Joseph knew the course Egypt ought to take and knew how to tell it. The swift transformation left him breathless but unchanged in his tackling of his job himself instead of letting some one else do most of it. "He went out over all the land" and knew his work so that soon the stores were past reckoning. Then came famine and the opening of granary doors for the feeding of a hungry world. Joseph wasn't at all the store cities but he happened to be where these sons of Jacob came for supplies so that he caught his first sight of them since that fatal day in Dothan. And here were the terms of his dream being filled to the full as they bowed to the floor in oriental fashion and sued humbly for bread. They were still the simple shepherds they had been in that other day, still clad in rough garb, still speaknig in the tongue that stirred all the hunger of Joseph's heart for home. But he had changed in every way from the boy of the tents. He had become cultured, commanding and regal, so that he was completely unknown.

THE ORDERED NIGHTMARE.

What changes had the years wrought in them? That was the question Joseph must have answered before he revealed himself. So he began to set the machinery in motion for finding out. He knew his job all right. The modern "third degree" or the slow pressure of Sherlock Holmes has made small advance in all the centuries over Joseph's shrewdly ordered nightmare into which he flung his brothers. Egypt became a veritable place of horrors, or resurrected conscience as they tasted a bit of its prison fare, as they put off with Simeon in bonds behind them, as they faced Jacob and the home queries to which they had no answer because they had no wish to uncover that old lie under which they thought they had buried Joseph. Now when they wanted most of all to unburden their souls they could only continue the lie. To know that it was the grim grip of their old sin and yet to be compelled to keep it hidden was becoming exquisite torture. Then Egypt again and a banquet, the release of Simeon, the successful purchase, the explanation of the mysterious money of the former trip, the start home with Benjamin all made them hilarious with joy at having passed the worst, at escaping the "Hoodoo" of their past. It was a happy camping party that was surprised by the stirred dust out of which came the messenger of doom. The black hand of fate clutched them and their laughter changed to a groan. Conon Doyle has nothing more thrilling than this. In utter despair they set out for the city admitting to themselves that it was useless to struggle against their yesterday of unbridled passion.

THE NEW MAN.

Twenty-two years had passed since Joseph had been sold at the instance of Judah. He had come to be a grandfather in that time and had developed a leadership that shows itself in the later kingdom in which his tribe was the center. What sort of leadership it was during these hidden years one may only guess. That he usurped the place of the first born and becomes spokesman in this crisis indicates a growing man. The thing in which Joseph was interested was the direction of that growth. So his half-brother, Benjamin, is put in a pit by the Egyptian. All the rest are free to go or stay. Will Judah pull him out or will he repeat the story of Dothan by saving his own skin at the cost of the boy? Joseph was thrillingly interested in the outcome and as Judah advanced and the interpreter began to translate his sentences his heart must have skipped a beat. But Judah makes a wonderfully fine plea for the return of Benjamin to his father. Evidently there was too much stirring in the memory of the former experience for any wish that it be repeated. Jacob had grown into closer relationship with his boys and Judah offered himself in lieu of the one convicted of theft and doomed to slavery therefor. It might have been much more poorly given and yet have brought response, for Joseph was eager to find a reason for the self-disclosure, not one for getting back at wrongdoers. He flung hesitation to the winds and proclaimed his brotherhood. Judah and the rest could be trusted to support the family integrity.

JACOB'S PAY.

Jacob had invested in his boy, he was now to get the interest upon his investment. It must have been a subdued yet happy group that reported to him that Joseph was alive and ruler in Egypt. They must have uncovered the whole story and wiped clear the slate so long carrying the record of their sin. It was a great day for the strengthening of family bonds. Then came the journey and the reception in Egypt. One of the finest pictures is that of the Prime Minister bringing his father into the presence of Pharaoh. Jacob was still the man of the tent, the shaggy shepherd of the Judean hills, uncouth and unkept. Pharaoh was one of the greatest monarchs of his time, clean shaven, faultlessly attired, every inch a king. Joseph had risen to comradeship and had high standing at court—would there be a smile at his "hayseed"father? There wasn't a minutes hesitation. Jacob followed him into the great throne room and there must have been a note of pride in Joseph's voice when he said to the king, "This is my father." And Pharaoh was some sport for he graciously accepted a blessing from the aged immigrant. Joseph was never greater than on this day of open affection for his father.

ROTARY IS GIRDLING THE ENTIRE EARTH

Business Life of 35 Countries Now Feel Rotary's Ethical Influence

(Special Correspondence)

Business and professional men representing thirty-five countries, journeyed from Australia, Japan, the Philippines, South Africa, Spain, Holland, Norway and Sweden, Denmark and the Balkan states, as well as from all important countries of the globe, met at Denver, June 14 to gain knowledge of the activities of Rotary and develop new energy for the participation of their clubs in the local affairs of their many communities, where Rotary encourages and fosters better living conditions, commercial, social and civic, among its many benefits.

This gathering of probably ten thousand Rotarians becomes a revelation of the influence of friendship and brotherly feeling among men of experience and position, who have found that the elements of Rotary possess a reason for their being—or becoming—natural human beings, expressing their fellowship and comradeship in common interests and with a concerted feeling of service to all humanity itself. This is not a "high-fallutin'" analysis of mere superficial sentiment It is practically experienced by the type of men composing the membership of many clubs, and the twenty-five hundred communities throughout the world have felt in some manner the practical results of the activities of men with such visions.

That the demand for the increasing development of the institution of Rotary has been met by the secure supervision of the organization of each new club is shown by the fact that there have never been any paid organizers and that only one charter has ever been surrendered by a club.

Upon solid foundations of practical service well defined and correctly understood, the advance of Rotary, first from Chicago in 1905 to the West and then to the East, clubs being formed in San Francisco, Seattle, Oakland, New York, Boston, Minneapolis, was followed by a general development in the United States, which began in 1911.

That the idea of an organization strong enough in personnel to take interest in any activity in the community could proceed without conflict with other civic organizations, was amazing to wiseacres who did not understand that the first principle of the institution was to be the inner circle of all circles, the inspirer of action in all societies. This was to be accomplished by the unusual policy of a single representation of each business, trade or profession, which would ensure one emmissary going forth from the Rotary meetings to inject into the society or club composed of men of his own complexion, representing only his own position in the community.

Thus, the one Rotarian would rotate among those of his own business, trade or profession in his community and general field of contact, with a message and vision and inspiration representing the inner circle of thought and determination in the community. All these members of Rotary being unable to exchange thoughts or ideas identically alike would come to a common understanding of that most desirable action or position to take in the community and the best of concerted action for the benefit of the community would result.

This alone was a novelty in institutional and community life in this country. The many safeguards which were constructed to prevent error in the practical application of this powerful purpose gave the founders many problems to solve. The preservation of the institution for twenty-one years proves the soundness of the original plans and the unwearying attention given to the construction of constitution and by-laws which would govern correctly such a huge structure in the making. The vision must not be merely Gargantuan, it must be translated into human possibility, and that is where it is found today, a human institution with functions deeply imbedded in the present structure of community, State, National and International society.

With such a successful position in the United States and Canada, Rotary was soon recognized as a social element needed in old-world centers. Although Dublin accepted the principles of Rotary as early as 1911, soon followed by London in August of the same year, the great expansion in Great Britian and on the continent did not take place until several years later, the British Isles now having nearly two hundred clubs, all established upon the same bases of ethical principles and practical operation as those in the United States and performing similar activities in the interests of their communities.

Not only have the English speaking countries accepted the desirable idea of this world-wide social institution. Countries with other than the English language, such as Chile, China, Japan, Denmark, France, Italy, Holland, Guatemala, Mexico, Spain, Norway, Switzerland, Brazil, among others, have felt the necessity for an organization of leading men of their own communities which bring together representatives of every branch of commercial and professional thought and effort, with but one intention—to understand civic needs and to investigate and discover the inner meaning of every old and new local interest.

It was to be expected that all English-speaking countries would desire such a common ground of fellowship and understanding, but the development of the clubs in countries with languages other than English has been of striking significance because of the composition of the original charter memberships, which have not been of English speaking men, but of native citizens who have understood this unique human bond of social equality, where religion, politics, and social position have no distinguishing power, but where there is a single level of association and intercourse.

That there was but one definite group of purposes is shown by the uniform similarity of the work done by the many clubs in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, South America, for the benefit of the social and community life of their cities and communities. The work of the clubs of the United States ean be seen represented in these few exemplary incidents.

The Rotary Club of Sidney, Australia, learned that the Boys' Brigade needed $25,000 to extend the work into new districts in the city, and set to work to raise that sum; the amount obtained was $65,000. Similar work has been done in many clubs throughout the world.

In Mexico, every Rotary club has started work among boys—Chihuahu, Torrson, Saltillo, Monterey have furnished playgrounds and skating rinks, fostered and paid for by Rotarians. Vera Cruz started a Boy Scout organization, uniformed the boys, built a stadium, also boxing ring, supplied athletic equipment, a radio and a library, at the expense of the members. In Vera Cruz a prospective smallpox scare and epidemic was prevented by the members of the Rotary Club and their wives who went out and vaccinated 20,000 persons, in many instances proving to the doubting natives that the vaccination was not harmful, by vaccinating themselves several times in the presence of doubters.

In Paris the club established for one of its members a laboratory where he could pursue his researches concerning cancer. In an English club a fund is maintained to assist boys to complete their college education.

Similar work has been done in Milan where the club has provided funds for the former president of the club, a physician, to study cancer; and in Genoa the club has provided the city with a quantity of radium to aid sick people who require it.

The Rotary club of Montevideo, Uruguay, secured the use of a house which has been turned into a night shelter for boys and, like many another club in the many countries, distributed to children in hospitals, blind schools and deaf and dumb institutions not only gifts at Christmas but made of Christmas a day of happiness for many who had shared but little in the gifts of fortune.

These works are exemplary of the attention which is being given in nearly twenty-five hundred cities of the world to the well-being of the citizenship while in the making. Rotary has at least one intention that can be accomplished in every language—to make good citizens out of boy material, helping to destroy the power of juvenile delinquency in the community and increasing the understanding of world peace by beginning at the early age of boyhood. Boys' Week in the United States was conceived in the New York Rotary club and has become a national event. The crippled children movement has been derived from the activitics of Ohio Rotary clubs in the interest of a state law for the care of orthopedic cases—today, Rotary clubs in all parts of the world are sponsoring community interest and the direction of work among crippled children, assisting local authorities where such efforts are well-organized and often supporting visiting nurses and hospitalsand homes by means of funds created for that purpose.

The merchant on Main street is not the only type that is of Rotarian behavior and integrity; for example: The first president of the Brussels club was a Prime Minister, the secretary was also secretary of the Belgian Chamber of Commerce and the treasurer was secretary of the Alumni Association of Belgium. The President of the Auckland, New Zealand club was president of the University of Auckland, president of the Board of Directors of the University of New Zealand. The first president of the Tokyo club was formerly Japanese Ambassador to Germany, counsellor to the United States Shipping Board in Japan, and Japanese representative on the board of the Carnegie Institute. The governor of the district which includes Italy is president of the Art Society of Milan and of the Italian Cotton Association.

THREE COLOR HAT BANDS

It is to be observed that a gentleman of middle years can now wear a hat band in three colors and not be taken for a comedian who has forgotten to lay off his stage costume. It is probable this fact is of profound significance and many portend the return of man to the color scheme devised by nature and approved by art, but abandoned by him when somebody told him that if he intended to run for office in this world he'd better learn that solemnity was the thing to be cultivated.

That fetched man at one yank to the somber hued dress he has been wearing these many generations. He's a timid animal, is man, and the thing he's most afraid of is being laughed at. We give this as our considered view of the reason man took to dark colors in dress, and why only the abandoned of the species who cared nothing for public opinion, and even took a wicked pleasure in flouting it, clung to a red necktie as a sign that they were of the world, the flesh and the devil. You never saw a candidate for office wearing a red necktie. No, candidates for office are always respectable, and in our youth it was held by all the sages in the neighborhood that a man with a red necktie was either a gambler or an atheist.

But we have always been convinced that it was fear alone that kept man from wearing colors. If he dared we think he would wear a red sash, says the Kansas City Star. He didn't wear a Prince Albert because he liked it, but because he knew that if he put on a sky blue coat with silver buttons, nankeen trousers and a brocaded vest he would be carried to jail as a menace to the public safety. Yet those who would so carry him would envy him, they would wear the same costume themselves if they didn't know they would be stoned in the streets by the mob minded minions of conformity.

Man, we fear, is a slave. He has neither the courage nor the independence that women have who will wear black only when it becomes them. Even now when man is beginning to indulge himself a little in his heart's real desire, he isn't going straight at his objective but like the ercature of low cunning that he is he is circling about it in an indirect approach. Furtively he began to wear colored socks. He was scared to death at first, and, indeed, it is probable a man who wears them never can be president. He pretended at first to yield to the demands of sport, but in a little while he was wearing colored socks to business. Then he began by degrees to get rid of his white shirts and substitute colored ones; at first he only went fishing in them, now he wears them to church.

These gaudy hat bands you see are only another step to the goal at which he is aiming. It may take another century but you can put it down that man's opinion of his looks won't forever keep him from decking himself in the colors he likes and has always secretly yearned for. An age of inhibition is always followed by an age of expressionism. When man does break loose he will startle the universe.

PRIMARY VS. CONVENTION.

Certainly it cannot be said that the primary has raised the quality of the candidates over that obtained under the convention system. Of course we have a lot of good men getting office, but no one has yet been able to show that they have improved either in honesty or efficiency over the ones we used to get when we had conventions. Then we used to get a black sheep from the convention once in awhile, but now we are just as apt to get one through the primary system. In the old days the delegates had n sense of party responsibility which usually prevented their nominating anyone who was incompetent or corrupt, for the simple reason that such a candidate was likely to he defeated at the polls. Under the primary system the people do the selecting and are not moved by party responsibility. Of course this puts the blame on themselves if they select bad candidates, but that does not help the general situation any.

And it is a noteworthy fact that it is just as easy if not easier for a political boss to dominate a primary as a convention. The bosses are usually found in the large cities where the average voter is unacquainted with the candidates for whom he is voting. He is unable therefore always to make a wise choice and the process resolves itself into voting for a slate of candidates, representing one interest or another.

It used to be argued that the primary was democratic but the opposite has proved to be the case. It has restricted running for office by the poor man rather than encouraged it, because it takes a lot of money to run in a primary and few men can afford either the time or money required to make the race.

Our Constitution was built on the theory of representative government. The primary has not assisted in giving us real deliberative representative government, and the sooner we devise a system which at least will eliminate the objectionable features now found in the primary, the better it will be for government in general.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

Board of Directors Hold Meeting Progress Reported By All Department Committees

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Garrett County Fair Association, held on last Thursday at the Court house in Oakland, Manager Daniel Orendorf, in his report to that body, stated that he had contracted for a carnival of larger proportions than any seen at the Annual Garrett County Fair in several years. His report also disclosed a contract made for a "free act" which promises to be of interest to the spectators.

"I have solicited a large number of advertisements for the Fair catalogue for this year with less energy spent than ever before," stated Mr. Orendorf this morning, and he further said "the outlook for this year's event is very promising."

County Agent Jester, chairman of the publicity committee of the Association, made his report which was enthusiastic and optomistic. He said that in his travels over the county he finds much favorable comment concerning the exhibit of 1926, and is lead to believe that the agriculturalists of the county will make this a better Fair than any previously held here.

The executive committee for the ensuing year was elected as follows: Dr. Henry W. McComas, D. E. Orendorf, G. B. M. Friend, George D. Browning, Charles W. Ream and A. D. Naylor.

It was ordered by the directorate that the tickets of admission for this year's Fair be of the coupon type, so that they may be transferrable but yet admit only one person daily.

Owing to the downpour of rain on Tuesday which prevented the County-wide Athletic Meet to be held at Mt. Lake Park, to which date it had been postponed from June 1st, it has been decided by the County Board of Education and the Public Athletic League and the Fair Association to postpone the meet until the second day of the Fair, which is Wednesday, September 30, at which time the event will take place on the Fair grounds, providing the grounds are in good condition, otherwise it will be held at a later date during the Fair. This day will be "school day" and will be generally observed by the schools of the county.

Musical And Declamation Contest Held Sunday.

The County-wide musical and inter-high school declamation contest, held at the Maryland theatre Sunday afternoon, proved interesting to those present as well as to those who participated in the program.

The musical in itself was the outgrowth of the success of the "National music week" which was observed in Oakland on Sunday, May 9th, and which was attended by a crowded house at the Maryland theatre. At the close of the musical that afternoon it was announced that more such occasions would follow, with the result that on last Sunday afternoon the Maryland theatre was again crowded to capacity with interested folk of the vicinity of Oakland.

There were no official judges present for the declamation contest, in which the winners of the Fralcy and Dawson contest participated, but each person in the audidence was presented with a score sheet for guidance in selecting the winner. However, it was a difficult task for an amateur judge to select the best declaimer, as each one of the four participants was exceptionally good in the rendition of the several subjects and interpretations.

Prof. F. E. Rathbun, superintendent of schools of Garrett County presided at the meeting in his usual able manner and was also director of the songs, being accompanied by Miss Ruth Conley, at the piano.

Misses Gladys Gonder of the Oakland High school, and Nelle Speicher of the Accident High school, and Messrs. Wiley Welling of the Oakland High school, and Mason Callis of the Accident High school, were the participants in the declamation contest.

The feature numbers on the program proved to be the accordion solos, which were rendered by Mr. Wilmer Brown, of Mt. Lake Park, and the vocal solos by Mr. Oscar Luecke, of Accident. Each young man was enthusiastically applauded by the audience upon each rendition.

A quartette from the Accident High school, comopsed of Misses Grace and Bernadette Hetrick and Messrs. Carl Miller and Oscar Luecke, were favorably received by the audience as was also a chorus from the Oakland Grammar school.

Much interest is being manifested by the people of this community in occasions of this nature which was evidenced by the crowd at the theatre on last Sunday, and it is said that a like affair will be held in the near future.

GREAT SOULS

By F. F. CORLISS

Every human soul is a gift from God and not, as many suppose, a parental inheritance whose beginning dates from the hour of our birth on earth. The soul of man is finite, yet inseperable part, of an infinite whole. And, as the universal soul—the whole—is imperishable, deathless, so must all its finite parts be immortal. Hence it follows that no man, or organization of men, can add to it or take from it; can not lose it or save it, dam it or destroy it. Man, the soul is endowed with all the God-like attribute of his Creator. To him has been given eternal life, individuality, freedom of the will, and a divine intelligence that will, in the fullness of time, enable him to achieve wisdom and understanding of God's laws and His supreme purposes in the creation of man.

Man is now a God in embryo when we consider his potential possibilities for learning the power of love and the blessings that accrue from living a life of righteousness and the bliss that is found only in health, happiness and the perfection of nobility in character. It is possible for man, through false teaching and the wrong thinking of his objective mind, to become depraved, to sink in sin and selfishness to the degradation of brutes and beasts. While, by right thinking, he can live a life of love and helpful service to others and reach the heights of perfection in God-likeness.

The planet earth is but one of the smallest of God's innumerable footstools. But it is indispensable to both God and man as a place for the evolution of great souls. Where life can gather wisdom through experience; where life can contact life in all its diverse and complex forms. Earth is man's laboratory, workshop, playground and school room. Soul and substance are inseparable. Neither can exist and live apart.

Spirit unfolds, grows, develops and improves only through matter as its enveloping medium. And as the soul unfolds itself through material forms it moulds and modifies the material forms it inhabits, with its attributes. Great souls are not great by virtue of some special creative gift, and the small souls are not small because of some denial or design. Every soul starts from the cosmic consciousness equally endowed with its intelligent life force. They all begin the race for life, lenrning and experience, on the level and at the scratch line.

There are three kinds of consciousness—the cosmic or universal, the consciousness of dumb animals, and self-consciousness found only in man. Having been raised to self-consciousness man finds himself endowed with the faculty of introspection and self-analysis through which he finds his position in the universe and his divine kinship.

Universal life appears under two great aspects, namely: The unmanifest and the manifest. Nature in the unmanifest is like raw material. To man's present mental attainments she is incomprehensible and as unlovable as any physical force like gravitation or electricity. But in nature's manifest and materialized forms she becomes of sincere and growing interest to man.

The dividing line between matter and mind, or between ether and energy is found to be like that between daylight and darkness. Nature, as unity, is one stupendous, intelligent, living, ever growing, ever changing organism. Nature is a progressive growth. Forever changing the crude,raw elemental subsatnce of her being into the refined, the sublimated. She works from within, from the obscure and invisible, she brings forth into the light things of great diversity having form, color, weight, motion and intelligence. She works from the monad to the molecule, to the mammal from small life to mammoth. From the man of low degree, coarse, brutal, ignorant, to the man of high degree; kindly natured, refined, educated. From the physical man she develops the superman—the physic—the soul-man.

Think of the countless aeons of time that nature has spent in labor and travail to bring forth man. Man, who is the culmination of all the antecedent life below him.

Our planetary life is given us, as a seed bed, a soil in which to raise and cultivate human souls through the medium of their materialized forms. God's greatest interest rests in the souls of men. His purpose is to enlighten the soul with wisdom and understanding of His laws, to gain experience and character.

Only by a contact with physical life in all its varied phases can man achieve God's purpose and gain experience. Hence the necessity of many births and many deaths. To know what life is in reality, it must be lived in the flesh. It can not be orally described, or learned from the reading of a book.

Without making God show favoritism to an elect and chosen few, there seems to be no way to account for our intellectual prodigies, our great scientists and the genius of poets, painters, sculptors and musicians, except that great souls have been born to earth-life many times and experienced more of life in its rounded completeness.

Great souls are those who have arrived; who have achieved great rewards and distinction by virtue of their own efforts. They have seen life in all its aspects. They have sinned and served and suffered and learned better. They have lived as menial and as master; have felt the pinch of poverty and the pride of plenty. God's purpose in man can not be achieved in the short span of three score years and ten.

A. spends his life time sawing logs. B. spends his in laying brick; C. spends his in farming; D. is an electrician; others are lawyers, doctors, ministers, merchants, bankers, senators.

The law of life is one of growth, an unfolding, progressive process of improvement. How can it be fulfilled without rebirth, the giving of new bodies to old souls? Each re-birth is an elevation of the soul to higher levels, to new experiences and with a better vehicle through which to express its desires and attributes. Rebirth is no more of a mystery than first birth of life in any aspect. Rebirth is not only logical but it embodies justice and impartialiay to all men and becomes a necessity of nature—a factor in the higher evolution of the soul. Everywhere nature shows continuity, of design and purpose. Nowhere does she recant, repent, make mistakes or change her plans. To spend millions of years to clothe the soul of man with materiality, to make him plough the soil or paint houses for forty or fifty years, just for his board and clothes, and then to extinguish him or even to send him to paradise—crude and unlearned—is a refutation of divine wisdom which we ascribe to our Maker.

God works through centers of force. And great souls are all as beacon lights, who illumine the pathway of life to the benighted, untaught, inexperienced and younger souls. Great souls are God's greatest factors for the higher evolution of man. Out of his animality they will eventually elevate him in morality to intellectuality and spirituality.

God's only interest in man seems to be the converting of human souls into souls divine in their attributes. All else are but means to this one supreme end.

The so-called death of the body, its sins, crime and sufferings, its famines, plagues and pestilence, its inhuman wars, our greed, selfishness and intolerance all seem to be viewed as experiences through which man must go in order to learn wisdom and make character.

God runs the subconscious, the involuntary machinery of our lives, apart from that, our freedom of the will absolves God from responsibility for all our inhumanities to man, our sins, errors and our international wars. Because—

"Man is mind, and evermore
He takes the tool of thought
And shaping what he wills,
Brings forth a thousand joys
Or, ten thousand ills."

BITTINGER

For more than a week the peace and quiet of this community has been rent and torn and disfigured until the tranquil mind of the observer fails to recognize the village of his happy boyhood. In the corner grocery, along the high-way, in the field and in the shop, we hear loud lamentations over the question of the construction of a new county road across Negro Mountain, near Rock Lodge, where it is said all sorts of dangers will lurk when the road is completed. The people are divided on the question, and what the outcome will be is yet to be learned.

William Glotfelty, of near McHenry, was a pleasant business caller in this village one day last week.

Carroll A. Elliott, the genial radio and music dealer, of Oakland, was among last week's visitors to this hamlet.

Deputy Sheriff, William Casteel, of Oakland, spent part of last Saturday afternoon summoning witnesses from this neighborhood to attend this week's session of the Circuit Court.

Josephine Sines, of near Swallow Falls, spent last Saturday at the Oliver Beachy home, near here.

Miss Huldah Stark and a lady friend, of Cumberland, spent Sunday at the home of Miss Stark's father, returning to Cumberland Sunday evening.

Charles J. Sechler and family, of St. Paul, Pa., attended church here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa J. Orendorf visited relatives at Centerville, Pa., one day last week.

Hon. N. R. Selby, of Selbysport, the recently announced candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator, was shaking hands with voters in this district some days ago.

Prohibition officers recently visited this section and as a result John Wilburn and John Swauger, of near Jennings, were arrested as violaters of the prohibition law.

Mrs. J. B. Emory and son motored to Meyersdale, Pa., last Saturday afternoon on a shopping expedition.

Mrs. George Stark and little daughter, Marie, visited Mrs.Stark's parents at Accident, on Sunday.

Elijah F. Durst, of this village, spent last week with friends in and near Oakland.

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

Expert Pacific Coast Cooks Give Choice Recipes for Unusual Desserts

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of cooking articles contributed to this paper by six famous cooks.)

There never was a woman who kept house who didn't want her cooking to have an individual touch. And the making of desserts offers plenty of opportunity for expressing this individuality.

Recipes for several delicious desserts are given in this article by Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco, home economics counsellor, and Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, domestic science director, Los Angeles.

Santa Clara Dumplings

"For a quickly made dessert, I recommend Santa Clara Apricot Dumplings," says Mrs. DeGraf. "It takes less than half an hour to prepare them."

Here is Mrs. DeGraf's recipe:

1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons shortening
½ cup milk
1 cup strained, stewed apricots

Sift dry ingredients together. Rub in shortening, then gradually add milk, mixing with a flat knife. Turn on to a slightly floured board. Roll out in rectangular shape about 4 inches wide and 8 inches long. Cover top of dough with apricot puree, then roll up like a jelly roll. Cut off slices an inch thick, and place cut side down in greased baking dish. Bake in a hot oven about 15 minutes. Serve with lemon sauce.

Make the lemon sauce by mixing ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup white sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, juice and grated rind of one lemon, and 1 tablespoon butter. Bring to boil, and cook for five minutes.

Dumplings and sauce should be served hot.

With Oranges

Another interesting fruity dessert for which Mrs. DeGraf provides the recipe is Orange Custard Pudding.

1 cup sifted bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 cup orange rind
3 eggs separated
½ cup sugar

Add the grated rind of 1 orange to the juice. Use soft bread crumbs. Sift through a coarse strainer. Add milk and orange juice. Beat eggs separately. Add sugar to yolks and then add to the custard. Mix well, then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour in pudding dish. Set dish in a pan of hot water and bake until firm in center, about 30 minutes, in a moderate oven, 360 degrees Fahrenheit.

Pineapple, Too

Hawaiian Pineapple Pudding is a simple dessert which is very pretty. Mrs. DeGraf makes it with one cup rice, 1 cup grated pineapple, cups whipped cream, and ½ cup powdered sugar.

Wash rice well. Add 2 cups of cold water. Cover closely and set over a low flame, cooking for about 20 minutes, or until all the water is absorbed. When cooked remove from fire, sprinkle with sugar, cover and let stand five minutes. Turn into a bowl and set aside to cool. Just before luncheon is served add remaining ingredients. Pile in sherbet cups and serve.

With Any Fruit

Strawberry Meringues! Doesn't it sound like a most palatable dessert? Mrs. Vaughn has a simple recipe for it.

3 egg whites
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg whites stiff. Add the vinegar to the egg whites and beat. Add sugar gradually, beating it with wire whip. Drop the mixture in spoonfuls on oiled paper placed on baking sheet and bake in a slow oven. When finished, cut the meringues through the center and fill with crushed strawberries. Serve topped with whipped cream.

Other fruits may bo used in season instead of the strawberries. This makes a dainty dish to serve at parties, too.

An Unusual Pie

1¾ cups boiling water
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons flour
⅔ cup sugar
Juice two lemons
Grated rind one lemon
½ cup finely chopped figs
2 eggs

Sift dry ingredients into top of double boiler. Pour boiling water on them, stirring constantly. Cook for 15 minutes. Beat eggs slightly, and with figs add to cooked mixture. Let cook 3 minutes. Remove from fire and add lemon juice and rind. Turn into plate lined with pastry, wet edge. Make lattice of pastry strips across top. Bake 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves 6.

Everyone likes a change of cooking. These "different" desserts will please the most particular.

LEFT to right: Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, Miss Rosa Michaelis, Mrs. Belle DeGraf, Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Miss Lucy G. Allen, and Miss Margaret Allen Hall.

Sarah Tyson Rorer

Where is the woman who does not agree with Mrs. Rorer's statement? Yet why will so many women put up with an inefficient stove day after day?

MRS. RORER, famous Philadelphia cooking expert, and five other famous cooks who recently conducted a practical test of the Perfection Stove, agree that good cooking results depend to a great extent on a good stove. They agree, too, after critical, exhaustive cooking tests that the Perfection is a mighty good stove. Their comments on the Perfection's performance will give you some idea of what men would demand, and what experts do demand of a stove.

Easy operation. "I like equipment which is easy to work with," said Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco, home economics counsellor. "And the Perfection certainly is. It lights at the touch of a match. And the heat is regulated by a simple turn of the wick."

Adaptable, too. "The Perfection proved its adaptability to me," commented Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Los Angeles, home economics director, "by performing many cooking operations at the same time—frying, baking, boiling, and broiling."

Ample heat supply. "And," said Miss Rosa Michaelis, famous New Orleans specialist, "there is no lessening of heat, regardless of how many burners are lighted. Each is an independent unit."

Dependable flames. "That's true," remarked Miss Lucy G. Allen, of the Boston School of Cookery. "And the flames stay just as you set them. They do not creep."

And clean. "There's no soot or odor, either, when you cook on the Perfection," added Mrs. Rorer. "The efficient long chimneys burn the oil completely before the heat reaches the utensils."

Safe and economical. "All these points recommend the Perfection," said Miss Margaret A. Hall, Battle Creek College of Home Economics. "And, in addition, it is safe and economical in operation. What more could anyone ask of a stove?"

• • •

In other words, the Perfection meets the high standards of the six critical cooks. It will meet yours, too. See the 1926 Perfections at any dealer's. All sizes from a one-burner model at $6.75 to a five-burner range at $120.00. Every woman who cooks deserves a good stove.

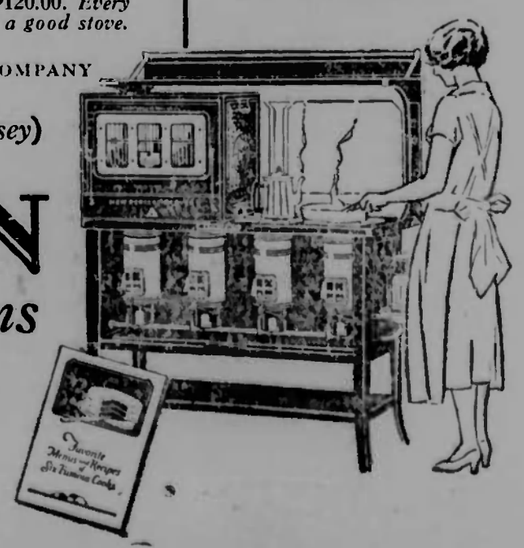
Clean, Even Cooking Heat

The long chimneys of the Perfection burn every drop of the oil before it reaches the kettle. Thus you get clean, even cooking heat free from soot and smoke.

You can be doubly sure of this sort of heat when you use a pure water-white Kerosene that burns cleanly, evenly and without odor—"Standard" Kerosene. It is specially refined.



All impurities that might cause smoke or leave deposits of soot are removed. This assures the maximum amount of heat. By sticking to "Standard" Kerosene you are sure of best results from your Perfection. Insist on it. You can buy it anywhere.

"Tramp" Cows Cost Farmers More Than Billion a Year

Huge Drain on Agriculture Can Be Offset By Better Methods, Says Institute Founder

By L. J. BROSEMER

Two groups of farms represent an average business investment of $23,000 per farm. One group showed a yearly labor income of $1,423. The other group cleared only $95 labor income for twelve months' hard work.

J. E. Larrowe

What all of us with money invested in land, animals and crops want in goodly measure, year after year, is "labor income," because labor income represents the amount of earnings left for one year's work after all expenses and interest at 5% on our investment have been taken into account. If we can't make money, why farm at all?

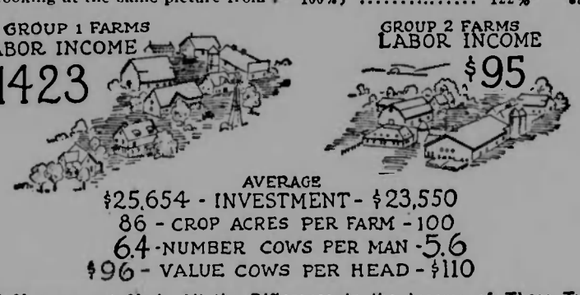
Quite a big difference between $1,423 and $95 as the result of a whole year's work! At least that is how it struck me, listening to James E. Larrowe outline the three factors which are keeping down profits in America's greatest industry. These are the waste, not the cost, of feed, the low production per animal, and the waste of time because of poor management.

Or, looking at the same picture from a slightly different angle, it is costing our farmers $1,200,000,000 a year in feed, labor and overhead expense to keep the 12,000,000 tramp cows that produce less than the U. S. average milk production per cow. And none of these tremendous losses will be stopped until American farms are put on a business basis.

That is the opinion of James E. Larrowe, a successful business man whose clearly defined ideas on farming are the result of facts, proven on his noted Larro Research Farm and coupled with government and state field data covering thousands of eastern and southern farms.

We talked together in his office, visited his research farms, questioned the nutrition experts, former college professors, fact and detail hunters in his recently organized Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics, and I was amazed to learn how closely interwoven the businesses of milk, egg and meat production were with the general business structure of the nation, and the large part they play in our national economic life.

I wanted to get into the data, reports and charts used by the Institute workers, so I started at the beginning with a simple question. "Suppose," I asked, "a farmer is making a living milking cows, producing a few eggs, feeding a few hogs and growing crops to feed his stock. He feels his cows ought to make more profit. What can he do that will increase his profits—increase his profits right away, not next year?"



The answer I received certainly hit the nail on the head.

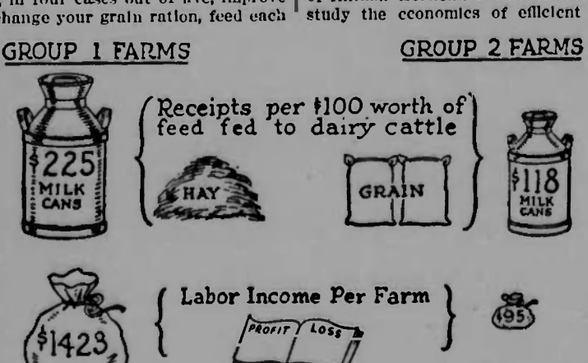
Answer: "You are depending on cows for a living. Milk at low cost is what you want. Very well. It takes good cows, good hay and a good grain ration to make money. You can't buy better cows, unless you have the money. You can't breed a new generation of better cows from the ones you have. That takes years. But you can, in four cases out of five, improve or change your grain ration, feed each cow as an individual according to her production and start making more money within a week," all of which was merely another way of stressing greater efficiency.

We had not gone very far into the subject of animal efficiency before I found myself facing facts obtained from official sources presented in two neatly arranged tables for single comparisons. The new data in these tables did more to convince me that farm profits depend upon efficient feeding than have any figures I had ever seen in this age of statistics and nation of statisticians. These data are worth a good many hundred dollars to any thinking farmer keen enough to learn the lesson they teach.

In the table are given "pictures in figures" of what resulted from a year's work on two large groups of farms. In the very first line is shown the last thing a farmer finds out—his yearly labor income. The farmers in Group 1 make $1,423 labor income. That sum is practically 15 times greater than the labor income made by the farmers in Group 2.

Average Factors	Group 1	Group 2
Labor income	$ 1,423	$ 95
Size vs. Intensity.
Capital investment	$25,654	$23,550
Acres in farm	108	137
Crop acres in farm	86	100
Number of men	1.8	1.6
Number of cows	11.5	8.9
Number of cows per man	6.4	5.6
Units of livestock	14.8	12.5
Hours of productive work	3,110	2,720
Crop acres per man	48	62
Hours of productive work per man	173	170
Per cent total crop and stock receipts from livestock	67	60
Efficiency of Production.
Value of land per acre	$ 202	$ 149
Value of cows per head	96	110
Crop index (average is 100%)	122%	89%
Pounds of butterfat per cow	249	207
Economy and Efficiency of Feeding.
Feed per unit livestock	$ 103	$ 119
Receipts per $100 fed livestock	178	101
Receipts per $100 fed dairy cattle	225	113

Good Management Made All the Difference in the Income of These Two Groups of Farmers.



A study of the two columns of figures shows that there was only a small difference in the average capital invested in the two groups of farms. More intensive farming was practiced by the farmers in Group 1—they had more livestock and more cows per farmer, per acre and per man. Their enterprises made possible more hours of productive work per farm.

A further study of the figures shows that the farms in Group 1 produced more efficiently than did those in Group 2. The Group 1 farms produced larger crop yields—122% against 89%, basing 100% as an average. Group 1 farms produced more butterfat per cow—249 pounds per cow as against 207 pounds. Or, to put it in terms of milk, approximately 7,114 pounds per cow as against 5,014 pounds.

That brings us to the points of the lesson worth nailing down. These points are as follows:

(1) The intelligent, efficient feeding—good roughage plus a milk-making grain ration—practiced on Group 1 farms, returned $225 for every $100 worth of feed fed dairy cattle. (2) On the other farms only about half as much, or to be exact, only $118 was returned out of every $100 worth of feed. (3) On one group of farms the crops of 86 acres plus purchased concentrates show a yearly labor income of $1,423—primarily because more intelligent feeding resulted in receipts of $225 from over $100 worth of roughage, farm-grown grains and purchased concentrates (4) The other group cleared only $95 labor income for 12 months' hard work, and had receipts of only $118 from every $100 worth of feed.

Little wonder the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics was founded to study the economics of efficient production from dairy cows, fowls and hogs for this nation of milk, egg and pork eaters. We farmers need it. We waste land, we waste man-power, we waste hay, fertility and machinery. But our most appalling waste is our wastage of grain through improper feeding and through our failure to use proven, tested, milk-making rations, egg-producing mashes, and economical pork-making feeds.

OWNER OF BURNED HOTEL ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

J. J. Singleton, Accused of Firing Building at Loch Lynn, Discharged by Justice

J. J. Singleton, owner and manager of the Hicks House, a hostelry at Loch Lynn, near the B. & O. station at Mt. Lake Park, which burned to the ground early Monday morning a week ago, who had been charged with having set the house afire, was acquitted at a hearing given him by Magistrate E. I. West on last Friday.

Mr. Singleton's arrest was made the day of the fire by William D. Casteel, deputy sheriff, on a warrant which he had procured from Magistrate West on circumstantial evidence furnished by residents of Loch Lynn. He was jailed but later released pending further investigation by the State's Attorney and the Sheriff.

At his hearing on Friday there was no substantial evidence produced to hold Singleton on this serious charge and he was therefore acquitted and is not held responsible for the conflagration.

The hotel, which was three stories high, and had 33 rooms, was built about 25 years ago but it is understood that it had never been operated at a profit to its several owners.

Health Notes.

Here are some tabloid statements on various phases of public health activities, taken from addresses made by representative speakers at the American Health Congress at Atlantic City recently, and that are passed on to the people of Maryland by Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health. They are worth thinking about, he said, because they represent the convictions of a great group of people, not simply the opinions of one State or section of the country. The congress was attended by over six thousand delegates from every part of the United States and Canada. There were also guests and speakers present from Great Britain, France, Belgium, Switzerland Australia and South Africa. Every sort of public health activity was discussed, but the keynote of all of the discussions was "the prevention of disease and the promotion of health."

Here they are:

By Sir Arthur Newsholme, of Great Britain: "The three main objects of public health work are: (1) the prevention of disease; (2) the enhancement of health; (3) the cultivation of the complete being of man in order that physically, mentally and morally there may be the highest self-development of a well balanced nature."

Dr. Livingston Farrand, the president of Cornell University: "The educated person should have a knowledge of the important health problems facing the community, of the methods of attacking those problems and of the results to be expected from intelligent community action in the public health field."

Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., Commissioner of Health for the State of New York: "Ten thousand lives are sacrificed needlessly from diphtheria in the Unied States each year. Ninety per cent of these deaths occur in children under five years of age. Science has now given us means whereby complete protection against this disease may be accomplished by the administration of toxin-anti-toxin. The vast majority of the people so immunized will never contract diphtheria, even though exposed to the disease."

Sir Arthur Newsholme: "The removal of the great environmental enemies of public health must always remain the basis of public health work. Of these enemies impure drinking water and defective arrangements for the removal of organic filth from subsequent human contact are the greatest dangers to health and life."

Dr. Arnold Gesell, Yale University: "If we want this civilization to march forward toward higher economic standards, to moral and spiritual ideals, it will march only on the feet of healthy children."

Dr. Ellen C. Potter, Pennsylvania State Department of Health: "The biggest bill the taxpayer has to meet is due to the care of the sick; the biggest bill the individual has to meet in unhappiness, ineffectiveness and failure is due to that individual's lack of real health: both bills can be tremendously reduced by a well organized, well executed program of positive health."

Card of Thanks.

AGENTS DESTROY BIG STILL LOCATED NEAR OAKLAND

Operation in a Dense Woods North of Town Had Capacity of Four Hundred Gallons

Two men, William G. White, of Clarksburg, West Va., and Charles R. Pratt, of Oakland, were arrested on Monday afternoon at six o'clock by Federal Enforcement Officers William R. Harvey and Cleveland D. Jarvis, who took them to Cumberland for a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Anderson.

The arrest of the two men followed the discovery of probably the largest moonshine operation ever before uncovered in Garrett county which was found in a rocky glen of a farm owned by Grover Browning and tenanted by Pratt, the latter being engaged at the moment of his arrest in plowing a field some distance from the location of the still and who is believed by many to be entirely innocent of any participation in the operation of the plant which had a capacity of four hundred gallons. White is a native of Clarksburg and it is said that from the local plant he kept the West Virginia town from becoming too arid.

In addition to the still great quantities of whiskey mash in huge wooden bins and barrels and a first run of corn liquor were found. The officers set fire to the building housing the still and burned it to the ground.

At the hearing before the Commissioner in Cumberland both White and Pratt were held under bonds of $1000 each. Bail for the latter has been arranged and he will probably return to his home today.

During the past winter some men from near town were engaged in fox hunting and in the woods near the White still they discovered two hundred gallons of liquor. A report of the find was made to the officers, but before they arrived at the place the contraband had been removed. On another occasion it is said two men with a truck drove to the spot and said they had been sent from Clarksburg to get the daily consignment of liquor requesting that it be loaded at once and exhibiting a roll of currency told the owner of the whiskey they were prepared to hand over the money as soon as the liquor was loaded. As soon as it was stored on the truck the pair drew revolves and commanded an open road and no interference with their actions, coupling their command with a swift shift of the gears of their machine which carried them to the main highway and soon out of sight.

Officers Harvey and Jarvis also visited the farm of Hobart Harvey, near Oakland where they found a fifty-gallon barrel of liquor buried in the earth with a rubber hose attachment. They also found a quantity of whisky mash which they destroyed but were unable to locate the still. The officers declared that Harvey had just taken a drink by sucking on the hose when they arrived. His arrest followed and he is being held for action under the Garrett county local law.

WOULD HIDE SIGNBOARDS BY PLANTING TREES

Forester Says Signboard Advertising Would Be Made Relatively Useless.

Elimination of signboards along rural highways through the planting of trees at various points will be recommended officially to Governor Ritchie by F. W. Besley, State Forester. As far as is known, this method never has been considered except by individual property owners.

Authority already has been granted to plant trees along highways; the State already operates a nursery for trees intended for roadside planting and all that is lacking is public interest and a relatively small appropriation to carry out the plan, Mr. Besley said Monday.

"Many other methods of eliminating signboards have been attempted, such as taxation and direct legal restrictions," Mr. Besley continued. "These, however, have met with various constitutional and other effective objections. The planting of trees along highways, on the other hand, already has been authoized by law and is highly desirable in itself.

"Relatively few trees would be required, because to be effective in the case of users of fast-moving vehicles, they must have uninterrupted vision of the signs. A few trees, well placed, would serve to break the line of vision and make the signs relatively useless.

"Signs generally are placed on the outer curves of roadways. A small group of trees also would be sufficient in these places and would add greatly to the beauty of the roadway.

"On curves I would suggest planting trees about 75 feet apart and on straight highways approximately 100 feet. The State could reasonably plant 100 miles a year, or about 25,000 trees. Undoubtedly many eivic clubs and towns could be interested in beautifying their approaches and this would add materially to the mileage planted.

"The cost of such a program would be insignificant compared with the benefits which would accrue. We could grow trees suitable for the purpose at a cost of about $1 each. They could be set out for about the same amount. Of course, they would require some care, but they would not be an important item and appears to me a just charge against maintenance of highways.

"The actual location of the trees would be a matter for the State Roads Commission to determine in the best interest of traffic. The Forestry Board, however, is in a position to give expert advice on the kind of tree best suited to any particular location and the care to be given them, besides actually supplying the trees.

"The right of way on the main highways leading to Baltimore is sixty-six feet except the Washington Boulevard , where it is sixty feet. This would give plenty of room for tree planting and the question of present poles and wires could be taken care of easily. Incidentally, the law already has eliminated advertising of all kinds from the rights of way.

"The only case of the planting of trees in Baltimore to do away with obnoxious signs which I can think of is that of the Lombardy poplars near the Union Station. They were set out a few years ago by the Pennsylvania Railroad for this purpose and they were effective.

"The nursery at College Park now produces 5,000 trees for roadside planting annually. This output could be increased indefinitely and at small cost."

NO MORE SKIRTS.

The skirt is doomed, says Booth Tarkington, the novelist. "Fifty years from now the skirts, as an article of women's apparel, will have disappeared entirely."

This statement doesn't arouse the consternation it might have aroused a decade or two ago. We are not easily shocked any more. Besides, there is little left of the skirt now, it seems plainly evolving, or devolving into nothing right before our eyes.

Tarkington says he expects to see the time when all women will regularly wear garments just about the same as men's. There is no reason, he thinks, why they shouldn't. It isn't a question of modesty, but of custom and fitness.

We guess we can stand it, if we must. Bloomers are not so bad, anyway, though they need oddly to shock us early in this revolutionary century. Or if its to be trousers, that, too, probably doesn't matter much. We can get used to anything. They'll still be the same women.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McComas, who were called to Oakland on account of the death of Miss Anna McComas, returned to their home at New Kensington, Pa., Sunday.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JUNE 27, 1926.

WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM THE BOOK OF GENESIS. Review.

We know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose.—Romans 8:28.

THE UNFOLDING STORY.

We are closing our study of this book of beginnings and it's been great. It has been like looking thru a crack in the fence at the ball park and, unable to catch all the plays, just getting glimpses of God at work making things and being close enough to catch His chuckling comment, "It's very good." Stars and worlds were fashioned and then away out in the suburbs of the universe where they wouldn't be disturbed He built a house for His boys. It is little enough for companionship and yet big enough to challenge man's mightiest endeavors. When we grow up there's old Jupiter to expand over or if that isn't enough there's Betelgeuse, 27 million times as vast as our sun—O boy! Isn't it good to have forever?

The book has selected material only. It runs along the family line with shoots dropping away from it so that the men who chose God are the center of the stage. Cain goes off and Seth continues. Noah appears and then the line takes in Shem while the others are passed by. Terah comes on and Abraham succeeds him while Lot goes from the record. Isaac carries forward the hope of God while Ishmael enters the wilderness. Jacob is the next to outstrip Esau in the mind of the teller of the story and continues to hold attention thru Joseph until the record closes with a grave in Egypt. Not one of them is perfect but they are the best that God can find willing to carry out His purpose for the world of men. It is the continuous method upon every page of history that marks the slow climbing of the race. It is not always fact but there is a tremendous truth in Lowell's lines:

Right forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadows
Keeping watch upon His own.

Two simple truths are fundamental in the Book. One is that God is in relation with men. Planning and preparing for his advent, compassing him with the fence of law within which he may safely advance, following him when he climbs over into forbidden territory, punishing him that he may learn to live truly, forgiving him, whispering to him of hope's crown and the harvest of his tears, and in every century giving him the cheer of an unseen Presence. The other truth is that man may relate himself to God. God insists upon being within reach, but He will not hold my hand unless I give it. I may relate myself to Him or I may refuse; I have the privilege of choice. And man's glory is in being partner with the Almighty and it has been thru such partnership that all the progress of the race has been made.

PRIMARY TOPIC: FAVORITE STORIES FROM GENESIS.

Pictures form the best foundation for the work of this group and both Wilde and Perry offer just what is needed. They will be used in any way the ingenuity of the teacher suggests and will become helpful rewards for the pupils work. They may be all pinned upon a screen and the first pupil called on may select one and tell its story as he recalls it. Other details may be given by the rest or by the teacher and then it is removed and a second choice made by one of the class until all are used and each picture has become the possession of a scholar.

JUNIOR TOPIC: STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.

A flash map is a continuous interest to this group and if one is used with the places identified by the flash of light the stories will have a substantial background. An ordinary map may be used also. Stereograph pictures will add vividness as will other pictures suggested above. A black-board offers help in simply sketching in some things that will indicate the ideas to be impressed. A story telling contest may be arranged in which the lives studied are presented by the pupils, the best told story bringing some recognition. Little copies of Genesis may be had for less than a nickle and may well become souvenirs of the study of the quarter, auctioning them off for story recall of the contest.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC: FAVORITE CHARACTERS IN GENESIS.

"My favorite character" may be the presentation of each scholar in the form of an argument or an essay and the class may determine its choice from among them as its favorite for the quarter. If there is a class room the result may become a permanent adornment thru the purchase of a picture of the selected person to place upon the wall. This will become the classes' bible picture gallery as the months go on and will become an increasingly helpful aid in inducing love for the people of the Book. In case such a plan is inaugurated the class should be consulted and all the characters of the quarter assigned for presentation. Class contests may be arranged both within and between classes that will give as much interest as the old spelling match. A study of the qualities that distinguish the character will make an interesting method. Adam was unfair in his partnership with God, Abel's life was one of happy trust, Abraham's was marked by the adventurous faith of the pioneer, and so the names may become real characters.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS: PERMANENT MESSAGES OF THE BOOK OF GENESIS.

Something of a book study may serve as a fitting close of the course so that an outline on blackboard or paper may be helpful in fixing the content. A chart with heading for each chapter selected by the class offers another way. Assignment of the lessons, each to report some permanent message from the one assigned will be an excellent device. The first may yield, "God the creator of all things;" the second, "Sin brings suffering," etc. "Old lessons for new life" may be taken as a theme with the assignment of the lesson to individuals to bring in their report. The first may bring "The family is God's fundamental institution." The second may possibly be, "Separate planning will wreck the home." Or a discussion may be built about "The finest thing I have learned from Genesis," in which each may have a part. Always there is the lesson by lesson recall but it seems better fitted to lower grades than this.

was more than satisfied

Great institution recommends Perfection after exacting tests

TRULY scientific is the Battle Creek College of Home Economics. Its nutrition expert, Miss Margaret Allen Hall, cooked many meals on a Perfection in a nation-wide cooking test conducted hy six famous cooks. Miss Hall expressed the most complete satisfaction with the Perfection.

The results were fine

"Whether I broiled mushrooms, boiled peas or fried timhale cases the results were fine," she said. "The stove lighted quickly. Its heat was steady and even and so easily regulated that I cooked all those dishes at the same time, using a different grade of heat for each.

The flame is steady

"The flame did not creep or crawl. I tested the oven with a standard oven thermometer and found that I could keep it any length of time at the temperature I desired. This is very necessary for successful baking.

Odors don't mix in the oven

"One meal I cooked entirely in the oven, corn and cheese souffle, stuffed tomatoes seasoned with onions, and angel food cake. There was no mingling of odors. This meal saved fuel, too, as I used only one burner. Through the glass doors I could see at any moment how every dish was getting along.

"The Perfection is easy to handle and easy to keep clean. And I didn't have to scrub pots and pans. The long chimneys prevented discoloration. From the former knowledge I had of oil stoves, my expectations were exceeded by the performance of the Perfection."

Battle Creek Recommends

This recommendation came from the Battle Creek College of Home Economics after the most exacting laboratory tests. Scientific Battle Creek was more than satisfied. And the Perfection was proved ready to meet the cooking needs of any household.

All six famous cooks recommend the Perfection. Every day 4,500,000 women with Perfections in their kitchens are having real cooking satisfaction.

PLAN AFOOT TO STIR NON-VOTER TO DUTY.

John Hays Hammond, chairman of the department of political education of the National Civic Federation, in announcing Monday a nation-wide campaign to be made by the federation, with the cooperation of the American Legion, for the purpose of awakening a keener sense of civic patriotism in the millions of non-voters in the last two national elections, said:

"The scandalous corruption revealed in the recent primary election in Pennsylvania, the notorious violation of the national prohibition law, with its ugly climax of murderous gang warfare at Chicago, and the shocking milk graft cases at New York involving the health of more than 6,000,000 men, women and children, represent, in distinct phases, the present apathy toward law and decency.

Non-Voters Blamed.

"That such condition can exist is due solely to the negligence of the individual voter. If crime and hypocrisy are to be done away with and a sense of public order restored, the movement must arise from local communities throughout the country which, in the end, determine public opinion. We are a democracy. The vote of the private citizen alone can save us from becomming a corrupt democracy. Public indifference spells calamity."

Mr. Hammond said an expert, nonpartisan committee would make a study of the direct primary as opposed to the convention system of making nominations and that the results would be reported in November.

The drive for better citizenship will open with appeals for cooperation to more than 100 national organizations and will lead up to local meetings, September 21, in 1,000 cities and towns. The conferences will be called by the Legion's Americanism commission, Frank C. Cross, national director, acting for the National Civic Federation, and will be composed of representatives of commercial, labor, church, educational, professional, patriotic, civic associations, women's clubs and the like. In this way the leaders of the drive expect to reach all classes and occupations.

The point that will be emphasized at the meetings is the necessity not only to turn out on the ordinary registration, primary and election days but to enroll in a political party.

To Enlist Boys and Girls.

In conjunction with the endeavor to arouse adults to their obligations, a vigorous campaign also will be conducted to stimulate interest in practical politics on the part of the future voters, the 3,000,000 high school boys and girls; the 100,000 or more university and college students who are graduated annually; the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts—now numbering about 1,000,000; the 200,000 boys of the Order of the De Molay, indeed, the youth of the country.

More than 2,000,000 high school and college students are receiving training in the fundamentals of Federal Government trought the national and and intercollegiate oratorical contests on the Constitution of the United States. It is proposed that, to round out their education in citizenship, the participants in the contest be offered post-graduate courses, so to speak, in the practical methods whereby the principles of government are carried into effect through the machinery of political parties.

The personnel of the federation's department on political education is as follows: Honorary chairman, Elihu Root, chairman, John Hays Hammond; the vice-chairmen: Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York; Arthur Capper, Senator from Kansas; Frank L. Polk, former acting Secretary of State; Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois; Robert W. Bingham, editor, Louisville; Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, member executive Committee, Republican National Committee, of New York and Mrs. Benton McMillin, Tennessee member Democratic National Committee.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Dr. T. D. Richards left here Monday afternoon for Cumberland where he is a patient in one of the hospitals of that city and will undergo a serious surgical operation unless his disease yields to treatment otherwise.

Mrs. Belle Kisner and daughter and son-in-law spent a few days at the former's home here this week.

The Christian Laymen's Conference which is composed of about six hundred preachers and laymen of the Pittsburgh district, representing all the churches of that section, is in session at the Park now, the meeting having opened on Monday and will continue during the week. Among the outstanding speakers this year are Dr. John Timothy Stone, Dr. John M. Vander Meulin, Dr. W. B. Anderson and Dr. Gorge W. Rhoad, besides local speakers from Pittsburgh and near-by cities. Among the delegates in attendance is Mr. U. G. Palmer, of Verona, Pa., a former resident of Oakland.

Mr. Ivey and family, from near McKeesport, Pa., are now occupying Mr. Roy Bittinger's cottage in the Park.

The McConnell cottage is well filled with people from Wheeling, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Richardson and daughter, of Piedmont, W. Va., are here for the season.

Rev. Raymond Brown, our hustling assistant superintendent, is now here putting the buildings and grounds in good shape for the summer gatherings. He preached two good sermons in the M. E. church last Sabbath.

The summer programs are now out and can be had by calling at the Association office.

One of the B. & O. train-men discovered fire in the Hicks house, near the station, early Tuesday morning. He stopped his train and gave the alarm, but the fire had started under the building and was up in the walls inside so the two fire engines and fire fighters could not get to it. It was only by heroic efforts and the, wind, which was from the west, that the Weeks' store building, just across the street, was saved. Had the wind been from the east the buildings along the front would likely have been burned down.

Among those arriving in the Park since last week are Mrs. Bobo and daughters, Romney house; Mrs. I. D. Hill, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Richardson, from Fairmont, W. Va.; Mr. Grimes and family, of Keyser; Mrs. Morgan, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Ivey, of near McKeesport, Pa., who have rented the Bittinger cottage and expect to move into it next week.

The first gathering for this season will be the Christian Laymen of Pittsburgh, Pa. They will be here from Monday, June 21, to the 25th. inclusive. The Campmeeting, July 1 to the 11th.

Our beautiful little lane, the oak forest and our splendid woods have never been more attractive than now.

There are still some vacant cottages for others who may wish to enjoy with us this most delightful Park in summer.

BITTINGER

Doubt is in the cowards heart,
Faith abides there never,
Fear is man's ignoble part,
Trust is lifes great lever.

Road construction, road location, grades, curves, distance and all kindred topics are still being discussed, but with less heat. Bitterness has given place to a sense of humor, reason to rank speculation and fancies are yielding to facts, so that there is promise of a speedy return of harmony.

While motoring along the county road on the east side of Meadow Mountain last Sunday morning Simon Brenneman had the unusual experience of coming upon a strange sight. As his car approached a quiet spot in the road, he saw a ground hog, a pheasant and a turtle grouped together in the middle of the road. As Mr. Brenneman alighted from his car the ground hog scampered away to the woods, the pheasant fluttered about in pretended anger, presumably in protection of a brood of young birds nearby, and after examining the turtle, Mr. Brenneman placed it in his car and gave that friendly creature the unusual pleasure of a joy ride.

Mr. Charles H. Wiley, with his mother and his family, motored to Reisterstown, Md., one day last week to visit his brother, Mr. B. H. Wiley, on his farm near that place.

The Baptist Brethren held a series of meetings in the Bethesda Chapel near this place last week. The services were conducted by Rev. Sines and were well attended.

Silas O. Wiley, of Grantsville, was a caller in this village last week.

Mrs. Jonas Bittinger spent last Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Charles J. Sechler at St. Paul, Pa.

Prof. Chauncey M. Friend and family, after the closing of the village school for the summer vacation, returned to their home near Friendsville last Saturday evening.

While attempting to get on his father's automobile while it was in motion, little Charles, son of Oliver Beachy, fell and the car passed over him, bruising him about the arm and shoulder, but fortunately not seriously injuring him.

Mrs. David Miller spent last week with her daughter in this village.

Bert Wiley returned a few days ago, from a visit of several days with relatives in Akron, Ohio.

JENNINGS

Mr. Paul Jones spent the week-end at his home in Frostburg.

Misses Gladys Custer and Beulah Hendershot motored to Cumberland on Saturday, where they will visit relatives for the next two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Butler, of Cumberland spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Marx Layman, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Durst and daughter were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wilburn on Sunday.

Miss Siberna Wilburn is now spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Wilburn.

BIG STRETCH OF OLD TURNPIKE SOON TO OPEN

The completion of the Northwestern Pike from Parkersburg to Grafton, W. Va. is promised by August 15th. Only a few short gaps remain to be closed up in order to give motorists a hard surfaced road from the Ohio river east to Grafton.

The road from Grafton east through Thornton, Fellowsville, Aurora and to the Maryland line has been graded but there is no definite date for the completion of surface work. After a short distance through this state the road again enters West Virginia and finally reaches Virginia.

Governor Gore made an inspection of the road work through West Virginia last week and announces the completion of several important projects before fall.

The hard-surfaced road between Oakland and Morgantown, by the way of Terra Alta and Kingwood, will be finished September 1st. There is strong sentiment for the improvement of the six mile stretch between Tunnelton and Fellowsville, thus uniting the National Pike and the Northwestern Pike.

We Celebrate Right Now

45 Years of continued operation.

45 Years of continued service to our patrons has made this House the greatest of its kind in existence.

45 Years of successful operation proves our leadership is unquestioned.

Music in every home is the keynote. Music is the greatest educator—music is the greatest of all elements to stimulate family morale; where there is music in the home, the home-life is more attractive.

A House That Keeps Ahead!

45 Years have always found this great house leading the music industry to educate the public into more and better music in the home—in the schools—45 years have always found us striving to furnish a plan—a way so that every home can have music of some kind.

This great house merits your confidence—your patronage.

Pride of Achievement

Wealth or riches without the pride of achievement is empty. A successful house works to see the structure of success completed. Pride of position flows in every man's veins but is of little importance compared to pride of achievement.

We have the pride of achievement because we have done something worth while and still we are not satisfied with our accomplishment. This great house, since being founded in 1881, 45 years ago, has strived to build up a business that through the ages will be a credit and a monument to us. We have diligently and earnestly labored to give our clientele something in advance—something superior—something to be proud of. Our stores we feel are a credit to us—to our ability.

We appreciate the patronage bestowed on us by the public. Our stores, we believe, are a credit to the community. We shall constantly endeavor to retain the confidence and good-will that we have gained. We are celebrating our achievement in a manner so that every home can be benefited by it.

We Have Just Concluded a Master Stroke

In order to perpetuate our name and commemorate our 45th Anniversary we succeeded in consummating a deal for one of the most splendid TIME HONORED MAKES OF INSTRUMENTS that can be found in America——

PRICE & TEEPLE
Pianos and Players

Instruments that needs no introduction to our friends. We have sold these famous pianos for over 30 years.

Pianos are like men—they have character. Likewise this character is reflected in every detail of construction. The makers of the Price & Teeple Pianos are men who have built up an industry on a solid foundation; who have distinct ideals in their understanding. Mr. W. B. Price, president of the Price & Teeple Piano Company, has made the piano his life work. In the plant where the Price & Teeple Pianos are manufactured, the maximum result is obtained with a minimum of effort. Where there is a combination of brains and ideals there can be but one result—a piano that has tone, touch, refinement, quality and durability. Such is the PRICE & TEEPLE.

Achievement Again

Read carefully the prices and see what we have accomplished in securing for our 45th Anniversary this sterling Price & Teeple Piano and Player Piano to be sold at such price and terms that will enable any home to possess a distinctly fine quality musical instrument. We need only mention that considerable effort was necessary to secure from the makers of the Price & Teeple instruments such concessions as would enable us, by co-operation, to present the offer herein contained. We have taken the huge stock certainly with the knowledge that our customers are going to be greatly benefited thereby. Quality has been our first consideration during our 45th Anniversary event.

THE GREATEST FORCE IN THE WORLD.

By F. F. CORLISS.

It has been said that a creator can not be separated from his creations; that a workman is always known by his work.

There seems to be no way for a craftsman—void of capital—to gain fame and fortune only as he puts into his work the best that is in him. He must concentrate his mind, character, skill and care and blend them and mould them into all the little details of the job given him to do. The world will beat a path to your door if your product excells that of your competitors. Life is made up of little things and it is the pain we take and the character we put into them that, when grouped together, either make us or mar us.

Stradivarius knew this, put it into practice, and was the most famous maker of violins the world had ever known. He gave his violins a sweet and mellow tone that no rival could equal. He put his character, his very soul, into all the little details by using almost infinite pains.

The workman who best serves his employer, best serves himself. And the one who slights his work, wasts time and material, suffers more than his employer. Honest work brings honest wages and is the only kind that ever brings a raise for the employee. Yes, honest work is the only kind that pays. There are profits in smiles—but never in frowns. It pays to be kind, polite, obliging, considerate of the rights of others. He who harbors thoughts of envy, jealousy, fear, anger and hate only injures himself.

Love is the greatest and most precious force known and costs us nothing to possess and use, and the following is a true tale of how the writer has seen it work in real life.

In the famous Berkshire Hills there is a little village called Axletree. Its homes are nestled in a sleepy hollow, on the winding banks of the placid Housatonic river, and framed in by a high and sloping landscape that seems wonderfully old, yet so beautiful in its quaint simplicity. This little town has none of the ear-marks of a factory village. Every home stands apart from its neighbor and has the appearance of independent ownership, with beautiful lawns and stately elms and large gardens in the rear Axletree is a one-man town and has but one industry. About a hundred years ago Jonas Hatwell began to make carriage axles in his little blacksmith shop and no one round about made any that were quite so good, and so the business grew and has been handed down to his grandson Roscoe.

One day a tramp came sauntering into this peaceful little hamlet where its inmates never knew want, hunger or drunkenness. The tramp said, "Are you the boss, mister?" "Well, my helpers never call me that—they call me Roscoe." "Well, are you the owner?" "Yes, what can I do for you?" "You can do a great deal for me if you are so disposed, and I can repay you a thousand fold. My name, sir, is John Anderson and I am a poor, heart-broken, worthless bum. I am a native of Wales, but I am an expert metallurgist and have made steel from my early boyhood. I possess trade secrets that are unknown in this country and I will teach you how to use catalytics in coloring, hardening and tempering; how to make Tungsten and Vanadium steel. To your eye I present a very sorry appearance, sir, dirty, hungry and ragged as I am, and I can hardly blame you if you distrust me in every thing I tell you. But I belong to a wealthy, highly educated and respectable family, and I am its only disgrace. I am the wandering black sheep of the family fold. Drink is my only weakness and my undoing; but the thirst comes on me like a fever and when I least expect it—unaided my will is powerless to resist its temptation. If you will only give me a trial, sir, I will give you honest work while it lasts but, if the appetite overcomes me I shall leave you without notice, but not without gratitude. I shall go from a sense of shame and disgrace."

"I think I will take you at your word, John. I will give you a trial and every encouragement to be a man. I have never turned any one from my door hungry, and especially one who is willing to work is worthy of his bread. I am going to call you John, and I want you to call me Roscoe and never say boss. I shall give you fifty dollars a month and your board, if that suits you, and you can begin in the morning. Now, come over to the Company store and pick out a suit of clothes and shoes and two suits of overalls and jumpers. Go down to the river and clean up, have a good swim and by that time we will be ready for supper. Now, John, you and I have met as strangers but under God's definition we are brothers, so let us live and work, and may we ever be friends. We have just a hundred men in our service here and about twenty of them worked for my father before I was born, and I am fifty-four as we count the years. I know every workman by name and his wife and all the children. We live like one big happy family. To every man who stayed with us five years I gave an acre of ground and helped him to build such a home as he liked. Every man owns his home—is free from debt—and most of them have a good bank balance. We haven't a drinking man in the plant. We have never had a strike nor a walk-out. I have never had Union help. Every man is as free to leave me and better himself as I am. But we encourage every man to give the best that is in him and we raise his wages according to his merits. We make a fine product, John, and our reputation stands high, but if we can make something better we are anxious to learn how and spread its usefulness for the benefit of others as well as for ourselves."

Next morning Jehn was at the shop waiting for the whistle to blow. Roscoe introduced him to the foreman and boys near by as though he was a purchasing agent.

In one corner of the building Roscoe had a private laboratory partitioned off from the eyes of the curious, and here the new methods were tried out and tested. Roscoe soon discovered that in John he had found a big diamond in the rough picked out of the mud. Roscoe only knew how to make carbon steel, while John knew how to make it in many varieties, combining other metals in a chemical process that his rivals could not imitate.

So, to have a long story briefly told, it is sufficient to say that the Atwell Axle works took on new life and grew by leaps and bounds. John worked as steady as a clock and remained as sober as a judge for twelve months. He had not gone three months at a time without a spree for the last twelve years until he met Roscoe.

Roscoe only had one child living, a daughter named Lucretia, and just six months before the advent of John she had married a young farmer whom she had known from early girlhood. Her wedding to Harvey Williams was very displeasing to her parents. Harvey was a very bright and popular man—especially so with the women—and Roscoe and his wife felt that his easy morals made him unworthy of a pure and noble minded girl like Lucretia. However, sorry as they were, the old folk made the best of it. They did not quarrel, did not ignore her or try to exclude her from the parental home, as many parents often do. Harvey's parents died about two years prior to his marriage and he had become sole heir to a large and valuable estate, which was on the main road to Pittsfield, and only four miles from Lucretia's home. Here, at the old homestead, Harvey and Lucretia began their married life, surrounded with all the comforts and luxuries which the old folk had left. But this blissful life came to a sudden termination. Just three months from the day they were married Harvey was kicked by a very unruly mule and instantly killed.

Lucretia's grief was hard to bear, but she was a very courageous and resourceful young woman and believed that the way to drown her sorrow and still show her love for Harvey was to keep busy and run the farm as Harvey would have done. It made Lucretia happy to feel that she was helping others less fortunate, so she gave a home to three of her poor relation: a maiden aunt and two girl cousins. With a cook and three farm hands she began her life of young widowhood.

Roscoe's little village was complete within itself save in one particular—it had no church. But Roscoe built a hall, a memorial to his father and grandfather who had done so much to establish the business, and every Sunday they had lectures here given by Roscoe, John or the superintendent. These Sunday talks were very instructive and morally elevating; they were really science sermons, all based on the laws of God as revealed in nature and in the science like chemistry, astronomy and biology. They taught the workmen their position in the universe, their relation to their Maker, and that the religion of humanity was the only one and consisted of giving a life of useful, helpful service to our fellowmen. During the week they often had private theatricals by local talent, dances for the employees and moving picture plays.

The workmen all looked up to Roscoe, as children do to a father. They respected him and followed his advice. Most of his men were of native yankee stock, but he also had Irish, Scotch, English and Welshmen and he had cautioned them against having arguments that would breed any racial or religious feeling, but he always left them free to join any religious sect or society they might wish.

When John first came Roscoe had hustled him into new clothes, from his socks to his hat, so quickly that no one knew of his previous condition—not even Lucretia—though John was living with her father as one of the family. John was only thirty-three—a fine and manly looking man, superbly built, athletic, with exuberant health and a kindly smile for every one he met.

During Lucretia's widowhood she had become a frequent caller at the old home and often sat at table next to John. She never missed a Sabbath at Memorial Hall when John was to be the speaker. People began to make remarks that her father and mother had forgiven her for her marriage to Harvey and that they were again reconciled and happy. But they little knew that in her heart there was an undying love for John.

The man who couldn't fall in love with Lucretia at first sight of her would be lacking in good sense. She was a queenly woman, beautiful in face and form, with hair as black as a raven's wing, and a skin as white as snow. Her cheeks had the blush of a red,red rose and her eyes were large, liquid and luminous that sparkled with love and life and laughter from the joyousness of radiant health. Lucretia was a woman of rare accomplishments. She was a graduate of Wellsley, and had served three years in a base hospital in France as a surgeon's assistant. She had witnessed the horrors and sufferings of cruel war and had experienced life in its good and bad aspects. She knew the secret, healing power of a woman's sympathy and kind caress that makes one strive to live.

John was born to wealth and educated at Oxford, and here he was working for a pittance—who might have had a steel plant of his own. He felt debased, just a menial. He was crazy for the love of Lucretia but had never dared to show it or speak it, as he felt—considering his weakness for drink—that he was unworthy of her.

It was Friday night, and the next day was Christmas and no work until Monday. All holidays are bad ones for the easily tempted. But Christmas is the hardest day in the year for a man to keep sober who has an appetite for drink that makes him forget. John was hungry for a woman's love, for a woman he never dreamed he could win, and he was blue, despondent.

After the sun went down and the land was dark, John stole out of the house by the back door, headed for Pittsfield, where old New England rum was plentiful and no one knew him. He never intended that any one who knew him in Axletree should see him drunk, for he was proud and did not wish to be mortified. Roscoe surmised and made a quiet search for him for three days with no success.

By the time John reached the town of Lee he was pretty well steamed and in leaving there for Pittsfield, as he thought, he got turned around and was on his way back to Axletree, and the road passed in front of Lucretia's farm. But John had reached that state of mind where knowing ceases and whatever happens is of no concern. John trudged along through a blinding snow and it was bitter cold. It was just growing dark on Tuesday and Lucretia was sitting by her cozy fire watching the storm when a drunken man stumbled in front of her barn door too weak or paralyzed to move.

"Maggie, there is a drunken man out here in the snow, tell the farm boys to go and get him at once, and bring him into the living room," was Lucretia's first command.

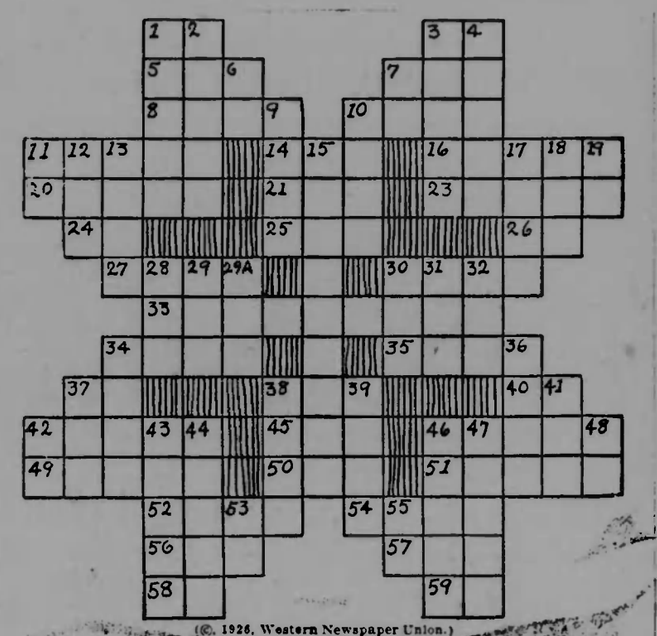
They got him into the house but he was all that three husky men could carry. They layed him on the leather couch and when they turned his face towards the light Lucretia gave a piercing shriek and almost fainted. She knelt by his couch and stroked his pallid foreheatd and moaned, "Oh John, how could you ever come to this, but thank heaven you dropped at my door, for you surely would have perished on a night like this."

"Now boys take him into the spare bed room, start a fire in the grate, strip off his clothes and put him to bed and we women will nurse him back to life."

She called her household together and said: "This is John Anderson—father's chemist—who has never been seen like this before and please God he will never be seen like this again so long as we both have life. Now I want you all to hold up your right hand and swear to me that you will never mention this incident to a living soul, so doing you will respect my wish and do no injury to John. Now Maggie, heat some blankets and Susie, you get a foot bath ready with salt and mustard in it."

Lucretia knew just what to do. She gave him aromatic ammonia, and at intervals a little carbonated water, and after a time stiff doses of bromide and by midnight John had recovered consciousness. Lucretia had taken all his clothes and locked them up. In his overcoat she found two full pints of old rye. Under Lucretia's loving care and skillful ministration John recovered quickly and in two days was sitting up and feeling like a man rejuvenated, but so ashamed that he was almost speechless, yet his heart beat with unbounded gratitude as he looked in Lucretia's eyes; eyes that spoke to him of a love and a devotion he had never known but for which he had been starving.

Lucretia sent word to her father that John was visiting—to say nothing until she saw him—and that after the New Year's holiday he would be at work again. She also bought a box of Webster cigars—John's favorite smoke.



The next evening they spent together in her cozy library and while John smoked she sang and played some old-time love songs that touch the heart and dim the eyes with tears.

"Now John, we need to have a good heart to heart talk. I know your feelings of remorse and I want to help you to overcome them and forget. I want you to promise me that it will never happen again so long as we both shall live. But John, I want you to feel that it was the greatest thing that ever happened under my roof, for me, and that my service for you gave me the most happiness of any thing in all my life. I would not have you think me fresh or too forwad for millions of money. I know that it is unconvenient for a woman to proclaim her love to the man she adores, but to me it seems supremely proper. Love is the greatest force in the world and to a woman it means more than all else in life. Why should I not have the same right to propose as a man has? I have loved you John from the day I first heard you lecture and I have suffered ever since from a non-expression of it. I have read your heart and I think that you have discovered what is in mine, which makes words useless. I am going to offer you now my heart, my love, my all, to be your wedded wife so long as life shall last. Do you take me?"

"Do I take you? Why, this is the happiest moment of all my life. I am so glad that you proposed. You did it so much better than I could have done it. Had I proposed Lucretia and been rejected it would have killed me. When will the happy event take place, dear?" "In just thirty days John, if it suits you and your future salary will be five hundred a month instead of fifty. If you will make automobile parts as you proposed to Dad, we will double the size of our little village and bring happiness to a hundred more new homes. There is nothing that makes one so happy as giving happiness to others."

"Your love for me Lucretia has proven that, proven that it is a wondrous, elevating power. So let us seal our pledges with one long, lingering kiss."

KILLED BY A TRUCK ON NATIONAL ROAD FRIDAY

Driver Unaware That His Machine Had Crushed Out Life of Nineteen-Year Old Youth

James Ravenscroft, aged 19 years, was instantly killed last Friday afternoon about five o'clock when he fell from the side of a truck, the rear wheel of the heavy machine passing over his body, on the National Road a short distance from the Stone House Farm, a few miles east of Grantsville.

The driver of the truck, employed by H. S. Livengood, a resident of Garrett county, did not know the lad was on the truck until he felt a dull thud caused by the wheel of the vehicle passing over the body of young Ravenscraft.

Stopping the motor of the machine he looked and saw the body lying in the road in a pool of blood. He died almost instantly. The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of a Meyersdale embalmer and prepared for burial.

The youth was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ravenscroft, of near Grantsville. Besides the parents, one brother and a sister survive.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon fom the Mt. Olive M. E. church on the National Road with burial in the church cemetery.

MARRIAGE LAW REVISION

Dire Need of New Regulations, Judge Worthington Says

Revision of the Maryland marriage laws by the next Legislature to prevent the mating of the physically or mentally unfit is necessary for the welfare of the State, Judge Glenn H. Worthington, associate judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit, which comprises Fredreick and Montgomery counties, declared before a congress of social workers of Baltimore and the counties of Maryland.

Stewart S. Janney, Director of Welfare, called the meeting, which was held at the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore, to receive recommendations for the program which the Welfare Board will submit to the next Legislature.

Judge Worthington's proposal was endorsed enthusiasticall.

Other matters considered at the conference were:

Support of the families of prisoners.

Lengthening the term of sentence in non-support and desertion cases.

Establishment of a women's prison.

Provision of compensation for prisoners injured while in the employ of the State.

MASONIC FRATERNITY TO GET $85,000 FOR TRACT

Swallow Falls Tract, Which Is To Be Flooded, Valued at Approximately $1,000 an Acre

A jury of condemnation, empanelled by Judge Morris Soper in the Federal District Court in Baltimore yesterday awarded $85,000 to the Grand Lodges of the Masonic fraternity of West Virginia and Pennsylvania for nearly a hundred acres of the Swallow Falls tract of land located on the Youghiogheny River, eight miles west of Oakland, wanted by the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Corporation.

This tract of land was devised to the Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania and West Virginia by the late Henry Krug, lumberman and Mason of high degree who operated lumbering plants in Garrett county many years ago and is one of the few remaining natural beauty spots of the county.

The sum under the award made by the court is to be divided equally between the two Masonic bodies. The property comprises 97.49 acres, with a frontage of 5,000 feet on the Big Youghiogheny River.

Proceedings first were instituted in the Garrett County Circuit Court for an adjudication of the matter. It was found necessary to carry the case to the Federal court, however, because the contending interests were located in different States.

The property condemned will be flooded by the hydro-electric company when that corporation erects its dam on the river which will form a lake eleven miles long and from a half mile to a mile wide.

This Contributor Says that While the Prohibition Enforcement Officers Found Some Whiskey on His Place, They Did Not Catch Him Drinking From a Hose Leading to a Buried Barrel. As They Claimed They Did.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Dear Sir:—I am writing you in regard to what was published in The Republican about what the officers found on my farm. I want it corrected, or I will find out the reason why.

The officers did not find any whiskey mash on my farm, nor did they see me drinking from the hose, as they declared they did. I was at the barn and had just fed the pigs and was ready to milk the cows when the officers drove up in front of my house. One of them came to the barn and asked me to go along with him, which I did.

They found some liquor in my possession, which they poured out, and if they would search some more houses in and around Oakland they would be apt to find more liquor.

Now, I want you to correct this right away, for I am not going to have such things as that published on me.

It was bad enough to find liquor, which is all that they did find, and which was enough without telling and publishing lies to make it seem a lot worse.

Now, I would like for this to be corrected, and in the next paper.

Yours very truly,
HOBART HARVEY.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of This Community

GEORGE D. BROWNING,
County Commissioner of Garrett County, Maryland.

I have been asked by the publicity committee of the Garrett County Fair Association to contribute an article to the series that have been running in the columns of The Republican during the past several weeks, giving my ideas of the benefits to be derived by those attending and contributing exhibits at the Fair each year.

For many years, and indeed until recently, each individual farmer of not only Garrett county but of nearly every county in Maryland and other States of the Union had their own iron-bound ideas of how to seed, grow and harvest their crops. These position taken and maintained by the pioneers in farming answered their purpose at that time, but since farming and stock raising has taken on a more or less scientific turn these old methods have been thrown into the discard and now farmers, by an exchange of views and methods in farming in all its branches, have developed newer and broader plans which have worked out to their satisfaction and made the labor easier and more profitable.

The best place, in my humble opinion, for one engaged in faming and stock raising to get new and better ideas on their vocational callings is at conventions, where plans are discussed and plans made for the betterment of farm life. In the absence of such a gathering the County Fair answers this purpose, especially for the young farmer, where he can not only meet those of longer experience in farming, but also have an ocular demonstration of what they have accomplished when they see their products placed upon exhibition at the Fair.

Not only do the farmers themselves receive valuable schooling at the Fair but the farmers' wives and daughters have the same opportunity in their respective lines of work on the farm.

Taken as a whole a Fair, such as the Garrett County Fair for this year promises to be, will be invaluable to the farmer, the farmer's wife, the farmer's daughter and the people of Garrett county in general.

GEORGE D. BROWNING.

The Naming of Negro Mountain.

The following, which is clipped from the June 12th number of the Pathfinder, will be read with interest by many in Garrett county:

"In Garrett county is a mountain called 'Negro Mountain.' How did it come to have the name?

"Answer—In 1758, during the French and Indian War, Col. Thomas Cresap, of Maryland, organized a company of volunteers and marched against the Indians who were carrying on a desolating war around the headwaters of the Potomac River. With Col. Cresap were his surviving two sons, Daniel and Michael, and a Negro of gigantic stature. Advancing along Braddock's road the whites met a party of Indians on one side of the high mountain in the region. A hot, running fight ensued. Cresap's party killed an Indian and the Indians killed the Negro. It was from this circumstance of the death of the Negro on the mountain that the ridge received its name."

BALLOT THIS FALL WILL BE UNUSUALLY LARGE

Congressional, State and all the County Officers are to be Elected By the Voters This Year

Anticipating the election to be held this fall and under the provisions of the State election law of Maryland, the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, appointed registration officers for the various voting precincts at a meeting held by that body on Monday of this week. The official list of appointees will be printed in The Republican next Thursday.

Possibly the largest ballot ever before used at a general election in Maryland will be voted at the election to be held on November 2nd, as under the provisions of the new election law enacted at the last session of the Legislature every State and county elective office becomes vacant and in consequence the ballot will contain the names of candidates to fill these numerous positions.

Prior to the general election, primary elections throughout the State will be held by both the Republican and Democratic parties to select candidates for State and county officers. In order to have their names placed on the official primary ballots, it is necessary for all candidates to file a certificate of candidacy and pay a stipulated fee to the Board of Election Supervisors. These certificates must be filed at least twenty days before the primary, the date of which has not yet been set, but which will be held some time early in the month of September, as provided by the election law.

Governor of Maryland;

State Comptroller;

Attorney General;

Clerk of the Court of Appeals of Maryland;

FIRE ALARM SYSTEM FOR OAKLAND INSTALLED

Alarms Will Be Sounded from C. & P. Central Office

A new fire alarm system for Oakland has been completed so that in the future alarms may be sounded from either the engine house or the central office of the C. & P. Telephone Company or a silent call to the volunteer fire company, a list of the members of the organization being on file in the office of the telephone company.

Hereafter the people of Oakland and vicinity are asked that in case of need to call the telephone office, but not to call for information concerning the location of fires, as the same will not be given in accordance with a ruling of the telephone company's officials.

The system will be given a test tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock at which time signals will be sounded but which should not cause any undue alarm on the part of the residents of town.

BAUGHMAN SEES TROUBLE AHEAD FOR THE CARELESS

Speeding and Driving While Under Influence of Liquor Must Stop, Commissioner Insists

More stringent application of present laws governing the operation of motor vehicles, with the possibility of concerted action for the enactment of additional drastic statutes may, in the opinion of Motor Vehicle Commissioner E. Austin Baughman, eventually have to be resorted to in checking the type of recklessness and speeding which continues to result in fatal accidents unless development of an improved personal-responsibility attitude on the part of drivers becomes manifest and develops to the point where the car users themselves, by their closer observance of present regulations, tends to check the danger. Said the Commissioner recently:

"It seems to me that there is plenty of law, which, if taken seriously in its minor as well as its major requirements and intent, will make and keep highways safe. But this is dependent upon the co-operation of the motorists themselves—upon their mental attitude toward the spirit as well as the letter of the law.

"Co-operation by the army of motorists with the efforts of the administrative agencies in giving publicity to the dangers as well as the benefits and pleasures of the various phases of motoring and their proper treatment must inevitably result in increasingly less frequent resort to disciplinary activities. Certainly this is the theory of all efforts to inculeate, through educational propaganda, a proper mental attitude in the drivers.

"One hundred and two persons have been killed in automobile accidents in Maryland in a little over five months. The vast majority of these accidents, as well as the hundreds wherein actual death did not result, but painful, serious and parmanent injuries were inflicted, were due to the absence of the 'right' personal attitude on the part of the operators.

"Shall we continue exhorting and begging for improvement in the mental attitude of the individual driver in the hope that this will bring about such marked improvement between now and the next meeting of the Legislature that additional drastic regulatory statutes will not be required? Or shall we try to force improvement in conditions by an absolutely drastic application of the present laws' provisions—by applying the law's requirements so severely that drivers will, under fear of fines and penalties, against their driving licenses be made to learn through experience that the best way to cultivate safe driving habits is through letter-perfect observance of every technical requirement of the law?"

He added this admonitory conclusion:

"Speeding and reckless driving, along with operating while under the influence of liquor must stop in Maryland. In addition, strict observance of the so-named minor regulations dealing with the right of way, 'cutting in and out' of traffic, and the requirements for properly adjusted and focussed headlights and the prohibition against driving with only one head light or no lens in both or one of the lamps is going to be more stringently enforced from now on."

PRISONER SWOONS WHEN JUDGE SAYS "SIX MONTHS"

Former Allegany County Officer Sentenced for Assault Upon Fellow Worker at Deer Park

A drunken brawl between two employes at the Deer Park Hotel at one o'clock Sunday morning resulted in a free-for-all between the men engaged, the management and some of the guests who came to the help of Mr. Burkle, manager in charge and Mr. Duncan, son of the owner of the hotel both of whom were assaulted by the housemen when an effort was made to quiet the brawlers.

Harmon Gannon and Patrick Walsh, both of Barton, employees at the hotel, becace engaged in a quarrel on the third floor of the hotel as a result of imbibing in too much moonshine. The quarrel develpoed into a fight and it is said that Gannon struck Walsh, the latter tumbling down a strairway to the second floor of the building. Here the two men went at it again and when Mr. Burkle made his appearance Gannon floored Walsh and picking up a water pitcher struck Mr. Burkle upon the head with such force as to cut his forehead severely and in a manner rob him of his senses momentarily.

About this time other employes of the hotel along with a guest or two appeared and endeavored to subdue the belligerents but with little success until a guest named Kain, hailing from Pittsburgh, entered the contest and it was soon over. Kain caught Gannon under the chin with one fist and Walsh with the other. Each went down stairways, hut in opposite directions, to the first floor of the hotel, and the fight was over. Kain declared that he had spent a very delightful half hour.

At a hearing given Gannon and Walsh by Justice West Monday morning, it was stated that Kain actually knocked Gannon down the stairway four times before he conquered him.

Walch was fined $5 and costs and Gannon was sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction When sentence was passed on Gannon he collapsed and it was necessary to carry him from the magistrate's office to a lawn across the street to revive him. Gannon was a constable in Allegany county before coming to the Deer Park Hotel.

Sheriff Yutzy and Deputy Sheriff W. D. Casteel made the arrests at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning. They found Gannon bound in ropes when they reached Deer Park. This was accounted for by a statement of another employe who said he was afraid Gannon would regain his strength and start all over again.

Mr. Burkle's wounds are being treated by Dr. McComas.

Prize Tree Contest.

The prize tree contest being conducted this summer by the Maryland Forestry Association, is going ahead in great shape. This contest is unlimited. A handsomely engraved certificate, suitable for framing, with the name of the prize winner and the tree, will be given to the one entering the largest tree of any species, whether native or introduced.

Since there are about 150 native tree species, and probably 70 or more introduced species in Maryland, every entry has a good chance of special recognition. The only requirements are that the tree must be growing in Maryland and four measurements submitted.

1. The circumference of the trunk one foot from the ground;

2. The circumference at 4½ feet from the ground;

3. The spread of the tree from one side to the other;

4. The height of the tree.

The larger specimens of the smaller species, such as dogwood, redbud or sumac, have equal chances with those of the larger species, such as oaks, elms, etc.

The State Forester, 1411 Fidelity Building, Baltimore, will check the measurements submitted. Send in your tree measurements to him and if you doubt as to the particular species send a long a sample of leaves and flower or fruit, for identification. The contest closes August 15th, so send in your tree records promptly. If you have a large tree of any kind enter it in the contest.

Send your Job Work to The Republican Commercial Printing Department—it will be done neatly, correctly and as promptly as in consistant with good workmanship.

SOLIDER ON VISIT ACCIDENTALLY KILLED

Thought to have Stumbled With Rifle While Hunting

The body of Fred Emmerson, son of James and Maggie Emmerson, was found a short distance from the home of his father near Newburg, W. Va., Tuesday afternoon shortly after he had started out with a 22-repeating rifle, supposedly to shoot a groundhog which he had discovered near the home. He was lying on his back with a gunshot wound in his breast, and it is supposed that he tripped and fell and in some manner caused the rifle to discharge, thus causing his death.

Mr. Emmerson, who was a soldier in the U. S. Army, having been stationed in Cuba for some time, where he was afflicted with malaria fever, was visiting his home folks. His father and bothers, becoming uneasy about him when he failed to return home, instituted a search for him, finding him as above stated.

TO ESTABLISH TITLE TO NATIONAL PIKE IN W. VA.

Finding of the Original Survey Field Notes Will Settle Controversy in That State.

The recent finding of the original field notes of the National Pike from Cumberland, Md., to Wheeling, West Va., carries with it the probabilities of a mass of litigation to establish title, define the center of the famous old highway—the hitherto missing clue that was necessary and for the lack of which previous litigation to establish the line ended in naught—and to do away with encroachments by private property owners on property front. At times there have been disputes between the several governing bodies in Ohio county in which the State government was also a party, as to which was responsible for the repair and upkeep of the road.

The present owner of the National Pike in West Virginia—Ohio county is the only part of the State it traverses—is the State of West Virginia. Title was conveyed to the State Road Commission several years ago. But the State does not know definitely just what it does own, whether it has encroached on private property and where, and where private owners have encroached on the right-of-way. It seems to be true from an optical survey of travelers over the Pike, that the road is not 66 feet throughout the 16 miles. Indeed it is not easy to recall that it is 66 feet wide at any point. Along practically the entire 16 miles runs the tracks of an electric transportation company, and it has long been thought that much of its right-of-way is on property originally reserved for the National Pike.

SCENE ON THE NATIONAL ROAD AFTER A SNOW STORM HAD SWEPT OVER GARRETT COUNTY.

All these points in controversy can now readily be settled by the original survey field notes, which havve just been found and turned over to the United States Engineers' Bureau of the War Department. Examination discloses that they are in a splendid state of preservation. It will be no difficult thing whatever to run the lines of the National Pike from Cumberland to Wheeling and establish the rights of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and define those of the property owners whose properties touch the historic old roadway. In establishing the rights of these three States, it may, indeed probably will, show that many property owners have encroached upon the public property; in some cases, the reverse may be shown.

The statute of limitation does not apply in such cases. It will be the dutyof officials to go into courts to establissh the lines. Aside from considerations of duty, the neeessity for taking action is one urged by considerations of public policy and accommodation. The National Pike is the most traveled highway, it is believed, of any of the great roads; if not the most traveled one among the most used. It is at all seasons, but in the six months' auto tourists season, many thousands travel upon it almost continuous lines of motor vehicles moving from east to west, west to east.

It was for many years believed that the original survey field notes had been destroyed in a fire which burned the capitol at Richmond years ago. It is due to the confidence in Col. J. William DeGrange's belief that this was not the case, and his indefatigable work and interest in searching for these lost records has resulted in their being found. They were found in the possession of H. G. Shirley, chairman of the Virginia State Highway Commission. They were turned over to him by Henry Shriver, of Cumberland, whose ancestor, Joseph Shriver, made the notes in 1819-1821. They are now in the possession of the War Department and photostat copies have been made of them in anticipation of requests being made for them by officials in the States of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Vriginia. Col. DeGrange is a West Virginian who has been in charge of the records of the engineer's bureau at the War Department for 35 years. He was one of the organizers of the West Virginia Society at Washington, which heads the list of state organizations there as having the largest membership and has been an officer in the society ever since it was founded.

Congressman Bachman has sent letters to Governor Gore, of West Virginia, detailing fully the importance to that State of the finding of the original field survey notes of Joseph Shriver. He has also sent a similar letter to Charles E. Hiner, executive head of the West Virginia State Road Commission.

which now belongs to the States.

Several years ago litigation was started by officials of Ohio county, W. Va., to define the lines of the National Pike. The present Congressman, Carl G. Bachman, was at that time prosecuting attorney for the county, and, in that official capacity, represented the county court. There was no satisfactory conclusion of the court action from the standpoint of the county government or the general public.

It was known in a traditional way and to some degree in a legal one, that the Pike in Ohio county should be 66 feet wide, 33 feet on either side of a central line, but there was no way to ascertain the central line. It can now readily be established since the finding of the original survey field notes, In very few places, if any, is the Pike 66 feet in width after it enters West Virginia from West Alexander, Pa., and winds its course to the Ohio River at Wheeling, a distance of 16 miles. It has never been known which was the National Pike after it merged into the streets of Wheeling, whether it was south on Market street to the suspension bridge or on Seventh street, west on Main to the river

NOT A CHANCE.

Attacking communistic doctrines, Secretary of Labor Davis, in a recent address, declared that even a rational American hobo is patriotic and "a better asset to a nation than a grumbling and discontented communist."

Describing Communism as an attempt of the hand to stab the brain, and asserting that the communists of Russia want to annex America, Mr. Davis said the time has come "when we must consider the activities of these leaders of Communism, for it is they, and they alone, who threaten to undermine American ideals and to destroy all that America has stood for since the adoption of the Constitution."

Brother Davis is needlessly alarmed. In a country where 110,000,000 people breakfast on bacon and eggs, buckwheat cakes, stewed potatoes, ice water, hot coffee and cold pie, there is as much chance of Communistic doctrines getting a foothold as there is of Lydia Pinkham taking up Christian Science.

If some intellectual and long-haired communist ever starts down Main street at the head of an army of Tousled Ones, they'l get as far as Washington and Central avenues, where Cornelius McGillicooly, the big traffic cop, will elevate his great big, red, moist, earnest hand.

"Gentlemen," he'll say, "this here pee-rade will have to be postponed, sine die."

"What do you mean?" the intelligent leader, with the long hair and the discouraged complexion will inquire.

"I mean," Officer McGillicooly will reply, "that you'rs under arrest for holding a revolution without a license."

Revolutions are nothing out of the ordinary in this country. We started up business on the strength of one of the classiest revolutions in history. The only thing is we're fussy about the brand we use. There have been numerous attempts to introduce the Russian variety, but it's never been popular. There's too much soap and not enough whiskers in the country.

Just so long as the ninety and nine continue to use the amount of soap that's manufactured at present, there isn't much harm in the hundredth eerie abberant utilizing the soap box as a pulpit for Bolshevism.. When he's doing that he isn't stealing pennies from crippled children.

Students of political economy sometimes evince alarm because the voters step to the polls once in a while and elect some wild-eyed theorist with a squinting brain and ideas cut on the bias.

The American people like to laugh. When you see them shouting Glory, Hallelujah, in the train of some near-statesman with Communistic leanings, don't worry. They're electing him to office for the same reason that a kid sends a comic valentine to his school teacher.

PRIMARIES AND BOSSISM

One of the arguments used by so-called reformers in putting over the primary election system was that it would do away with the party bosses. Yet subsequent elections, under the primary, have shown that the primary itself is especially adapted to boss politics. The selecting of candidates by primaries is the people's business, and the old saying still holds true to the effect that what is everybody's business is no one's business.

The result is that the boss with his machine well oiled is better able to function than ever before. In the old days the boss was a party boss, amenable to party discipline, and the convention, whether boss-controlled or not, usually selected a list of candidates which would appeal to the people, because the first purpose was to win the election and this could only be done with a strong ticket.

The bosses under the primary, however, are not partisan, but personal bosses, and they rule quite as ruthlessly as any boss of the old days. And instead of an honest boss, the big chief, the boss is often a demagogue as well, for the simple reason that it is the demagogue who usually wins in the primary. Then the voters themselves get disgusted with the way things are run, and as a result the vote falls off year after year and we wonder what is the matter. Party responsibility has given away to political anarchy and personal bossism and nobody is any better off except the demagogues who rule through the minority primary. As the Cincinnati Enquirer well puts it:

"In the broad view, the Republican and Democratic National Committees are impotent today. The party discipline men once feared and respected is no more. The primary has radically modified political conditions. The primary system effectively and effectually undermined party authority in the United States. With its coming, the big men in the national political life disappeared. Acclaimed as a democratic method of fairness and efficiency, it, in reality, operates as a force for the destruction of the two-party system in America. If this is what the people of the United States desire, they have departed from the theories of Jefferson and Lincoln."

SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY?

During the World War we were told that the prime purpose of that conflict was to make the world safe for democracy. Although German autocracy was completely defeated, the results have not been just what was anticipated. There are a few less monarchs in Europe than formerly, it is true, but there has been no great surging wave of democracy. Quite the reverse.

The biggest country in Europe in teritory and population is Russia. Russia is not safe for democracy. It is now in the grip of one of the completest autocracies the world has ever known. There is a dictator in Italy who rules with an iron hand; another in Portugal, another in Greece and still another in Poland. There are times when it seems that even France will need a dictator to straighten out its tangled affairs, and nobody yet knows how much democracy there will eventually be in the new German government.

Just now the trend in Europe seems to be away from republics and constitutional monarchies and toward dictatorships. Mussolini is the man of the hour and he hearkens back alternately to Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte. The World War accomplished a great many things, but it did not make the world safe for democracy.

If women's clothes keep on shrinking in extent, before long the dress designers will have to give up their calling and go in for frescoing.

Australia has barred the showing of the war film, "The Big Parade" on the ground that it is American propaganda. Why not get even by barring a little European propaganda from America?

White Family Reunion.

Thursday, June 24, on the summit overlooking the town of Loch Lynn Heights, the White family held their annual reunion. The day was pleasant and a very enjoyable time was spent in greeting friends and relatives some of whom had not met since last year. There were 105 present. The program was in charge of the president, Mr. Roy White of Grafton, West Va. After an hour or two of social converse the clan answered the call to dinner sounded by Mrs. W. M. Payton and Mrs. Alma Bell. The tables were well ladened with good things to eat. Rev. F. L. Fultz, pastor of the U. B. church, offered thanks for mercies and the goodness of God in permitting us to gather again and for the food which we were soon to partake of. After the dinner, which was enjoyed by all, the president, Mr. Roy White, called the people together and after a few brief remarks introduced Rev. Fultz, who addressed the gathering and gave a brief historic sketch of the family and the part the members have taken in the commercial world and the part they had in settling and clearing up central West Virginia. The speaker also stated that he had known the White family for more than twenty-five years and he could vouch for their honesty, integrity and loyalty.

Hon. A. T. White, of Mountain Lake Park, then gave a very interesting address. Mr. White had the honor of serving as Grand Master of Odd Fellows of Maryland last year, a position of more than ordinary honor.

Mr. White's address was followed by reorganizing the society. The old officers were retained for another year, the treasurer being the exception, as follows: President Mr. Roy White, Grafton, W. Va.; vice-president, Mr. Leroy White, Oakland; secretary, Mrs. W. M. Payton, Mountain Lake Park; treasurer, Mrs. Alma Bell, Mountain Lake Park.

The date for the next reunion was set for the last Thursday in August.

At the request of Mr. A. T. White, Rev. James A. Enlow offered a prayer in memory of those of the group that have preceded us to the spirit world.

It was the concensus of opinion that this was the best reunion we have ever held. COMMITTEE.

County Commissioner George D. Browning, who has filled the office satisfactorily, honestly and conscientiously, asks the Republican voters of Garrett county, through the medium of this paper, for a renomination at the primary election to be held in September. Mr. Browning, in his announcement, states that he stands upon the record he has made as a public servant, promising nothing, asking nothing other than the support of the voters when they go to cast their ballots at the primary. Mr. Browning, with his associate members of the Board of Commissioners, have had many intricate and puzzling situations confronting them in the administration of the business affairs of the county. Insistent demands have been made entailing the expenditure of public monies. These demands have been met where in the judgment of the commissioners the object sought was worthy and at no appreciable increase in the tax rate. The office has been economically and efficiently administered and upon this record Mr. Browning seeks to be renominated.

ISRAEL ENSLAVED IN EGYPT.

Exodus 1:1-14.

Jehovah will not cast off his people—Psalm 94:14.

THE BOOK WE STUDY.

All the lessons of the quarter with one exception are from Exodus, the "out road." Leaving the family of Jacob in Genesis, we sweep through the vanished centuries before coming to the multitude that greets us in Goshen as we enter the new study. Its first division tells the story of a people in bondage (1-12); the second gives the story of their deliverance (13-19), and the third is the account of their organization into a nation. Twelve chapters chronicle the experiences of Egypt and twenty-eight those of the wilderness. In the first section there is the background of Egyptian conditions and the coming of Moses into the story, his forced departure to the wilderness, his call and his struggle against Pharaoh that culminates in the institution of the Passover and the night beginnings of the march that has altered all the history of the world. The second section reports the spectacular deliverance of the Red Sea, the events of the march, including the giving of manna, the victory of Rephidim and the organization of administrative groups. Arrived at the Mount of God, there is the giving of the Ten Commandments and the Book of the Covenant is agreed to. Obedience to law is thus made the foundation of the new state and worship's ministry to its highest expression follows in the setting up of the Tabernacle. The whole book breathes the presence of an interested God directing in the affairs of men, expressing His will in moral laws that are a part of His own life. On man's side is the choice to follow the conditions, the continued acceptance of them in obedience and in the worship that puts God at the center of all the individual's or the nation's activities.

There is quite another side to these records that makes them wonderfuly vital in these days when economic forces are being given as the basis of all history. They may be taken as the story of the first great strike by organized labor in which Moses, the walking delegate, organizes the brick maker's union, goes through the matter of negotiations with the employer and finally walks out, faces the police forces endeavoring to prevent what had become a general strike menacing the settled order and finally sets up a worker's government in the wilderness. Russia, Great Britain and the American Federation of Labor can all be summoned as witnesses to the truthfulness of these old narratives.

THE RULE OF FORCE.

Centuries of silence still too little explored by the spade cover the period that follows Joseph's bringing of the Israelites into Egypt. They increased in the fertile section of Goshen but appear to have been unassimilated mass in the midst of the nation's civilization, so that Egypt had her "Little Israel" just as New York her Ghetto and "Little Italy." If they came into the land in the days of the so-called Shepherd Kings, who were conquerors from the desert regions to the East, and these were ultimately driven out hy an armed revolt of the older stock, aided hy Hittite sympathy, then the slavery is easily understandable. These friends of the old oppressors were put in bandage just as has happened in a thousand other cases. Many of the first settlers of our own land were indentured servants or term slaves and both England and America have known how to oppress racial aliens like the African Negro. We had the power, so we did it. Egypt had the power andd applied it in the same fashion to the children of Jacob. The moral test of force comes in the way it is used when others are involved by it. A father has force; how does he apply it toward his children? To take them from school and draw their wages? An employer has it; what use does he make of it? Are profits to be the sole product of his factory? A colonizing nation has it; how is it applied in Porto Rico, in the Congo, in Shanghai? God has it; how does He use it? The whole story of this book cries aloud of His putting it at the service of those who choose to follow His rule in the life of the world. The whole gospel record sheets of God's continuing Calvary of redemption.

THE RULE OF FEAR.

Israel's position had been based upon favoritism—a very poor foundation in any field. When Joseph's influence was gone these folks were not able to maintain themselves. They had numbers but had leaned too long to stand up straight now. The new king was thoroughly modern in being ruled by his fears. They were on the road of any invaders and their treatmment was failing to make them reliable friends. So force overreaches itself. It is this same enlistment that makes [illegible] a mass of fragments instead of a co-operating continent. Fear was largely responsible for 1914 and its tragic sequel. Force always runs into either fear or into faith—one spells world disaster; the other, a world of happy progress. Force misused is followed by fear; fear calls for more force and fears are multiplied thereby so that there is no escape from the vicious circle until power is dedicated to service instead of self; to God instead of any privileged group. the kingnidamgda

It was entirely characteristic that the king should "deal wisely with them" solely from his standpoint of selfish interest. He probably didn't know any better, but some of us haven't learned much since.

THE RULE OF GOD.

All that blind selfishness could do to wring from the workers the last drop of energy was done. The great piles of masonry that are the spectacle for tourists were reared by their labor or others like them, who toiled under compulsion. Life was cheap and could be replaced, so why not drive hard? But God still ruled. Behind the shadows He kept watch upon His own. His plans are for longer than a day and prosperous herdsmen from happy homes could never have been brought across the years of desert wanderings into the storm-swept hills of Judea. Had they stayed Isaiah, and Jeremiah and David would never have been and the bible would not have been written—what a loss! And children thronged around their doors as they do in every alley in our own land—human dynamite stored of the Almighty and capable of blowing out a Hell Gate reef for the progress of the race or a throne of some blind Pharaoh. Capable of creating a great business like that of Golden Rule Nash or of conducting a great strike like that which has swept so many coal fields. God made even the wrath of Pharaoh to serve Him but it is safe to say that God could have used his righteousness to better purpose.

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

EASY MEALS FOR HOT WEATHER

(Editor's Note: This is one article in an unusual cooking series contributed to this paper by six famous cooks.)

Where is the woman who enjoys cooking hearty meals in hot weather? We doubt if such a woman exists. She may cook big meals because some members of her family who toil hard demand them, but certainly not because she herself derives any real pleasure from hot weather cooking.

MISS ROSA MICHAELIS

With a little planning and forethought, however, many of the discomforts of cooking in hot weather can be avoided. For instance, as Miss Rosa Michaelis, New Orleans domestic science specialist, points out, an oil stove is much easier to work with than a coal or wood range.

"It is much more convenient," she says. "It needs no flues," and hence may be taken to the coolest part of the house easily, as it is not very heavy.

Just a Little Planning

"The woman who gets her kitchen work done early in the morning, and most of her food prepared," continues Miss Michaelis, "is the coolest cook. She just needs to do a little simple planning.

"The fewer ruasts and baked dishes in the summer, the cooler the kitchen. I recommend uncuoked desserts mostly, too. Fruits are all one needs during the hot weather."

In the summer time Miss Michaelis does as much of her cooking as possible on the top of the stove, using only as many burners as are absolutely necessary.

"If a woman feels she has to bake," Miss Michaelis says, "she should not use her oven every day in the week during hot weather, but bake enough to last several days or a week."

A dinner which Miss Michaelis recommends as particularly easy to prepare in hot weather is all cooked in one pot. It conserves utensils, time and fuel.

A Dinner in One Kettle

To prepare it, take a soup pot filled with enough water to cover three pounds of brisket. Season with salt. After the soup has boiled for an hour, lower the flame and let it simmer for half an hour. Add one bunch of carrots, a bunch of turnips and a pound of potatoes, and cook for another half hour.

When ready, take out carrots. Dice and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Take out turnips and mash with butter, adding a teaspoon of sugar if desired.

Serve potatoes mashed. Take out meat and fry with onions, or serve with a tomato sauce.

Add a Salad and Dessert

Now with a salad, dessert, and beverage, one has a complete meal, including soup, and all cooked on one flame!

For salad, Miss Michaelis suggests pears halved, on lettuce leaves, covered with French dressing. Fruit makes a good dessert to accompany this easy meal.

Another Easy Meal

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, the famous Philadelphia cooking expert, gives the menu for a simple meal which takes but an hour to prepare. It's a vegetable dinner. Mrs. Rorer gives proportions for serving four.

Fried squash
Dutched cabbage
Chili sauce
Candied sweet potatoes
Panned apples
Watermelon

"Go to the kitchen at 11 o'clock, if dinner is to be served at 12," says Mrs. Rorer. "If you use oil, your stove is ready for immediate use. Light two burners, and put on two saucepnns half full of water. Cover, and turn tu full heat.

"Wash five medium sized sweet potatoes. Chop fine one small, hard head of cabbage. The water is now boiling in both pans. Put the potatoes in one and cover. Add a teaspoon of salt to the other, and put in the cabbage. Turn flame down nnd cook cabbage uncovered for half an hour.

"Slice three tart apples in a baking dish. Add half a cup of sugar, and partly cover with water. Light oven burner, and after three minutes put apples on upper rack, covering the dish.

To Candy the Sweets

"The sweet potatoes are now tender. Drain, peel, and cut them in halves. Place in shallow baking pan, adding two tablespoons of butter, four of sugar, and four of water. Put pan in oven under the apples.

"Put four tablespoons of cooking fat in a shallow frying pan over one burner. Drain cabbage and return to saucepan. Add a tablespoon of butter, three of vinegar, half a teaspoon of salt, and a dash of pepper. Cover to keep warm.

"Fry the squash and drain on brown paper. Turn the sweet potatoes. Take out the apples. Dish the squash. Dish the cabbage and sweet potatoes. Turn out all the burners.

"This is a very simple meal to prepare," Mrs. Rorer concludes. "And, even though you do use the oven, it is for such a short time that the kitchen does not become excessively heated."

If you take the advice of famous cooks, you will keep your summer cooking as simple as possible. It

A COOL KITCHEN all summer long!

Take a tip from the six famous cooks who tested Perfection. Be cool!

Hot days are coming! Escape sizzling kitchens and wood or coal drudgery. Six famous cooks recommend the Perfection for cool cooking. Here's what they say.

"THE food gets all the heat—the kitchen none," says Miss Rosa Michaelis, New Orleans cooking expert. "In the Perfection burner," she explains, "the heat is confined directly to the bottom of the cooking pot. That means cool cooking!"

Mrs. Belle DeGraf, the San Francisco authority, suggests Perfection "top stove" cooking for hot summer days.

Least Time, Least Heat

"When I fried chicken, glazed sweet potatoes and boiled pineapple pudding," she relates, "I used only the top of the Perfection. The food cooked quickly and efficiently—and of course, the shorter the cooking time, the cooler the kitchen." That means cool cooking.

"Yes, and remember," adds Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, famous Los Angeles Home Economist, "the least fire in your stove through the day, the cooler the kitchen. With Perfections no time is lost in heat generation because cooking begins with the touch of a match to the wick."

No Hot Extra Work

"Then, too, the Perfection saves a world of extra work," says Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, pioneer cooking specialist of Philadelphia, "no wood or coal to carry in nor ashes to carry out."

At Battle Creek College of Home Economics, the nutrition expert, Margaret Allen Hall, speaks of still another "no extra work" point.

"The Perfection," says Miss Hall, "is easily moved from one room to another. Move it to the summer kitchen, out on the back porch—wherever it's coolest. You don't need to bake yourself while cooking meals."

Cool to Work With

The "single row" arrangement of Perfection burners gives you another advantage. Miss Lucy G. Allen of the Boston School of Cookery notices this.

"With the Perfection," she makes clear, "there is no reaching across hot flames as with a gas or coal range. You stay away from the direct heat, yourself."

You can escape all those things that make summer cooking the most unpleasant of hot tasks. Your dealer will show you the Perfection today—from the one-burner model at $6.75 to the five-burner range at $120. Six famous cooks tested this stove thoroughly and now pronounce it ideal for hot weather. "Buy a Perfection," they say, "be cool!"

Disease Epidemics Not Rare Among Canaries

That even canary birds are aot immune from the ravages of disease epidemics is shown by a report from experts of the New Jerscy experiment station, published in the Journal of Bacteriology.

The first outbreak of the epidemic occurred among canary birds in a bird store in New Brunswick, N. J., where a stock of 200 birds became badly infected. The total loss in this store alone was about 70 birds, or a mortality of 35 per cent. Another private breeder lost 25 out of a stock of 30 birds. Many other owners were losing birds from the disease in the same period.

The canary bird fanciers had never known of a disease which caused such a death rate, spread so rapidly and seemed to affect both young and old birds. Nine of the birds which had died from the disease were therefore brought to the laboratory, where post-mortem examinations were made.

By means of a small glass tube a sample of blood was drawn from the heart of each of the nine birds and cultures made from these samples revealed in each case the presence of a bacteria of the para-typhoid group. The source of the infection could not be traced.

Common Legal Terms Derived From Latin

The words council and councillor are derived from the Latin "concilium," "con" or "cum," together, and "salo," call. A council is a body called together, and it has come to mean such a body aa a legislative council or a city couacil. A member of the body is a councillor, usnally spelt in the United States councilor.

The word counsel is from the Latin "consulo," to consult. The verb to counael means to give advice or counsel. The noun, counsel, has several meanings. There is couasel, the advice given, and then counsel is used to mean an adviser belonging to the legal profession, and in this scase it is either singular or plural—plaintiff'a counsel may mean one lawyer or several. This title is given to lawyers specially commissioaed to represent the crown, hence called king's counsel, but this distinction is now also conferred by the government on prominent members of the legal professioa without regard to service for the crown. Counsellor practically means the same, that is, one who gives counsel. The English form of the word is counsellor, the United States is counselor. In Canada the English spelling is always used.—Montreal Family Herald.

Importance of Pictures

A room without pictures is irritating for two important reasons: The first is that it brings the eye to a stop at each of the four walls, which makes one feel unpleasantly crowded in. The second is that the room is unbalanced, since the floor has all the furniture and decoration, and the walls give the effect of lightheadedness. Decoratively it is just as important to have the upper part of the room interesting as the lower part. No one wants to look constantly at the floor for inspiration! The tendeacy, indeed, is to look at the eye level, and if there is nothing but blank wall, the effect is disconcerting and foolish, and there is less of good opportunity to see somethiag infinitely worthwhile.

Had the Wrong Edible

An Englishman, on his first visit to Boston, was having breakfast at the Parker house. Of course, he asked the waiter to hring him "some of those Parker house rolls that we hear so much about, and the usual Sunday morning breakfast."

In due course the meal was set before him, and he speedily seized one of the little brown delicacies and took a good bite. Unable to swallow the mouthful, he removed the contents with much embarrassment and as little ostentation as possible.

Summoning the waiter, he confided that something untoward had happened to the roll. Whereupon the waiter exclaimed: "Why, sir, that's not a Parker house roll; it's a codfish cake."

British House of Lords

The peers of England were summoned to consult with the sovereign in matters of state in very early times, but the earliest writ in existence dates from 1265, in the reign of Henry III. The house of lords consists of the temporal and spiritual peers of the realm, and is presided over by the lord chancellor of England. He is the keeper of the great seal, and acts as speaker of the house on formal occasions.

The house of lords is the court of final appeal for all parts of the kingdom, and exercises original jurisdiction in trials of its members for treason, or felony, and in cases of impeachments brought by the house of commons.—Exchange.

Priceless Old Books

The earliest arithmetic published in the New world was printed in the City of Mexico in 1623. No copy of this book, which would be worth a fortune, is known to exist. The second, also published in Mexico, came out in 1649 and was also believed to have vanished completely. Recently, however, a copy has turned up in the Garcia library at the University of Texas, the oldest arithmetic of all that have been published in the New world.

Loin Cloths Common to Tropical Dwellers

Practically every primitive tribe dwelling in the tropics that has been studied by scientific observers has been found to wear some form of bodily covering of the loin region either in the form of palats of various colors, tattoo marks, strands of beads of various materials, beaten bast or bark cloth, or of woven girdles or aproas of cottoa or other vegetable or animal fibers. The inhabitants of the Nicobar islands and of Central East Africa are apparently of all tribes the most free from loin coverings of all sorts. Reasons given for the wearing of loin coverings vary. Native modesty is usually present in some form, even apart from any influence that may be attributed to the whites; tribal and ceremonial painting or tattooing is often a causative factor and may supplement a woven girdle worn for entirely different purposes, namely, for the insertion of the hilt of a knife and as a place of attachment for burdens; most primitive peoples are burden carriers. Protection against insect pests is often attempted through the agency of breech clouts. Tradition and native styles usually dictate the nse of certain forms of loin covering even to the minutest detail.

Mystery of Instinct Puzzle to Scientists

How successive generations of ants learn to milk the aphides is a mystery that cannot be explained on any theory of heredity, for the ants which do the milking are workers, sexless insects which leave no offspring. It is, therefore, quite impossible that they should transmit their training to offspring which they do not have.

The "milk," which the aphides give up to the ants as contentedly as a cow gives her milk, is the juice of plants aucked up by the aphides and transformed in their bodies to a sirup of invert sugar or glucose. This is the so-called "honey-dew" often found in vast qnantities on plants. Some species of ants merely lick this up, but others stroke the aphides to persnade them to "give dowa," just as the hired man of the farm induces the cow.

In return for this service the ants fight the enemies of the aphides, carry them to safety in times of danger, take care of their eggs, place the aphides where they will get the best of food, and shelter them in their nests in cold weather.

Presence of Mind

A recent ecclesiastical method of removing an evil spell from a churchyard seems to have been less simple than that of Archbishop Thomsoa in exorcising a ghost from a mansion where he once spent a night.' He was lodged in the haunted chamber, and in the morning his hostess inquired anxiously if he had seen anything. "Oh, yes," replied the archbishop, "I wakened to find an old pinched-looking man in the room. I jumped up and asked if he lived in the house. He nodded assent. Was he a parishioner? I asked. Again he nodded. Then, said I, I should like to ask your help for our new school building fund. At that he vanished, and disturbed me no more."

Sweet Pea an Importation

The sweet pea is a native of the island of Sicily and was first mentioned in 1697 by an Italian monk, who sent seeds to England and Holland. The seeds of sweet peas became an article of commerce as early as 1724. Sweet peas have been grown for more than a century in America, and all of the varieties known in Europe were grown here. There was a wave of popularity for the sweet pea in America between 1885 and 1900, while the tide, which received its great impetus through the introduction of the waved, or Spencer, type, was just beginning to rise at the sweet-pea celebration in London in 1900.

Early Canal Building

More than forty centuries ago the Chaldeans showed surprising energy in canal building, having dug not one but many for irrigation purposes, a list of which has been preserved. It is evident that the Chaldeans took their canals seriously. A relief has been unearthed showing an early king named Ur-Engur, with the monarch in an attitude of adoration before the Moon god, which is seated, while an angel flying down from above holds in its outstretched arms a vase from which pour streams of water. The picture is repeated several times, and it is believed that an angel symbolizes each of the principal canals.

Humming Bird No Singer

The humming bird has powerful muscles which drive the wings in rapid vibrations. These vibrations cause the humming sonnd. Most of the hummers have no song, their only notes being querulous squeaks of wrath or fear. A few of the tropical forms, nevertheless, are said to be slightly musical. The humming bird is the smallest of birds, and when stripped of its feathers is not larger than a bumblebee.

Angora Goats

As a rule Angora goats are small, weighing from 80 to 100 pounds. Sometimes in the United States they weigh as much as 140 pounds, with an occasional one even heavier than this. Both males and females usually have horns and beards. The fleece weighs from 3 to 12 pounds.

Not Hard for Experts to Detect Fake Gems

Jewel forgers have become so clever that a special gem-testing institute has been established in Vienna, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, and similar studies are belug carried on in this country to detect imitations.

Imitation diamonds are numerous and it is possible to make real ones in the laboratory, but the cost of the process is about $200,000 a carat, while natural ones can be purchased at from $100 to $200 a carat. Rubies can be made by laboratory methods in about six hours, and some of them are so nearly like the real stones that other tests than with the eyes are necessary to distinguish them.

While the synthetic emerald has brilliance and realistic color, it usually can be told from a genuine one with little difficulty. They are often built up in three parts, which are fastened by invisible cement. The top and the bottom part may be glass crystals cut in many facets with a thin shaving of a real emerald between them to give the color. Others may have a slight cavity between the two crystals which is filled with a green liquid. Both imitations are easily detected by submerging the stone in a certain kind of oil and holding it up to the light.

Pride of Scotland Not Alcohol Addict

Sir James Crichton Browne, a medical man, has published a postmorten diagnosis on Robert Burns, the Scotch poet, which aims to break down the sad and saddea figure of tradition and substitute one of an Ayrshire plowboy who was "on the whole a temperate fellow for his time," though cursed with a poor constitution, the New York Times asserts.

Sir James aubmits that heart disease arising out of rheumatism acquired in youth, and not drink and debauchery, as generally held, caused the poet's "unconscious suicide." He goes over the records and shows that aot a single contemporary of Burns noted in him symptoms which might indicate the effect, direct or indirect, of chronic alcoholism.

The accepted legend springs apparently from the Currie biography. Now Currie, Sir James points out, figured in his day as a temperance zealot. He gathered and preserved in his "Life of Burns" much information that might otherwise have passed forgotten, but the reformer won out. He seized the opportunity to point a moral, and in so doing deformed his tale.

And They Believed It

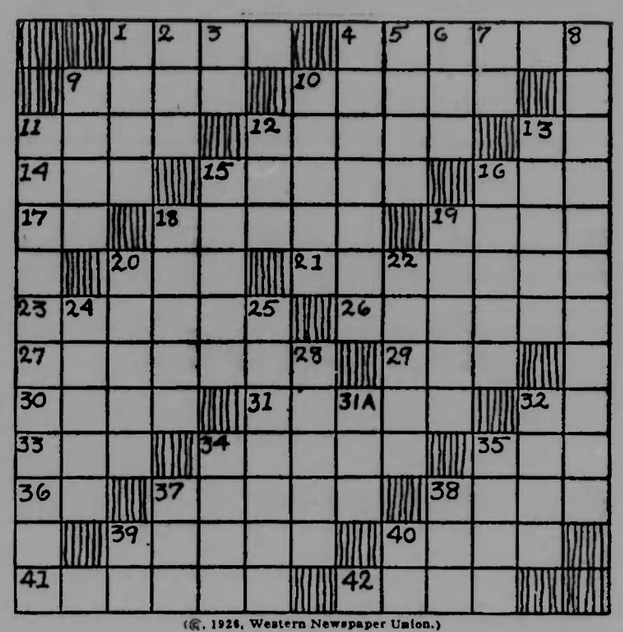
At one time biology was one of the "stiffest" courses at Washington and Lee university. Freshmen who dreaded the course were led by upper classmen to the skeleton of "Traveler," the famous gray charger that bore Gen. Robert E. Lee through the Civil war, in the university museum. There they were told that if they wrote their names on "that sacred relic of southern biology" they would never flunk or fail in that subject. Hundreds of the freshmen believed it. As a result the skeleton of the famous charger became covered with inked and pencilled names of five generations of Washington and Lee students. The white bones became black. So the authorities recently ordered the skeleton given a thorough bath and mounted high up on a balcony and locked against those who might seek to carry on the quaint old custom at the university.—Pathfinder Magazine.

First Cross-Word Puzzles

The development of the acrostic into the cross-word, or at least the development of the cross-word principle beyond the initial letters of each line, seems to have been the work of Venantius Honorius Clementiances Fortunatus, a Christian poet, who was born in north Italy about 535 A. D. He compiled verses in which both the first and last letters of each verse when read vertically added two verses to the poem. He also made verses in which the letters within the lines make sense if taken in a cruciform pattern. This, of course, called for a spacing of the letters to enable them to be read horizontally and vertically—an essential feature of the cross-word. These poems were lost for many years and were first published in 1603 by Christopher Brower, who had discovered them in a manuscript at St. Gall, Switzerland.

Man Most Curious

It is rather unfair to women as a sex that they have somehow achieved the reputation of being curious. For, as a matter of cold fact, men usually are far more bitten with curiosity than are their sisters and their wives, says I. Beaufoy in the London Mail.



Walk along any street at any hour when road excavations are proceeding and navvies are doing mysterious things. You will at once perceive males of all ages, sizes and classes intensely watching operations which they must have witnessed scores of times previously. But you will not see a vestige of anything feminine.

Why Worry?

Lord Darling, a celebrated English barrister, was addressing the court when he became so engrossed in his case that he completely overlooked the fact that it was past time for adjournment. The court asked: "Mr. Darling, have you noticed the position of the hands of the clock?"

Darling—Yes, sir; but with respect I see nothing to cause anxiety. They seem to me to be where they usually are at this time of the day.

DEEP CREEK LAKE STATE PARK IS URGED BY EARLE

Deep Creek State Camp Site No. 1, located along the shore of Deep Creek lake, eight miles north of Oakland on the Oakland-Accident State road, was dedicated last Thursday afternoon by Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner of Maryland.

In his address, which was listened to by a representative body of business men of Oakland and a large number of other citizens of the county, Mr. Earle advocated the creation of a State park of 1,000 acres about the great man-made lake, which was completed within the past year by the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Corporation and which covers many hundreds of acres.

Ceremonies attending the dedication were brief. Mrs. J. M. Wareham and Miss Virginia Duvall, of Oakland, raised the Maryland flag to the top of a thirty-five-foot staff while the Oakland Band rendered "Maryland, My Maryland."

Addresses were made by Mr. Frank E. Rathbun, County Superintendent of Education; former Mayor Dr. H. W. McComas, of Oakland, and Mr. M. J. McCleary, superintendent of the power company, who told the gathering that the lake created was, he thought, the largest man-made body of water in the country.

The lake contains 4,000,000,000 cubic feet, or 30,000,000,000 gallons of water, and that the control of it had been placed in the hands of the Maryland Conservation Department.

Deep Creek lake, as is locally well known, was made by the closing of a narrow gorge at a point some distance above the mouth of the creek where it empties into the Big Youghiogheny River, thus making the entire valley a collecting basin for the melting snows of the winter and the rains of summer.

The lake is eleven miles long and in some places more than a mile wide. It has sixty-five miles of shore line. The Conservation Department has already placed 60,000 trout in the lake and hopes to increase the stock 100,000 next year.

The hope of those interested in the project and indeed the object of the dedication held on Thursday is to see the borders of the lake proposed to be taken over by the State filled with summer homes, the occupants of which can enjoy the pleasures of boating and fishing.

Many of those present Thursday had their first experience with boats on a large body of water, especially sailing craft. In preparation for the event Mr. Earle had shipped to the camp site a few row boats, a motor driven launch and one of the Hooper Island sail boats which was so prominent at the boat races held at Solomon's Island on Saturday preceding.

The sailboat was the first one to be placed on the lake and was also the first one of its kind to be seen by many of those present at the ceremonies.

Rank of Knight to be Conferred at Castle Hall, Friday Night, July 9th.

Local Knights of Pythias rallied to the standard and responded to the call to be with Alpine Lodge, No. 35, at Terra Alta, July 5th. We are not prepared to state what degree of success they had from a financial standpoint, but their perseverence in braving the elements is worthy of comment. Jupiter Pluvius took a hand in the festivities and a veritable deluge ensued. Their monster parade was held despite the inclemency of the weather. While the grounds might be compared to a sponge, yet the crowd seemed to make the best of conditions while there.

Our degree team will again be seen in action on Friday night, July 9th, when the rank of Knight will be conferred in the usual manner characteristic of this efficient body. Come and criticise or praise our work as you may direct. We are not immune to criticism, neither does a little praise fall deaf on our ears.

GARRETT COUNTY FARMER HANGS HIMSELF IN BARN

Gregory E. Bevans, Jennings, Despondent Because of Ill-Health, Ended Life Friday

Despondent over ill-health and because of reverses suffered in business matters, Gregory E. Bevans, aged 71 years, of near Jennings, Garrett county, hung himself on a rope extending from the rafters in his barn Friday morning at five o'clock. His wife found his lifeless body two hours later.

According to a statement made by Mrs. Bevans to some neighbors, Mr. Bevans arose early in the morning and proceeded to feed the chickens and do other small chores about the place before breakfast. His fallure to return to the house at six o'clock for his breakfast aroused suspicion and she began an investigation.

After spending quite a long time in searching about the premises, she finally went to the barn and upon opening the door saw his body dangling at the end of a clothes line. His body was still warm and it is thought that he had been dead about an hour.

The rope used by Mr. Bevans was tied securely to a barn rafter. Tracks indicated that he had climbed the hay mow ladder far enough above the floor to allow his body about three feet clearance.

After summoning some neighbors, Mrs. Bevans directed that the body be taken to the Winterberg undertaking establishment at Grantsville, where it was prepared for burial.

Besides his widow, Mr. Bevans is servived by on daughter, Mrs. Belle O'Sullivan, of Philadephia, Pa.; one brother, A. J. Bevans, Grantsville, and one sister, Miss Ella Bevans, Ridgeley farm, near Grantsville.

Prisoners in Oakland Jail Compliment and Thank Sheriff Yutzy For their Fourth of July Dinner.

To the Editor of The Republican.

As prisoners in the Garrett County Jail, we feel that we should compliment the Sheriff and his help for the wonderful chicken dinner served us on Sunday, July 4th.

We have often read in the papers published throughout the State articles about the food and how clean other jails and institutions are, but have yet to read of the Garrett County Jail. We do not hesitate in saying that we are served the best of food and that it is the clennest and most healthful jail in the State.

THE REPUBLICAN FLOCK OF CANDIDATES AUGMENTED

By Two For Commissioner, Two for Sheriff, One Treasurer and One Orphans Court Judge

Today's Republican contains the announcement of six additional candidates seeking nominations for office at the Republican primary election to be held during the month of September.

The candidates are not aspirants for the same office. Two want to be County Commissioner, one would be satisfied with the office of County Treasurer; another wants to fill the position of Judge of the Orphans' Court, while two others desire to succeed Sheriff Yutzy and occupy the home to be vacated by him in the fall or early winter.

Officer William D. Casteel, of Oakland, who has been tutored in the duties of Sheriff by Guy O. Yutzy as the latter's deputy, aspires to become Sheriff of the county. He is energetic and has made an excellent record during the past two or three years as a traffic officer and also deputy sheriff of the county. He is fearless and at the same time a man of good judgment and discernment. About the only crowd that dislikes friend "Bill" are the bootleggers and shine artists, and they have good reason to fear him.

George Hipsley, of Mountain Lake Park, is the other aspirant for the office of Sheriff. By occupation a painter; through association a Republican, and by training a man who thoroughly despises liquor and all that it carries in its train. Here is his platform: "I announce my candidacy for this important office on a dry platform, and promise, if nominated and elected, to lend an untiring effort to rid the county of the undesirable bootleg and moonshine traffic and at the same time to fulfill the other duties of the office."

For County Commissioners.

Joel A. Beachy, farmer, coal operator, bank director, stockman; at present a member of the Republican County Committee. Post office address, Grantsville. Residence, two miles west of Grantsville on the National Highway.

Charles A. Ashby, farmer, stockman, business man; at present one of the members of the County Commissioners' Board. Postoffice address, Deer Park.

Mr. Joel A. Beachy, a representative farmer, stockman and business man of Grantsville District, where he is also interested in coal production, comes before the voters as a candidate seeking the nomination for the office of County Commissioner. Mr. Beachy comes from one of the oldest and highest respected families in the county. As a man he is affable, of discerning judgment, broad in his views and extremely well qualified for the position which he seeks, or rather as a candidate representing the people of his home district as he comes before the voters upon solicitation of the tax payers of his home community.

County Commissioner Charles A. Ashby, of Deer Park, seeks to be renominated and re-elected. Mr. Ashby's record, which has been a good one as County Commissioner, speaks for itself. He is quite well known in all parts of the county after a service of several years as an official. His candidacy for the office does not come as a surprise to his friends, who are legion.

County Treasurer.

Guy O. Yutzy, present incumbent of the Sheriff's office, is the new candidate for the Republican nomination for County Treasurer. As Sheriff Mr. Yutzy has given general satisfaction, it is said hy many who are in a position to judge. The duties of the office he now occupies are onerous and have been for many years. That he has discharged the many duties incumbent upon him as Sheriff should be a good recommendation that should he receive the nomination and be elected County Treasurer he will with equal fealty care for the financial affairs of the tax payers and residents of the county.

Judge of the Orphans' Court

Mr. J. Thomas Moon, of District No. 10, for a number of years a member of the Orphans' Court, aspires to he nominated hy the Republicans for another term. Mr. Moon is a farmer of known ability; n representntive citizen of his community nnd a splendid citizen. His record as a Judge in former years is his recommendation as one qualified for the position.

ANNUAL GARRETT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

What The County Fair Should Mean to the Farmers of This Community

LAWRENCE M. FRALEY,
Mayor of Oakland.

Garrett county is principally an agricultural section and anything that promotes agriculture is a valuable asset to the residents of the county.

The annual Fair undoubtedly has had a large influence in stimulating interest in products of the farm and is therefore worthy of the fullest support of every citizen of the county.

The exhibits at the fairs in the past have been of the highest quality and the subject of favorable comment on the part of everyone who viewed them. This is the best kind of publicity for our county, and every farmer should be glad to co-operate with the Fair officials to make it a big success.

The social feature is invaluable. The Fair presents the opportunity for the exchange of views and ideas that are always helpful. Many States have spent millions of dollars in grounds and buildings in order that their citizens might have the opportunity to exhibit their products and learn more about their profession. This is evidence that the money and time spent in promoting Fairs is well worth while.

Another important feature is the training and knowledge the children of the county gain by being given the opportunity to see and observe what can be raised and grown in our county. They naturally will take an interest in what they see at the Fair and will profit thereby. Every school in the county should take an interest in School Day and try to have a full representation for their school that day.

Everyone can derive some benefit from the Fair and should give their heartiest support to the Fair Association to make this year's Fair the best one in its history.

L. M. FRALEY, Mayor.

All Pythian Sisters are invited to assist in serving lunch at Waingold's sale, which is to be held Saturday, July 10th. The public has learned to appreciate the excellent food and the courteous service at each sale conducted by Mr. Wningod. The same standard will be maintained at this particular sale. The services of every Sister is requested.

AN ALLEGED MOONSHINER EXTENDS HIS HOSPITALITY

Invites Officers to Partake of Morning Meal Before Being Brought to Oakland Jail

Prohibition Enforcement Officers William R. Harvey and Cleveland D. Jarvis of Internal Revenue Department with headquarters in Cumberland, arrived at the farm of Stanley Foster, near Accident, Saturday morning in time to get their breakfast.

The fact that Foster was under arrest after he had been outwitted and was to brought to Oakland and placed in jail did not preclude his extending hospitality to his captors.

The officers called, and representing they were from some distant point, said they wanted some whiskey. Foster was at first suspicious, but finally he yielded to the importunities of the visitors and sold them three pints for $4. He had already told them that he had run off eleven barrels of mash which yielded 72 gallons, but this had all been disposed of except the three pints. Foster had a vat that held 11 barrels and he used a 100-gallon still.

After Harvey bought the liquor he made known his identity by showing his card containing his picture and the announcement of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Allegany county.

Foster made the best of the situation and, after breakfast and selections on a music machine at his home, accompanied the officers to Oakland where they turned him over to Sheriff Yutzy. Bond for his appearance at the December Term of the Circuit Court has been furnished by Foster.

At a point on the State road near Thayerville, seven miles north of Oakland, the same officers who brought Foster to Oakland earlier in the day on Saturday arrested Nelson Bennett, Lloyd McCormick and Son Hamilton, the latter a Negro, all of Morgantown, West Va., for transportation and possession. They had thirty-five gallons of moonshine in their touring car which had been purchased in the neighborhood and which was being taken overland to Morgantown. The trio, after a preliminary hearing before Magistrate W. A. Gonder, were sent to the Garrett County Jail to be held for the action of the Grand Jury in December. They are making an effort to secure bond.

Joseph Minnicks, a farmer residing about five miles west of Frostburg, in the vicinity of Finzel, Garrett county, was held in $500 bond by Justice of the Peace Zeller, of Grantsville, for the action of the Garrett county Grand Jury. When his place was raided on Friday evening by Officers Harvey and Jarvis a 25-gallon still, five gallons of whiskey and one barrel of mash were found.

The officers also visited Ideal Inn, on the National Highway, a short distance from Grantsville, and found a quantity of home brew. The proprietor, Lowman Cobaugh, was placed under arrest and was held in $500 bond for the action of the Garrett County Circuit Court by Justice Zeller, of Grantsville.

Boy Scout News Notes.

The local court of honor granted 29 merit badges during the month of June. This brings our total up to approximately 250 merit badges, and is something to be proud of as fifteen Scouts have earned them in only nine months. There are more than fifteen first class Scouts now, for the names of Richard Davis, James Nordeck, Bruce Smouse and Donald Porter have been added to the list since our last newspaper report. Several Scouts now lack but two required merit badges for the very much coveted rank of Eagle Scout.

We were recently visited by our former Scoutmaster, Rev. A. J. Torrey. He tells us that upon a recent visit to New York City he looked up our record at National headquarters, 200 Fifth Avenue, and found us listed in the front rank. Three mighty cheers!

We now have as regular visitors, two boys who are spending the summer months in this community and who are registered in another tooop. These boys attend the regular troop meetings and work, study and enjoy troop privileges just the same as loeal boys. We extend a most cordial invitntion to all registered Scouts spending the summer in Oakland, Mountain Lake Park, Deer Park and vicinity to come and be one of us. We meet in the City Hall every Friday night at seven. S. W. SHIRER, S. M.

Famous Cooks Of Yesterday And Today

ALTHOUGH the culinary department of the home has been generally regarded as "woman's sphere," some of the most famous cooks in history have been men. The experiments in cookery of Conde, Grandi, Cardinal Richelieu and Alexandre Dumas won international fame.

Conde spent a lifetime in perfecting bean soup, that being his specialty. Ferdinand Grandi was the originator of 700 soups before he found one that suited him. He devoted his entire life to studying flavor and trying to find out how it could best be conserved by new and improved methods. The eminent churchman and statesman, Armand de Richelieu, cultivated the art of cookery as a hobby, whenever he could escape from the affairs of state. It was no less a personage than he, who originated the mayonnaise salad-dressing we know so well. And Dumas, that great literary light, achieved considerable fame for the appetizing dishes he invented in his leisure moments.

Many others, particularly in France and Italy, became famous for special dishes or for their expert cookery in general. In New York and other large American cities, there are noted chefs, today, who attract patrons to the hotels or restaurants where they officiate.

But the master-cook of today is the canner, who prepares for all the world nutritious, and appetizing foods. Of the convenience of these chefs who must daily cook for hundreds of people gladly avail themselves. And to millions of busy housewives these foods, sanitarily and hygienically prepared, are an incalculable blessing.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

The people of this community are glad to learn that Dr. T. D. Richards is getting along so well in the hospital at Washington, D. C., following the operation which he submitted to one day last week.

The annual camp meeting began on the evening of July first with a fine congregation and devout earnestness from the first note sounded. The music is well directed and is quite inspiring.

Dr. Paul, an excellent teacher, delivered the initial sermon which has been followed by others of equal interest at each succeeding meeting.

As has always been the case people are here from all points of the compass to share in this time-honored, helpful service, yet strange as it may seem, many people living within hearing of the singing slight the meetings.

Rev. E. R. Hauser has rented Mrs. Sincell's cottage and is to occupy it this week with his family. Rev. Mr. Hauser is a native Garrett countian, now stationed at Clearfield, Pa., as pastor of the Lutheran church, and comes back to his native mountains for the purpose of recuperating after a serious surgical operation which he recently underwent.

Rev. W. M. Brock, of Cumberland, is comming with his famiy and has rented Mrs. Knease's cottage for the summer.

Preparations are already under way for the reception and entertainment of the host of young people from all parts of Maryland and West Virginia who gather annually at the Deaconess Home and Annex and participate in the School of Missions which begins on the 26th inst. and continues until August 1st. A wonderfully interesting program has been arranged by the women having charge of the affair. Every church of every denomination in Garrett county especially should have one or more delegates at the school. Particulars, registration cards and programs may be had by addressing Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, Oakland.

Those who could not come for the beginning of the camp meeting, are now gathering in. Quite a number of ministers of different denominations are with us and the meeting is moving on successfully. It is to close on Sunday night.

The Pittsburgh Epworth League convention will begin Monday evening. Several hundred delegates from that city and the adjacent towns are expected to be present and an interesting week expected to follow.

PRIMARIES VS. CONVENTIONS.

With the exception of seven States in which nominating conventions are held by law, and two others in which the party organizations have the option of choosing their candidates thru either a direct primary or a convention, the primary system prevails throughout the United States.

The seven States which still adhere to the method of nominating candidates for State and National offices by convention are Idaho, Connecticut, Delaware, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Utah and New York. In the latter State, however, all county and local officers, as well as members of the House of Representatives, are nominated in primaries.

Georgia and Maryland are the two States in which party organizations decide for themselves the time and method of selecting candidates.

In a republic parties are indispensable to the conduct of the government. From the foundation of the Republic parties have existed, and in each election platforms have been formulated upon which parties have laid before the electorate the policies of government which each advocates and to which each is committed.

A political party is a combination of voters having substantially similar views. Parties, appeal to the people for the privilege of conducting the government on the basis of the principles outlined in their platforms. Without a convention of duly delegated representatives of a party no intelligent means is afforded by which the principles for which candidates are standing for office can be presented to the voters. Of course each candidate may formulate and enunciate his own platform. But such a plan is the basis of the "bloc" system, as opposed to party control or guidance. The candidate is bound to support no policy other than that which he may formulate for himself. No "committee on resolutions" has prepared in advance a declaration of principles upon which an appeal to the people is made. He presents nothing like a platform by which the voter may know what to expect, and the voter is robbed of the right to hold a party responsible for its sins of omission or of commission.

Further, the candidate of a primary, when elected, is frequently at entire variance with his colleagues to whom he is not responsible, even tho he may have been elected upon a "regular" party ticket. His personal platform may be inconsistent with his party's policies.

It is always a difficult thing to get the American voter sufficiently interested in an election to take the trouble to go to the polls on election day. In the primary election, unless there be a local issue at stake, even greater trouble to get the electorate to the polls is encountered, and it is only through the efforts of party managers and candidates themselves that he can be dragged to the polls. In a recent village primary in New York, with a voting population of some 500, there were only five votes cast, and three of them were by the election officers themselves.

The result is that whenever a sharp contest exists among individuals for a coveted nomination large sums of money must be expended, with the inevitable scandals following the expenditure. The old convention system had its had features, hut none to compare with those which have developed since the adoption of the primary system in so many of the States.

AMERICAN REVOLUTIONISTS WERE NOT PACIFISTS.

The American heroes who met at Philadelphia to adopt the Declaration of Independence were not pacifists, and had they been no United States of America would have arisen, according to a writer in a magazine of world-wide circulation. Without warriors in by-gone days there would he no Christian civilization now, according to the above writer.

The men who at Philadelphia one hundred and fifty yenrs ago gave to the world the Declaration of Independence and to the winds the flag of a new-born nation, were not pacifists. They stood ready to back words with deeds.

If it had been otherwise, America would still have been colonial Europe, involved in every war which has disturbed the old world during that century and a-half. Because they preferred war to submission to injustice, their posterity has escaped a hundred useless wars.

The pacifist is not the true friend of peace. The nonresistance of right means the triumph of wrong; and the triumph of wrong means the reign of might always at war with right.

The great men who signed the Declaration knew that it meant war. They knew that if war went against them their own necks would be in the noose. Patrick Henry expressed the spirit of that day and of today when he said: "Is life so dear, or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains or slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God!"

Pacifism, non-preparedness for national defense, the right and duty of the citizen to refuse to participate in war waged in defense of the Republic is seriously preached in the name of Christianity. Yet but for warriors like Charles Martel, John Sobieski and King Ferdinand there would today be no Christianity; the sway of the hordes of Mohammed over Europe would centuries ago been complete.

Puritans and Cavaliers came to America sword in hand. They dwelt always within the shadow of war. Extermination would have been the penalty of non-resistance. Pacifism in the face of aggression of savages would not have prevented war, but it would have made certain that war would have wiped them out.

The men of '76 were ready to fight for existence of a "new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" before the law. To that fight they pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor—and won!

Ex-service men connected with the American Legion are being invited to take part in a state wide vote as to whether they favor or oppose a state bonus for ex-service men who took part in the world war. At the 7th annual convention of the State Department, American Legion, held in Hagerstown last August, a resolution was passed authorizing the holding of this state wide poll and that the results be filed with the State Adjutant by each local Post, prior to the opening of the next annual convention.

It will be recalled that the people of Maryland in November, 1924, favored a constitutional amendment enabling the General Assembly of Maryland to pass a bill providing for a state bonus. The General Assembly of Maryland will not meet until the year 1927, and money to be paid out under any compensation law passed by the Legislature would likely not be available for distribution before the year 1928, which would be ten years after the close of the war.

Part of the resolution passed by the American Legion of Hagerstown last August in this connection reads as follows:

"WHEREAS, Due to the great lapse of time between the closing of the War and the availability of this compensation, the Convention is uncertain as to whether or not the Members of the Legion throughout the State of Maryland desire the State to pay them this compensation:

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Convention that each loyal Post of the American Legion in the Department of Maryland be directed to take a poll of its membership regarding this compensation, and that the delegates of each Post be instructed to vote on the question at the next annual Convention of this Department in accordance with the result of the poll so taken:

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a certificate showing the result of such polls be filed with the State Adjutant by each local Post prior to the opening of the next Annual Convention."

Look for the Maryland Label.

Nearly half a million labels were distributed to dealers in bedding materials—mattresses, pillows, comfortables—by the State Department of Health during the last twelve months, according to a report of Mr. J. Davis Donovan, who is in charge of the administration of the bedding law passed at the last session of the Legislature.

"When Maryland housewives go shopping for mattresses, or pillows, or soft, warm comfortables, they expect, as a matter of course, to be duly safeguarded, so far as the sanitary qualities and the exact contents of their purchases are concerned," Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health, said in discussing the work of the Department in this field. "If they want to be quite sure of what they are getting," he continued, "it will be worth while for them to get into the habit of looking out for the Health Department label.

"The Maryland Bedding law is like the Pure Food law in requiring the exact contents of the articles displayed for sale, to be stated. Whether the material is 'all new,' 'all second-hand,' or 'partly second-hand' must also be stated. Materials in made-voer mattresses, pillows or comfortables must be sterilzed and disinfected in accordance with methods approved by the State Board of Health, and for which a permit has been issued by the department, before they ean be used again for filling or resold. Feathers or down, whether new or old, that are to be used for filling, must be sterilized and disinfected, for new as well as made-over bedding, in accordance with a similar permit, and the number of the permit must be shown on the tag attached to each article.

"The bedding tags are issued to manufacturers and dealers by the State Department of Health. Each tag contains the name and address of the manufacturer and of the dealer by whom the article is sold. It must also contain a statement of the materials used in filling and the permit number. Over 490,000 tags were issued in the last twelve months, according to the latest report of Mr. J. Davis Donovan, chief of the Division of Legal Administration.

"To prevent evasions or violations of the law, the Department has an inspector in the field who visits wholesale as well as retail concerns. Violations of the law are reported and dealt with according to the law. Several cases are up at present for prosecution.

"Throughout the country much stricter attention is being paid to the possibilities of the transmission of disease through the careless handling of bedding. The Maryland law corresponds closely to the laws of other states. A recent report of the enforcement of the bedding laws in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and California shows that there were twenty-three convicitions with fines, or other punishments, including the closing of one factory, for violation of the laws in these states, last month. Judge McCarthy, of Chicago, in refusing a postponement in one of the trials—a second offense—said, 'This man is disseminating disease. He does not care, but profits by trade in such materials.' The Maryland law is being enforced as carefully as possible so that the people of the State may be protected from greed of that sort."

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

A MEATLESS MEAL, "FIT FOR COMPANY"

At the Battle Creek College of Home Economics they specialize in planning and preparing well-balanced meals which are both attractive to the eye and nutritious to eat.

MARGARET ALLEN HALL

Miss Margaret Allen Hall, dietitian and nutrition expert of the college, has prepared for our readers a "company" menu which is particularly palatable, even though it is absolutely meatless. Proportions are given for the serving of ten.

Eggs a la King
Glazed Sweet Potatoes
Ritzi Tomatoes
Fruit Salad a la Creme
Bread Beverage
Butterscotch Pie
Directions for each dish follow.

Eggs a la King

8 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons minced sweet pepper
4 cups (one quart) milk
8 tablespoons flour
2 cups mushrooms (fresh or canned)
12 hard boiled eggs, cut in pieces
2 teaspoons salt

Melt butter, add pepper and mushrooms, and cook until soft. Stir in flour and add milk. Stir until thickened. Add seasoning and eggs. Heat very hot and serve on squares of toast; or pour into a baking dish, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and brown in a quick oven.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes

12 medium-sized sweet potatoes
1½ cups sugar
⅔ cup water
3 tablespoons butter

Boil the sweet potatoes in salted water for ten minutes, remove the skins and cut in halves lengthwise. Arrange in a buttered pan. Make a syrup by boiling the sugar and water for three minutes. Add the butter. Brush potatoes with syrup and bake until brown, heating with remaining syrup. Serve in a hot covered dish.

Ritzi Tomatoes

Slice bread in usual manner, shape with three-inch biscuit cutter and toast. Slice ripe tomatoes, place a slice on toast, sprinkle with salt, grated cheese or cottage cheese and onion, and finely chopped pepper. Bake in hot oven until tomatoes are cooked and slightly browned.

Fruit Salad a la Creme

2 large bananas
1 pint sliced pineapple
1 pound Tokay or Malaga grapes
1 cup Cream Salad Dressing

Drain the pineapple and cut into small pieces. Peel the grapes, cut into halves and remove the seeds. Peel the bananas, scrape off the fuzzy portions, and dice. Mix with the Cream Salad Dressing and serve on a plate garnished with lettuce, or place a spoonful of fruit on the lettuce leaf with a smaller spoonful of the dressing.

Cream Salad Dressing:
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cream
½ cup lemon juice
3 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups whipped cream

Melt the butter in a double boiler, stir in the flour and the cream (sour milk being preferable). Stir until it begins to thicken. Beat the egg-yolks, add to them the salt, sugar and lemon juice, and turn into the thickened cream. Cook in a double boiler about five minutes, or until the eggs begin to thicken. Cool, and fold in the whipped cream.

Butterscotch Pie

Plain Pastry:
2 cups flour
⅔ cup fat
1 teaspoon salt
Ice water

Mix salt with flour. Cut fat into flour with two knives. Add just enough ice water to hold mixture together without its being sticky. Roll lightly from center outward. This is sufficient pastry for double crusts of one large pie, or two pastry shells.

Butterscotch Filling (for two pies)
4 egg yolks
4 cups dark brown sugar
4 cups milk
1 cup flour
½ cup butter
3 teaspoons vanilla extract

Beat yolks of eggs in inside of double boiler, add milk and butter. Mix flour with sugar, and add to milk mixture. Cook until thickened. Remove from fire and cool. Fill cooked pastry shells. Cover with whipped cream or meringue.

Make a meringue with the four egg whites beaten until stiff, fold in four tablespoonfuls powdered sugar, pile irregularly on top of the pie and bake in moderate oven until brown.

A meatless meal, yes. But who would ever miss the meat?

Why Long Chimneys?

Many women wonder why oil stoves with long chimneys are superior to those with short ones. It is because the long chimneys insure perfect combustion. In other words, every drop of oil is completely burned before the heat reaches the cooking. There is no chance for soot or odor.

Short chimney stoves as a rule focus the heat in one point—the very center of the burner. Long chimney stoves focus the heat on the bottom of the kettles, but diffuse it over the entire kettle bottom. That's why food cooked on long chimney stoves is better done.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JULY 11, 1926.

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

Exodus 2:1-11; Acts 7:22.

Train up a child in the way he should go and even when he is old, he will not depart from it.—Proverbs 22:6.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CHILD: ITS HEALTH.

Egypt found small relief in her measures for repression. The harder the Hebrews toiled the larger grew their numbers. Some other plan must be tried, and that fine (?) figure on the throne determined that no more boys shoud become possible soldiers in the army of some invader. They must be put out of the way. So the cold blooded proposition was given to the nurses to kill every boy that was born. Now if there were only the two who are mentioned, Israel must have had a much smaller population than has been credited to her. Probably these were state officias like our health nurses who covered Goshen territory, directing others acting as their subordinates. Whichever it may have been they were called on the carpet because the plan was a failure and Pharaoh must get some other means of working his will. Each home must become the executioner in the destruction of the family offspring. For cruel brutality it is about the limit of possibility. But it does not appear to have worked any better than the preceding efforts, if one may judge by the numbers reported leaving the country later.

In the home where Mrs. Jocebad Amram lived, a boy was born. And mother-love, abetted by father affection, dared the wrath of the king, so the babe lived. Who would know that it wasn't a girl? But in the days ahead, when little folks, because of the heat, discarded clothes, trouble would be sure to come and it may be that already whispers were going about among the neighbors. "Mrs. J is keeping her boy and I had to give mine up. She's no better than I am —well, just wait!" And when gossip get's going not even a baby is safe. Mrs. Jocebad must devise some other plan if her boy would live. And it differs little today when mothers must fight against decrees of the kings of commerce who would destroy the child with faulty food, with unsanitary conditions, with wretched quarters that pass for houses, with nostrums that drug it into stupid slumbers, hy fads that function only with the pocket of the purveyor. Verily every mother must fight for the health of the child every hour of its infancy and the death rate is still far too high among them.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CHILD: ITS CHANCE.

What chance had a slave baby? Even a "goodly child" faces many a handicap in the position of its parents and this one was no exception. It was not much that this mother asked, merely a chance to live, but she was determined that he should have that. So she thought and prayed and planned until the habits of the princess and some inkling of her feelings called out the idea of an appeal to her pity. But just could it be done? Jocehad puzzled over it until the babsket boat leaped into her mind and speedily into form. Then shee tucked him in with tears and prayers and committed him to the stream and to Miriam. In most unexpected fashion the plea was made to the princess by the babe himself, and as she toyed with the tender flesh the voice of a girl roused her to take some action in the matter. It was a suggestion that she become its mother and it was built upon a dauntless faith in the heart of a woman. She would never destroy a little baby cast into her lap. She was too good even to think of any such thing, was the implication and the solution of the difficulty presented upon the basis of such trust completely carried her over to the doing of the thing suggested. And the child got his chance not only thru that faith but thru faithfulness also. There was a little girl with all the witchery of the stream and shore who refused to do anything but watch. Suppose she had played and the vital moment had passed, then all history would have been different. And it is always true that God's plans are worked out thru the fidelity of some one so that even a child's faithfulness helps to shape the destinis of the world.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CHILD: ITS EDUCATION.

Every child comes into the world knowing nothing and with only a bundle of possibilities that must be guided into proper development. Small chance there was in a slave cabin for making a fight against ignorance. The woeful failures of Aaron declare the difficulties such a school house involved. But only a trained and disciplined mind would be equal to the great task of nation building, and this must be provided In some fashion. It is significant that it was the state sch ol that gave Moses his training. The princess saw to that, for this adopted child of hers must grace the paace, and nothing could be left undone to reach a justification for displeasing her father by taking him. So the state was charged with his education and taxes went to pay the bills. We know far more about the school system of our own land than we do about that of old Egypt, but for the privileged there was many a lesson to be mastered. Euslid, who lived centuries before Christ, is still setting problems in our geometries. Mathematics and engineering, astronomy and state-craft were part of the knowledge of that old day. There was much to learn and Moses knew "all the wisdom of the Fgyptians." That old state system fully justified itself by its product.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CHILD: ITS FAITH.

The fourth "R,"—Religion,—cannot be omitted from the curriculum of the child. Its inclusion is one of the burning problems of the educators of the present day and Parochial schools, week day religious instruction, the release of children during school hours, the Bible in the public schools, are terms familiar to all of us. What was the process in the case of Moses? He was a religious leader in the best sense of the word, and the impress he has made upon the spiritual life of the world can not be reckoned in terms of his own life, but must include the contribution of the Jew flowering in Christianity. He did not get it in his school life in Egypt. He was accustomed to every form that was the habit of the palace, but that was not his faith. The beliefs that were fundamental in his thinking he drew warm from his mother's heart. Under her tutelage he lisped his early prayer. Under her teaching spiritual habits arose. Under her life influence God became a real, personal presence. Under her singing the music of a mighty trust entered his soul. It was in the slave hut that God lived and because He was living there in word and act, Moses found his spiritual certainties. And it is in the heart of the home today that the heart of the child finds its abiding conceptions of the great Father and gets a faith that becomes an anchor of the soul when storms sweep the life.

CHEMICAL COMBINATIONS.

By F. F. CORLISS

When man discovers the hidden mystery in the chemical union of the elements he will have found the master key to all mysteries.

Man is a chemical compound as much as sugar and salt are—as much as the earth he walks on; as much so as a bird or a beast.

While he is all that these things are in elemental life, he is far more. He is the one superlative compound of all life's chemical products.

We live in a world of effects in which man stands supreme and paramount because life in him has been raised to a state of self-conscious intelligence. He has emerged from what we call matter, much as ice rises into view from freezing water.

To say that life and mind grow out materialist. But science has found meterialist. But science has found that matter is not the dead, inert thing it was thought to be.

Matter is laden with life and tho dormant and static has a dynamic potency when quickened hy that elusive thing which chemistry conceals and which we call the soul of things.

The five senses with which man is endowed and which are essential for our efficiency in the affairs of daily life, are also enjoyed by animal life beneath man. But in addition to man's five animal senses he possesses self-consciousness and a reasoning faculty that carries him far in self-analysis.

Nature has always supplied life's needful demands. She has given eyes to see where there was light to behold and ears to hear where there were sounds, so some time, somewhere, in our unfolding development man may receive a sixth sense—a mind's eye—that will broaden the horizon of his vision into things not now to be discovered. And this mind's eye will be to the individual what the telescope now is to the astronomer.

A wonderful sermon was recently dramatized, entitled "The Man Who Played God," and was projected in pictures on the moving screen.

It was most impressive, so instructive and so full of love, sympathy and helpful service, both human and Divine, that it effectively touched the hearts of all beholders.

Now, as Mr. Arliss played God that he might uplift and help men in their lives and conduct with each other, so I would have each one of my readers impersonate God for an opposite reason.

With your mind's eye I would have you look back in retrospection to the time when our earth was a revolving mass of molten metal and blazing gas. When all the life there was on earth was an elemental energy within an athereal medium.

And now from your vision on high behold that the cosmic forces that have brought earth out of the invisible ether and that accompany her through a state of birth, maturity, decline and final disintegration from objectivity into obscurity, are the same forces that condition all the suns and stars of space.

Now remember that you are God; still you are but a ghostly apparation floating through endless space like a moat in a sunbeam. Infinite in your wisdom and power, infinite in your lonesomeness in a universe of mind and matter that is not companionable, not talkative, not expressive, not musical, not loving.

Now, as God possessed with the power to create all that your heart desires, anything that your infinite mind can visualize, it becomes the most logical and natural thing in the world, why you created man and woman.

As God, you found that a spiritual life in an invisible and intangible state was void of utility and expression until it became objectified in useful living things—in a world of effects, and in that higher life that moves, thinks, talks, oves, joys and suffers.

Life means to live, to learn, to progress and to gather wisdom from experience, and experience is impossible only to lives that can tangibly contact other lives on the plan of effect.

So we learn that planets are made for the abodes of men and that men are made as mediums for God's expression of His highest attributes. That men are individualized entities and yet inseperable parts of the infinite mind—imperishable.

And while man lives in God, God also lives in man and is ever striving to lift man into God-likeness and fellowship and to make man a co-worker for the development of life and learning.

Yes, man is a chemical compound, plus the dynamic power of life and mind raised to the highest degree known on erath.

What man may yet become doth not now appear, but he has within him a God-like potency, unlimited possibilities.

Only through man can God find fellowship and experience the beauties and blessings of His life in the things of His creation.

Only through man can God impart His wisdom, His knowledge of all the arts and sciences.

Man is what gives meaning to life, both his own and that of his Maker.

Man is sole creator of values on earth. Strip the world of all living inhabitants and Manhattan Isle with its accumulated wealth of centuries becomes as worthless as a last year's bird's nest.

So if you ask, "What is man that thou are mindful of him? the answer is: "Man in the aggregate is God in His noblest and grandest manifestation, though not in His fullness and completeness. Perfection is the goal of God's and man's attainment—the thing that ever lures us progressively onward and upward, yet is always just beyond our reach.

So while man is a wonderful chemist in moulding the molecules of matter beneath him, there is only one Alchemist who knows the secret of chemical combinations that mould mind and matter into human forms divine and imbues them with the intelligence of their Maker.

Man apart from God cannot he, can not go, can not do. The Creator runs the machinery of our lives, our digestion, circulation, assimilation and cerebration. Physically He makes us, takes us apart and re-makes us o'er and o'er. He giveth us the hreath of life and He taketh it away, but the soul of us He ever keeps marching on clothed and re-clothed in fresh and hetter raiment.

But to think of God as apart from His divinity in man is to think of an abstraction—just an uncommunicative energy like we find in heat, gravitation and electricity.

If you would have God help you, then help your fellowman and thus you will enlarge and intensify your chemical combination.

Ephraim was scratching his wooly head vigorously when his boss, who was passing, stopped and inquired: "What's the matter with your head, Ephraim?" "Mathematics, sah," replied the old negro. "No," smiled the hoss. "I reckon they are cooties." "I 'speet dat is de white folks' name for dem," continued the troubled Ephraim, "'cause dey adds to my misery, dey subtracts from my pleasure, dey divides my attention and dey sure do multiply."

According to numerous rumors, current in this community, the boldness of the moonshiners and bootleggers in this neighborhood is becoming a serious problem. It is said that there is increased activity among the mountaineers who have for several years heen occupied in the manufacture and sale of illicit whiskey. They are said to no longer conduct their business in the shady hours of the night, but operate their stills in full daylight and near the public thoroughfares of travel. The recent imposition of fines by the court seems not to have exerted a restraining influence, for it is openly reported that some of those convicted and fined are no sooner at liberty than they are right back at the business. There is grave danger in this open contempt of the law and the officers should be more active and the courts impose more severe penalties on the offenders.

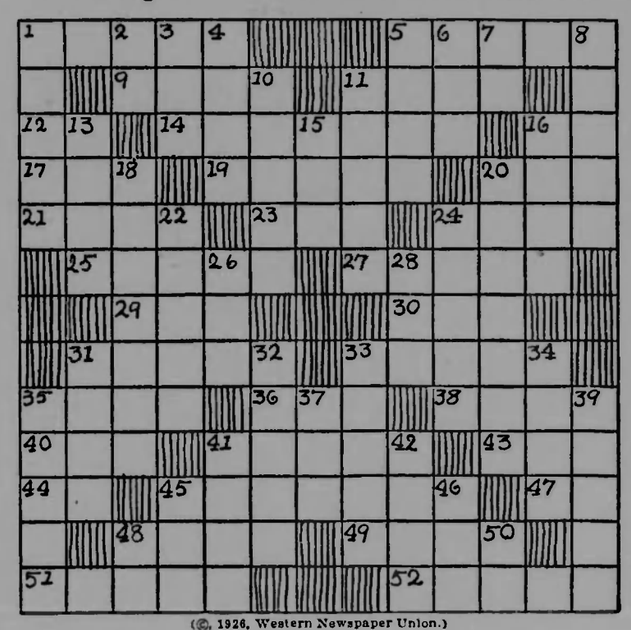
It is reported that the Back Creek Lumber Company has purchased the sugar timber on the Henry B. Wiley farm, just north of this village and that they will place a saw mill in the timber and convert it into lumber in the near future. It appears to some that is is unwise to dispose of sugar groves, as many have done in this section in recent years. The product from the groves is a dependable and a yearly source of revenue, which the community and those owning the sugar trees will miss greatly.



Miss Edna Wiley left her home in Bittinger a few days ago for Akron, Ohio, where she will spend a few weeks.

The first hay to be harvested in this section this year was cut on the farm of Thomas Brenneman last week and with the fine weather conditions then prevailing was put away in fine condition.

The rain which fell over this section on Sunday was of great value to the farmer and gave the whole landscape a brighter, fresher beauty.

This Way to Wellville.

In order that all roads in Maryland may lead to "Wellville," the regulations of the State Board of Health concerning the sanitation of camps and picnic grounds throughout the State are being carefully enforced, according to an announcement by Dr. John S. Fulton Director of the State Department of Health.

The regulations apply to any premises which accommodate ten or more persons, and which are used as a camp or picnic ground for a period of six days or longer. Application for the necessary permission to operate such places must be made in writing to the State Board of Health. On receipt of the application the camps are inspected by the Deputy State Health Officer of the district in which the camp is located, or by some other duly authorized representative of the State Department of Health. Permits are granted only to those persons whose places meet the State requirements.

Up to July 1, fifty-nine applications had been received, Dr. Fulton said, representing camps in thirteen counties. Seventeen had been found in satisfactory condition and permits had been granted for their operation. Permits for the remaining forty-two were held up pending recommended improvements, which are being made as rapidly as possible. In addition, the Deputy State Health offieers throughout the State have been authorized to report upon the sanitary conditions of the camps in their respective districts, whether permits have been applied for or not, so that tourists, campers and picnickers may be duly safeguarded.

"In these days of the open road," Dr. Fulton said, "and of the general summer vacation, when thousands of tourists motor through the State or linger in our lovely highlands or by our beautiful waterways, and when our own people are taking to the open in ever increasing numbers for their summer holiday, the State Department of Health has the special duty of seeing to it that every one of these roads leads to 'Wellville.' Hence the care with which the sanitary regulations governing such places are being enforced. We want no comeback of typhoid or other communicable disease from any of these places where people go for pleasure and recreation. Full instructions as to sanitary precautions to be taken to safeguard the users of such camps will be given to every person who applies for a permit to operate such a camp."

Here are the regulations:

The following regulations shall apply to any premises used as a camp or picnic ground for a period of six days or longer, and accommodating ten or more persons:

1. No eamp shall be operated without a permit from the State Board of Health. Applieation for such permit shall be made in writing. This shall state the exact location of the existing or proposed camp, type of camp, the approximate number of persons to be maintained, the probable duration of use, the proposed source of water supply for the camp, and the proposed method sewage and garbage disposal.

2. All camps must be supplied with water which must meet with the minimum requirements of the State Board of Health. It shall be of sufiicient quantity and protected against pollution.

3. For every camp there shall be provided convenient and suitable fly tight closets or other toilet facilities which will effectually prevent sepeage or flowing into water supplies and the breeding of flies, which the occupants of the camp shall be required to use and no other. Closets shall be loeated in such position that streams, lakes, reservoirs, etc., will not be contaminated. If pits are used under the closets they shall be protected against flooding with rain water.

4. All camp surroundings, tents and buildings shall at all times be kept in a clean and sanitary condition, that is, no organic matter shall be allowed to accumulate.

5. If an enclosed kitchen is provided, it must be screened against flies.

6. All foodstuffs must be protected against flies. If milk or cream is offered for sale it must be kept in closed receptacles and refrigerated below 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

7. All garbage, kitchen waste and other rubbish in camps shall be deposited in suitable covered metal receptacles which shall be emptied daily or oftener if necessary, and the contents burned, buried or otherwise disposed of in such a way as not to become offensive or insanitary.

8. Whenever a case of sickness with fever or diarrhoea as a symptom shall occur in any camp the person in charge shall at once notify the local health officer. The patient shall be isolated but not removed from the camp until the permission of the health officer has been obtained, and all bodily discharges shall be burned.

9. The management of every camp shall assume responsibility for maintaining in good order all sanitary appliances on said ground and for the enforcement of these sanitary regulntions.

Passed at a meeting of the State Board of Health held on April 29, 1926.

High Tide at Panama

While it is contrary to the usual idea, there is really no difference in the main level of the Atlantic and the Paeific oceans, yet the difference in the tides at Panama is about 18 feet. This is due to the shape of the Bay of Panama. As the tide sweeps from the Pacific into this bay it meets a funnel-shaped shore line, which gradually contracts as the tide travels landward. The result is that the tide rises higher and higher until it reaches a maximum of 10 feet above the average sea level. When it flows out of the bay it reaches a point ten feet below the average sea level, thus giving a tidal fluctuation of 20 feet. This same rise of an exeessive tide may also be observed at the Bay of Fundy. On the Atlantic at the Zone the tidal fluctuation is only two feet. —Adventure Magazine.

Among Earliest Writings

Runes are the earliest written characters used by the Teutonic races of Europe. They are formed principally of straight lines, and are found in inscriptions on weapons, ornaments, implements and memorial stones in various parts of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, and to some extent in England. The origin of the runes, as well as the date of their invention, is unknown, but it is believed they were derived from the Latin alphabet and that they were used as early as the Third century. The Norsemen believed Odin, chief of the gods, first scratched them on his spear. Thus runes were identified with heathen worship. The runes were retained in Scandinavia far longer than in any other region.—Kansas City Star.

VOLUME 51. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, JULY 15, 1926. NUMBER 21.

MARYLAND GAME TRACTS BOAST MANY SPECIMENS

Over 10,500 Acres in Garrett County are Controlled By Conservation Commission.

Maryland now has under control of the Conservation Department in Garrett county more than 10,500 acres of game preserve upon which there is every species of wild life in this climate.

Meadow Mountain has 8,000 acres of refuge coming down to the storage dam of the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Corporation, which is said to be the largest of its kind in the United States. This lake is being stocked by the department with brook and rainbow trout.

It is the purpose of Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner, to set aside 1,000 acres adjoining this body of water for a State park. It is his dream to see hundreds of homes owned by Marylanders located there.

Snaggy Mountain preserve, close by has 2,000 acres in Maryland and 3,000 in West Virginia, with a lake, in the latter State, near the summit. Three years ago the State placed there two doe deer and one buck. This summer the count reveals a herd of 25 deer on the mountain. The survey also showed 47 wild turkeys and countless grouse and quail. This wild life is all protected by game wardens. The season for deer will be opened in 1928 for a limited killing of buck.

Through both these mountains ranges innumerable streams course. They are filled with brook trout. It is said that numerous large fish of this species have been recently caught by local anglers. Nowhere in the country is game more abundant nor is it more diversified than on these ten thousand acres of Garrett county mountain land.

Recently a deer was killed by an tomobilist at a point on the Nation- Highway west of Grantsville when the animal was struck by an automobilist as he was passing along the highway. The deer jumped from the embankment alongside the road immediately in front of the car. The ear was wrecked.

Whe nMr. Earle's scheme for the establishment of a State park shall have been consummated, Maryland sportsmen will have at their front door the finest fishing and up the mountain behind their prospective bungalows game, from squirrels and rabbits to bears and deer.

County-Wide W. O. W. Picnic at Bittinger, July 24th.

According to reports of the various committees of the Woodmen of the World, at a meeting held in Bittinger last Friday night, the proposed "Log-Rolling" and picnic to he held in the Broadwater grove at Bittinger on July 24th, everything is in readiness and a large crowd is expected. The new featuree of putting on the degree work publicly is exciting much interest, and many have expressed themselves as appreciating the opportunity of seeing the candidates ride "the goat." Injured by Fall in Barn.

While engaged in repairing a hay carrier in his father's barn near Oakland on Tuesday, Elmer Hostetler, 26 years old, fell approximately twenty-five feet to the floor beneath and very seriously injured himself about his face and body. Young Hostetler was suspended from the comb of the roof of the structure on a rope, which was fastened through a hlock and tied to a rafter below him and to one side. When the hlock gave way he held to the rope until it threw him against an upright post which produced a fracture of his cheek hone and rendered him unconscious. He then feel to the floor with such force as to break the flooring and allowed his feet and legs to pass through the hole thus made. He was found by a younger brother who had gone to the barn with him. Dr. Hinebaugh was summoned and carried the injured man into the house where he dressed his wounds and made him as comfortable as possible.

Oakland Rotary Club Spend a Pleasant Evening.

The Oakland Rotary Club thoroughly enjoyed a very pleasant session last Friday evening when they held their regular weekly meeting as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, at their hospitable home on Second street. The members enjoyed a bountiful dinner served by Mrs. Sincell and daughters, and as usual on special occasions of this kind the club membership was nearly one hundred per cent in attendance. A couple of members may have been absent but the appetities of those present were fully one hundred per cent perfect and they did full justice to the tasty and varied menu served by their hostess. During the evening the club sang many of the Rotary songs; Prof. Roland Gilbert favored them with solos on clarinet and ocarina. President Dr. McComas had charge of the meeting and after the dessert, in his usual versatile style presented Ben with a golden memento of the pleasant occasion. Dr. Moore pleasantly conveyed the sincere thanks of the club to Mrs. Sincell for her hospitality and kindness in throwing her home open to the members of the Oakland Rotary Club. After a few more songs all adjourned, ending another pleasant evening.—Today's Oakland Democrat.

Quite a number of Oakland people are planning to go to Accident tomorrow evening and on Saturday evening to witness the presentation of the play, "The Story of the Reformation" to be staged by local talent in the auditorium of the Accident school building. The characters in the play have been instructed in their parts by Miss Chorpenning. There will be more than fifty people in the cast. The play is being given under the auspices of the Lutheran church in Accident, the proceeds of which are to be devoted toward cancelling a debt resting upon the parsonage which was recently built. EPPLER IN OPPOSITION TO CONGRESSMAN ZIHLMAN

Filed Nomination Papers With Local Election Board of Supervisors Tuesday Morning

George Louis Eppel, of Cumberland, a member of the State Industrial Accident Commission, annuonced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative from the Sixth Congressional District Monday. On Tuesday morning the local board of Election Supervisors received his certificate of candidacy.

Mr. Eppler had previously filed like papers with the election boards of Allegany, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery counties.

Mr. Eppler's candidacy is adverse to that of Congressman Frederick N. Zihlman, who has represented the district in the House for the last five terms, and is an aspirant for renomination by the Republican party. To some extent it is an outgrowth of the "conference dinner" of the Sixth district held at Hagerstown, December 19, 1925, at which Dr. John H. Latane and others made speeches against the Volstead law and the diners pledged their efforts to defeat Mr. Zihlman if any wet candidate appeared against him.

Issues Statement

In a statement made Monday Mr. Eppler did not make opposition to the Volstead act his principal issue, but he declared that every Congressional candidate ought to make known his position on the question.

"At the instance of a number of my friends I have become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth district," said Mr. Eppler. Mr. Zihlman has been in Congress for five terms and I am convinced that the welfare of the Republican party, as well as of the district as a whole, requires a change. In many respects he does not represent the sentiments of the Republican voters of the Sixth district nor the historic pinciples of the Republican party and has not adequately advanced the interests of the people of our district.

Cites Record in State Senate

"I stand upon my record in the Senate of Maryland and as a member of the State Industrial Accident Commission. While in the Senate I was instrumental in securing fairer salaries for the teachers in the public schools, in obtaining far-reaching amendments to the Workmen's Compensation act, and especially am I proud of my work for the miners' bill resulting in our present model mining law.

"During the past six years I have devoted my entire time and attention to the administration and proper application of the Workmen's Compensation law. If elected to Congress I will devote myself to similar efforts to procure constuctive legislation for the people of the Sixth district, and in the course of the campaign I will present and advocate certain remedial legislation particularly pertaining to commercial and labor matters affecting the Sixth district and the State as a whole.

Attacks Volstead Act.

"Conditions created by the Volstead act constitute a national scandal, and it is incumbent on every Congressional candidate to state his position on this question in unmistakable terms. I was one of the several members of the Maryland Senate who, in the session of 1918, bitterly fought and voted against the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the intolerable conditions which have resulted from its adoption have confirmed and intensified my views. If elected to Congress I will carry on the fight against Federal prohibition as I did when I was a State Senator from Allegany county.

"Of course, this does not mean that I am opposed to local prohibition in any county where the majority of the people favor it. On the contrary, I am strong for local option and will do all in my power to give the people of any county the kind of law they want, but the attempt to impose on any State or part of any State a law which is contrary to the wishes of the people can only result in disrespect for law and is hound to he detrimental to real temperance, as our experience with Volsteadism has abundantly proved.

"Of one thing I am sure and that is that if a man votes dry he ought not to drink wet."

Appointed By Ritchie

Mr. Eppler, who is a nephew of George Wellington, former United States Senator, was educated at Gettysburg College, the University of Maryland Law School and the Johns Hopkins University, where he took special courses. He began the practice of law in 1907 and represented Allegany county in the Senate of Maryland at the session of 1918 and 1920. Governor Ritchie appointed him a member of the State Industrial Accident Commission in 1920, and in 1925 reappointed him for a further term of six years. He is active in the Elks, Eagles, Moose, Junior Order United States America Mechanics and the Red Men.

League To Be Neutral

W. Bladden Lowndes, leader of the Hill-Humphreys-Broening Republican League in Western Maryland, said that the league would be neutral in the contest between Mr. Eppler and Mr. Zihlman.

"We told Mr. Zihlman that if he kept out of the fight against Senator Weller we would keep hands off him." said Mr. Lowndes. "He promised to do so, and, so far as we know, he is keeping his word. Our organization will favor neither candidate."

Have Them Vaccinated.

If your small son or daughter is going to start on the royal road to the three R's this fall, now is the time to have him or her, as the case may be, vaccinated against smallpox. That is, of course, if it has not been done previously. Do it for two reasons: First, and most important, to protect the younster against one of the most disfiguring and loathsome diseases known; second, because the State law requires all children to be successfully vaccinated against smallpox before they can be enrolled in the public schools. This is the advice of Dr. John S. Fulton, director of the State Department of Health.

According to the estimates of the State Department of Education, over 16,000 children living in the counties of Maryland will reach school age this year, and will be eligible for admission to the schools. Health examinations of prospective first graders, to find out conditions that need attention, so that the children may enter school without unnecessary physical handicaps, were started by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, working in cooperation with the Department of Education, several years ago.

Two out of every three children who have been examined so far, have never been vaccinated against smallpox, according to a preliminary report made to Dr. Fulton by Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene. Out of 1198 children from four to seven years old, examined during the month of June, only 342 had vaccination scars. The remaining 856 had never been protected against smallpox.

These figures were taken from reports of child health conferences held in fifteen counties, in widely separate places, and are therefore regarded as typical of the entire State. It is accordingly estimated that approximately 10,000 of the prospective first graders have never been vaccinated, and therefore need to have this done before they can be admitted to school.

"Smallpox has been kept down in Maryland." Dr. Fulton said in commenting on the figures, "through the careful enforcement of our vaccination law. Within the last few years there has been a serious flare-up of smallpox in this country and the United States has had the unenviable reputation of having more cases than have occurred in any other part of the world with the exception of British India. People in this country are so accustomed to be kept free from devastating epidemics that they carelessly neglect the means we have of protecting ourselves. Nothing but vaccination will prevent us from having the kind of outbreaks that have terrified other parts of the country. The old-fashioned family doctor used to vaccinate the babies in the families he attended as a matter of routine, before they were a year old. That this is no longer the case is indicated by the examinations made by the Bureau of Child Hygiene. It is therefore necessary for the State Department of Health to see that the law requiring children to be vaccinated before they can be enrolled in school, is strictly enforced. Accordingly, my advice to parents whose children will enter school this fall, is to have the children vaccinated now and not to wait until the schools open to have it done."

THE CALL OF MOSES.

Exodus 2:11-4:18.

Certainly I will be with thee.—Ex. 3:12.

THE PLACE OF THE CALL.

Out of a slave hut into a palace was the first call that came to Moses. It is one most of us would answer willingly enough. He heard and went, taking with him all the warm love imparted by Mother Jochebad, by Little Mother Miriam, by ash-marked Amram and task-driven Aaron. And in the palace he knew to the full the compassion Egypt might confer and learned her strength and her pride until the day came when he walked in princely fashion thoughout her border. He absorbed her culture and imbibed her life. Strange that he did not wed her daughter! Some of that old, stubborn, Hebrew strain kept him from separating by setting up an Egyptinn home, and the prince could could not marry a slave girl. The event of the overseer was not the beginning of his choosing, but an expression of it. He had long ago refused the allurements of Egypt. Now like John Brown of Harpers Ferry fame, he would rouse a slave revolt and lead them to liberty. But in both cases the slave refused to budge and the benefactor bore the bruise.

Plunging into the desert the lad of the river valley climbed into the fastnesses of the hills where he was safe from any pursuit. He took a girl of the skin tent for wife. His past was dead and he was done forever with Egypt of both palace and hut. It was not a love match, but merely a lock on the gate through which he had fled, and she was never a factor in his life, nor does he seem to have had much regard for the children with which they were blessed. They have no share in the history and were left behind with their mother when Moses set out for Egypt. In the family of Reul the sojourner took his full part of the work and became a common herdsman, driving his flock about the hills in search of the scanty herbage that called for tireless trips in many directions. For years Egypt was a closed book. Then the vast silences sobered the hot passions that had burned too fiercely in the plains and he began to con over the old situations and to find reasons for the new in which he found himself. Having no comradeship in the tent he came to long for some voice out of the stillness in which he pondered the events of yesterday and the hopes of tomorrow. God grew real. The old stories of the wanderers to whom He had revealed Himself were ecounted about the camp fires and he wondered if this God of his ancestors might not still speak to those who worshipped. A sense of expectancy possessed him. The thrill of dawn was in his mind. He was coming to the place where speech from God was as possible as speech to God.

THE MEDIUM OF THE CALL

Perhaps the bush had flamed before, but eyes that brooded over the differences of his lot could not see. Many a time he may have cursed the thorn bushes that tore his skin and snatched the wool from his sheep. "Sand and stones are bad enough, but what God wanted to add a maze of prickly bushes is more than I can see," may have been often on his lips. Yet it was just this cursed thing that was the midium through which God revealed Himself in blazing light. It was a thorn that brought Paul a message of infinite tenderness and understanding of God's grace. It is the vision of the thorn-crowned Christ that has blazed across the centuries the message of God's love. It was the thorn of blindness that wrote "O love that will not let me go." It was the flame of the furnace that burned the bonds from the Hebrew children. It is through the besetting thing from which we would gladly escape that God gives His most wonderful revelation. What was it that he saw? The old chronicler was not concerned with any question of the kind. He wasn't a modern. We think in terms of machinery, he reveled in the wonders of the commonplace, seeking no explanation. It may have been some electrical phenomenon that enswathed the bush in flame. It may have been the flaming splendor of the dawn or dusk that touched the bush on some lone hill with radiance unseen before. That old Highland shepherd who first saw a heather bell under the microscope sobbingly cried, "God forgive me for crushing so many of them under my rude foot!" He too had a vision and heard a voice. The greatest thing about it is that across all the centuries God speaks to men of every age in terms they can understand if they will keep their souls eyes and ears open.

THE CONTENT OF THE CALL.

It was to the aged man that the vision came. The spirit was invading an unexpected field. It was the open mind that observed its coming. Who would have thought, years ago, that the Church would concern itself with war and peace among the nations of earth? That the hour of labor held anything religious? That the factory child and the faith of Christians are inseparably linked? Eyes as clear as those of Moses have seen God in the unexpected place and have heard His voice as clearly as did he. What was the call? To reverence. To bow before God in these unexpected places and to hear the great word, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto Me." For man grows only as he enlarges the range of that which he regards as worthy of reverence. Star or stone may bring a new theophany—each waits the eye that sees. But beyond reverence lieth work. That new sense of God must be translated into practice. Sunday begins the week; it is not a separate day. Slaves in Egypt suffered and were in need of guidance. "Kindle your torch at the flaming bush and light them to new liberties." The vision that spends itself in the thrill of seeing is never that of the follower of Christ who saw a world in sin and plunged to the cross. Reverence and responsibility are twin children of the Almighty.

THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE CALL.

"Go back where you failed," was God's order, but its fulfillment waited on Moses' word. He could have refused and he did hesitate. He knew Egypt. He had tasted to the full the power of its mighty empire and understood perhaps better than any other man how difficult was the task of releasing her slaves. This represents in all liklihood a much longer period than the summary of it indicates. It is the meditation of a mind through weeks of thinking shortened into the intensity of the hour of decision. "Who am I to do so great a task?" Reassured here he wondered how Israel might be convinced, for he had failed utterly with them before and they were more servile now than then. He must renew their faith in God living. Jehovah assured him of this. Then a comrade is promised in Aaron, who was even now in the wilderness seeking him. Under the compelling urge of God he chose to go and all the world has been different ever since. And all the world changes when we obey God's summons to our own journey into our Egypt.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Crane, of Clarksburg, West Va., were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. Yutzy last week.

The mines of this place are running full time and have room for additional miners.

Mr. Howard Phares, one of our energetic clerks for the Stanley Supply Company, had important business in Wheeling, West Va., over the fourth of July. The nature of his business call has not been made known.

All of the dwelling houses in this village are occupiied and the Stanley Coal Company is now building sixteen additional houses. Four of the number are now completed.

Quite a number of our people attended the Camp Meeting at Mt. Lake Park on Sunday. Our superintendent Charles Ream did a lot of complaining on Monday. He thinks it was too much cake or some of the other good eats he devoured on the grounds on Sunday.

Do These Incomes Attract You?

NOT long ago there was published in a trade paper a table in which the salaries of office workers generally were given. In addition to stenographic and bookkeeping positions, it listed the higher executive positions to which thousands of stenographers and bookkeepers have advanced.

Stenographers (starting salaries)	$60 to $125 per month
Stenographers (in two years)	$75 to $150 per month
Bookkeepers (starting salaries)	$75 to $125 per month
Bookkeepers (in two years)	$90 to $150 per month
Accountants	$150 to $5,000 per month
Certified Public Accountants	$400 to $10000 per month
Purchasing Agents	$200 to $600 per month
Advertising Agents	$200 to $400 per month
Salesmen	$150 to $1000 per month
Sales Managers	$200 to $1500 per month
General Managers	$500 to no limit per month

There are average salaries paid to office workers. The range is wide because conditions, of different sections of the country, and ability, vary. No attempt is made to estimate the incomes of those who become the heads of the business, and many do.

Doesn't this conclusively answer the question: Will it pay you to take a Business Course?

INVESTIGATING PRIMARIES

The biennial primaries are bringing the usual crop of stories of the lavish expenditure of money by candidates in the various States, and there is now on another senatorial invertigation in which doubtless some politics will be played and the entire primary system will get another good airing.

In the meantime, the sentiment is said to be growing at Washington that the primary scheme ought to be abolished as a useless and expensive bit of machinery whose principal positive accomplishment has been the production of factionlism and charges of corruption.

Those who favor a return to the old representative convention system say that the primary has not as a general thing brought better men to office, but, on the other hand, has discouraged many able men from running. In its direct appeal to the people and the opportunity in many states for the success of minority candidates, it has encouraged demagoguery and the "showman" type of politician, who counts on getting by in the primary by the spectacular, rather than thru any merit or ability to hold the office to which he aspires.

That this sentiment for abolishing or modifying the primary is not confined to Washington, but is spreading thru the States, is indicated by the example of Indiana, where the Republican and Democratic State conventions both have gone on record for the abolishment of the State-wide primary.

OWNING YOUR OWN HOME.

Ever since the advent of the automobile the humorists in the news papers and periodicals have been coining jokes about how the people who have homes do not stay in them any more. And the great boom in apartment houses in the larger cities has added to tne belief that the individual home is becoming passe.

Doubtless this condition has been exaggerated, but if it is true that the people as a whole do not care so much about their homes as they used, there is more reason than ever to encourage the "own your own home movement." Every enterprising city likes to pride itself on the fact that it is a city of homeowners, whether it really does enjoy that distinction or not. And there is reason for this.

As a general thing the homeowner is a pretty good citizen. And he is more apt to stay in his home than the fellow who only rents parking space in an apartment. This is not saying that the apartment is undesirable. It doubtless fills a necessary place in our city life, but the individual home is still the ideal to be strived for.

The homeowner is not apt to become a bolshevist. He feels that he has a little property right in his own city and country and if he is ambitious, as most homeowners are, he wants to increase that property right. He is a taxpayer. He is interested in the improvements in his home city and is very apt to be a very useful citizen in general. Of course the man who rents may be just as good and useful a citizen as the man who owns his home, but this is not gainsaying the fact that the homeowner has it on the renter in more ways than one.

A city or town therefore cannot do itself or its citizenry any greater good than in encouraging in every way it can the "own your own home" movement. It will not do to say that people do not stay in their homes after they have acquired one, because this is not true. The latest inventions of science, including the radio, to say nothing of the electrical conveniences of which every housewife knows the value, have checked the "away from home" movement, and it is quite possible that there will be a general movement in the other direction, namely—back home.

Why not do what we can therefore, through our banks and our civic organizations, to encourage this home ownership idea? Some would-be homeowners are deterred by lack of proper financing, a condition which can usually be remedied. And there are others who are waiting for the cost of building material and labor to come down. But we are not going back to the pre-war standard of prices very soon, and building costs are more apt to go up than to come down. Therefore the time to begin to own your own home is now. And the enterpising city and town will see that this idea is encouraged in every legitimate way.

FARM COSTS AND STANDARDS.

There is no doubt that American farmers in general are having a hard time. But there is a good deal of misunderstanding about the situation, even among the farmers themselves. It is not that they make less money than they used to, but that they are obliged to spend more.

Crops and prices, on the whole, appear to compare well enough with the average of the past decade or two, excepting the actual war years, when prices soared beyond reasonable limits. But costs of production and costs of living are higher now. It costs more to run the farm, because labor and machinery and materials are higher. Operating expenses are the big trouble, and the abnormal thing. Then there is a similar difficulty, as Roger Babson points out, in the personal side of farming.

"The farmer's wife and children will not, themselves, work as they did before the war. They require better homes, more conveniences, newer clothes, and many other things about which they knew nothing before."

In short, the farmers' difficulty seems to be about half economic pressure in the form of higher business expenses and about half personal and family pressure in the form of higher standards of living. For neither of which is the farmer at all to blame.

Certainly city folks should be the last to find fault with him for trying to lend new comfort and dignity to farm life. But there remains the baffling question, how is he going to be able to afford, along with his rural freedom, the comforts, conveniences and advantages that cit yfolks think they have a sort of divine right to?

Either he must get more for what he sells, or pay less for what he buys, or both. And that, next to prohibition possibly is the biggest political problem in this country today.

400,000 MILES OF HIGHWAY IN THE UNITED STATES

A Tourist Traveling Thirty Miles An Hour Could Cover Them in Three Years.

Driving twelve hours a day at the average speed of thirty miles an hour, an automobilist could cover the tourable highways of the United States and near-by Canada in three years and sixteen days. This estimate is based on the 400,000 miles of highway catalogued in a current automobile guide book. Yet when the "horseless carriages" first appeared thirty years ago it was a problem to find roads on which they could run.

"We are riding up the crest of the third renaissance of American road building," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "Mound builders, the mysterious vanished tribe in the Mississippi valley, had the first roads that were built in North America.

Good Roads Versus Historic Roads

"The second high point in highway construction was the rise of trucking roads to serve the nation expanding westward. Of these the best example is the Lancaster to Philadelphia Valley Pike, now incorporated into the Lincoln highway. Begun in 1792 the stock-subscription Lascaster Pike with its nine toll gates, was the first stone-surfaced highway in America. The impetus it gave to road building faded after 1830 in the face of the advancing steel of railroads. Road building slumped for 75 years until the automobile brought in the most notable era of turnpike construction ever seen in any nation in all time.

"A slightly different version of road evolution was given by a backwoods Kentuckian when asked who built the roads in his State. 'The buffler, the Ingin and the ingineer,' he replied. If the question is location of American roads, his answer, except for pronunciation, stands correct for most of the United States.

"The increasing interest Americans are giving to the things which have come down to us from our young past, colonial houses, colonial furniture and Indian relics, has not yet spread to roads. They remain to America with less loss than any other type of treasure from the past. But the tourist is still more interested in a good road than an historic road.

"Though the traveler may ignore them, the ghosts of the 'buffler, the Ingin' and the pioneer crowd turnpikes like the National Old Trail. Where is crosses the pass from Cumberland, Md., over the watershed to Uniontown, Pa., the buffalo herd first plowed a path to grazing valleys in Virginia. The Indian found it a good route for hunting and was so when the first English penetrated the West they called it Nemacolin's Path, giving it the name of a famous Delaware Indian chief. Braddock sought it out when he hacked a road toward Fort Duquense (Pittsburgh). Some say the fame for Braddock's road ought to swallow the infamy for Braddock's defeat. Not for 25 years did another wheeled vehicle push over the road hewed for the wagon trains of the English and Colonial armies. Braddock's road became the National Road, financed by Congress that the Conestoga wagons going west might have easier going. Then came the early railroad. And now smooth macadam.

When "Travel" was "Travail."

"It is difficult to find a person who does not 'just love to travel.' The forefathers spelled it 'travail.' The vast difference between journeys then and now made necessary a new definition, and the new definition, a new spelling.

"Any passenger on the back seat who grumbles at the bumps finds one to chide at his discomfort in Captain Basil Hall, an English traveler, in America about 1827: 'Horrible corduroy roads again made their appearance in a more formidable shape,' he wrote of a journey.

Mrs. Frank Brobst and little son, of Swanton, in Oakland last Saturday, visited The Republican office.

With probably a hundred persons on the pay roll the pea cannery of the Mount Airy Canning Company, located at Loch Lynn Heights, begun perations on Thursday of last week. With the exception of part of one day, when a rain storm of more than ordinary severity struck the community, the factory has been running from ten to eighteen hours every day. It is said that the yield is exceptionally good this year and a record-breaking pack is anticipated by the management.

Eleven years ago there were less than 1,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States, valued at less than $100,000,000. Today there are more than 20,000,000, representing a total investment of over $16,500,000,000. More than 4,000,000 were manufactured last year. More than 7,494,000,000 gallons of gasoline were consumed last year in the operations of motor vehicles. In 1924 more than 4,200,000 motor vehicles were in use in towns of less than 1,000 inhabitants and on the farms. The motor vehicle industry has made suburban homes multiply, and has increased the value of suburban property by billions of dollars.

GRANTSVILLE

Messrs. Morry, Morry and Morrison of McKeesport, Pa., have recently purchased the property known as the Keyser Ridge Cheese factory, at Keyser's Ridge, Md. The company has installed new equipment for a creamery and will assume the name of the Keyser Ridge Creamery, and will be open for business July 15.

The farmers of the surrounding community will be visited by the managers, and it is to be hoped the new project will be a benefit to all who are interested.

The Lutheran Missionary Society was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. H. P. Miller, Stone House farm, on Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected for the year: President, Mrs. J. J. Bender; vice-president, Mrs. Stewart Rodamer; secretary, Mrs. G. W. Diefenbach; treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Deihl; assistant treasurer, Mrs. C. S. Zeller; life membership secretary, Mrs. C. U. Edwards; thank offering secretary, Mrs. Wm. Baker; song book secretaries, Mrs. John Zehner and Mrs. Richard Younkin; historian, Mrs. C. S. Zeller; Mrs. Harold Miller, organist, and Mrs. G. W. Diefenbach, assistant.

A large attendance was present and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Refreshments were served. The meeting will be held in the evenings during the summer.

A very interesting meeting of the Woman's Community Club was held at the high school Wednesday afternoon. The refinishing of old furniture was demonstrated by Miss Lola Belle Green.

The August meeting will be devoted to jelly making and preserving. The standard jelly containers can be purchased from A. C. Stanton. The containers are required for fair exhibits.

Clean-up day at the school grounds last week was well attended, but because of the lack of trucks for hauling the amount of work expected to have been accomplished was not completed, although the work done adds much to the appearance of the grounds.

Another day will be announced before school opens, at which time it is hoped more help will report and the work be completed. Several ladies of the Parent-Teacher Association served lunch, the food being donated by the merchants of the town.

At the meeting of the Junior Studio Club, on Tuesday evening, July 6, the study of musical theory was started, with Clyde Bender as leader for the evening. The members all took part in the scale and speech drills; Lee Roy Shumaker read an English actor's advice to young readers; Mabel Younkin sang "The Vow," by Bohm, and Helen Folk gave Jerome's description of "Uncle Podger Hanging a Picture."

Word was received by friends of Mrs. Harry Ambell, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., of the sudden death of her husband, Harry P. Ambell, Thursday noon. Funeral was held Saturday at 3 p. m. in Pittsburgh. Mr. Ambell spent several years in Grantsville, and since has visited every year. He is well known here as Mrs. Ambell was a former Grantsville girl. Their many friends were shocked to hear of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Morrison, of Ohio, the former being one of the managers of the Keyser Ridge Creamery, will reside in Mr. and Mrs. Fay Miller's home this summer.

Mrs. Nettie Sampson and daughter Louise, and Miss Sally Sampson, of Monongahela, Pa., will be guests at the Casselman Hotel here for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. James S. Crawl and family, of Monongahela, Pa., will occupy F. B. Thomas' cottage near Casselman dam during the month of July.

Mrs. John W. Folk and daughter Mrs. Harry Bender, and Miss Esther Zehner have returned from a two-weeks' visit with relatives in Philadelphia, Pa., and Atlantic City.

Miss Harriet Stanton, student nurse at the James Walker Memorial Hospital, Wilmington, N. C., arrived to remain three weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Stanton.

Miss Alzene Groshon, of Piedmont, W. Va., is here on a visit to her aunt, Mrs. J. J. Bender.

Mrs. J. A. Beachy has returned to her home near town from a two weeks' visit with relatives in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Akron, Ohio.

A new principle in motor lubrication

Engineers solve an old problem with a new and different "STANDARD" MOTOR OIL

THE Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) has developed an oil which embodies an entirely new principle in motor lubrication.

"Standard" Motor Oil eliminates the possibility of dry spots on the cylinder walls—a failing which has always been present in even the best of the old type oils.

This irregular or spotty lubrication has baffled engineers ever since the perfection of the internal combustion engine. With many other motor oils, if the motor stands idle for a day or a week, there occurs the possibility of dry spots or a film too thin for complete protection. Even when the motor is running there are often areas where there is no fluid film of oil whatever. Then there occurs that grinding of metal on metal which results in scoring of the cylinder walls.

Because there is little or no seal between the piston and cylinder walls, gasoline is forced through into the crank case oil. Dilution results, with a consequent lessening of the lubricating value of the oil.

When this absence of a complete piston seal persists, there is resultant lack of power—the car doesn't climb hills well; it misbehaves at low speeds in high gear; the motor heats up; heavy deposits of carbon are formed; gasoline and oil consumption increases. The best of the old type oils could not correct this condition.

An oilier oil that will "stay put"

The problem was to find an oil that would cling to metal surfaces so thoroughly so as to abolish the areas of partial lubrication. It must not be an oil of too heavy a grade. It must be, in fact, an oil of greater oiliness. And that is exactly what "Standard" Motor Oil is.

New "Standard" Motor Oil of same weight and consistency possesses greater "factor of oiliness." It "stays put." Note larger, oilier drops.

For more than three years the Standard Oil chemists and engineers experimented with this new "Standard" Motor Oil which, if successful, would mean more to the motorist than any recent advance in the automotive industry.

The first tests proved that "Standard" Motor Oil would withstand a far heavier load before breaking down than any of the leading oils of the old type. This showed its lubricating superiority.

Power tests came next. It was found that the lower friction losses and the better piston seal caused a gain of 3% to 5% in power when motors were lubricated with "Standard" Motor Oil. In cases where motors were in poor condition, the increase in power often ran up to 10%.

Road tests on scores of cars showed startling improvements in hill-climbing ability when cars were lubricated with "Standard" Motor Oil. They showed gains in gasoline miles-per-gallon from 5% to 20%, depending upon the make and condition of the car.

Amazing results can be verified with your own car

It was found that motors ran cooler, there was less crank-case dilution, and carburetors could be adjusted for leaner mixtures.

These tests have covered more than three years' time and some of the results have run quite beyond the original expectations.

It may seem almost incredible that a lubricating oil can produce such improvements in car operation. But trying is believing, and many motorists report that they can actually "feel the difference" while driving. "Standard" Motor Oil is on sale now at "Standard" Service Stations and at dealers, in Medium, Heavy and Heavy X grades.

A Quarter a Quart

7 Advantages
found only in "Standard" Motor Oil

1 Constant lubrication-film on metal surfaces.
2 Frictionless operation, in a practical sense, even upon starting after idleness.
3 Less "breaking down" under load or at high speeds.
4 More miles per quart of oil and less crank case dilution.
6 Negligible carbon, clean motor and clean spark plugs.

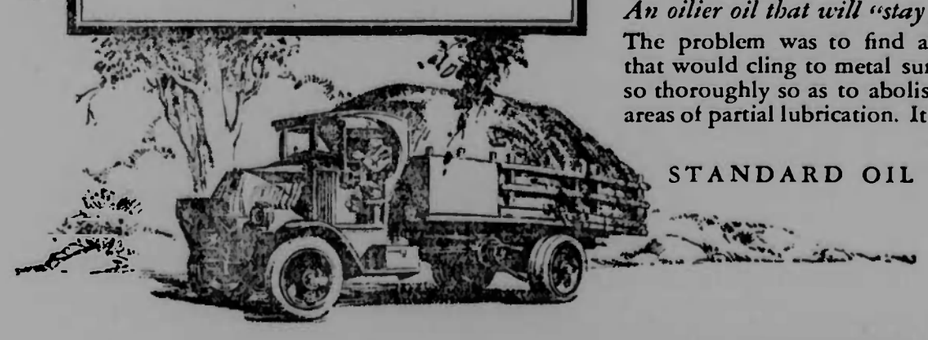
ROAD TESTS

Ford

In a 609-mile road test on a Ford run from Sept. 24 to Oct. 22, 1925, the new "Standard" Motor Oil showed a substantial decrease in both oil and gas consumption.

12.8% increase in oil mileage
12.3% increase in gas mileage

And the driver could actually feel a difference in the operation of his car – improved pulling, snappier pickup, elimination of the drag which the motor had previously shown on hills and the removal of the carbon which had been in the motor when the new oil was put in.



Mack

Tested on the road from Sept. 24 to Oct. 22, 1925, for 3,779 miles in a big AC Mack Truck, the new "Standard" Motor Oil showed splendid results:

19.5% increase in oil mileage
20.9% increase in gas mileage
Less friction
Cooler motor
Increased power
Less motor drag

Other Mack motors tested for carbon deposit demonstrated that the new "Standard" Motor Oil removed existing carbon and deposited none itself.

See future advertisements for data on tests with other makes of cars and trucks

CARBON

Remarkable demonstration when you drain out your oil

In addition to its other virtues, this new "Standard" Motor Oil is extremely effective in cleaning cylinder walls, piston heads and even spark plugs. Its black color after the first filling has been drawn off shows that it removes existing carbon. Drive 300 miles with the new oil—then drain your crank case. Having dislodged this objectionable material you will want to get rid of it.

Second filling procedure

Having filled up the second time with "Standard" Motor Oil it is unnecessary to refill oftener than every 500 miles or at your usual draining intervals. Needless to say, after the second filling, little or no carbon will form. If any deposit is made it can be easily removed.

SOUTH BRANCH OF POTOMAC WAS SCENE OF SOME TERRIFIC BATTLES BETWEEN INDIANS AND SETTLERS

Although American history is rich in war stories between the Indians and Western settlers, but comparatively little is known of the contact of the forefathers of the East and the many battles fought with the Redmen in this part of the country. There is a reason. When the whites pushed beyond the Blue Ridge and into the Allegheny country, Indian warfare was so constant, the Indians were so heartily disliked and their customs so well known that there were few who thought it worthwhile to write contemporaneous accounts of the conflicts of the day.

The age is indebted to the foresight of Samuel Kercheval in writing his History of the Shenandoah Valley, which is in fact a history of the settlement period of the great Virginia Valley and much of the Allegheny country. His work is looked upon today as source information and so far as this part of the country is concerned stands in a class by itself.

So popular has been the work of Mr. Kercheval that the fourth edition is now being printed by the Shenandoah Publishing House of Strasburg, Va., near which place Mr. Kercheval is buried.

The following is an account of the "Battle of the Trough" which took place the year 1756 near Romney and Moorefield as recorded by Kercheval:

Indians Made Attack

"The memorable battle of The Trough (says Dr. Turley) was preceded by the following circumstances. On the day previous, two Indian strollers from a large party of sixty or seventy warriors, under the well known and ferocious chief, Kill-buck, made an attack upon the South Fork of the South Branch on a dwelling of a Mrs. Brake, on the Potomac, about fifteen miles above Moorefield, and took Mrs. Brake and a Mrs. Neff prisoners. The former not being able to travel from her situation, was tomahawked and scalped, and the latter brought down to the vicinity of Town Fort, about one and a half miles below Moorefield. There, one of the Indians, under the pretense of hunting, retired, and the other laid himself down and pretended to fall asleep, with a view, as was believed, to let Mrs. Neff escape to the fort and give the alarm. Everything turned out agreeable to their expectations for as soon as she reached the fort, and related the circumstances of her escape, eighteen men from that and Buttermilk Fort, five miles above went in pursuit. They were men notorious for their valor and had been well tried on many such occasions.

Found On Mountains

"As soon as they came to the place indicated by Mrs. Neff, they found a plain trace left by the Indians, by occasionally breaking a bush. Mr. John Harness, who was well acquainted with the manners and modes of warefare of the Indians, pronounced that the hunter Indian had not returned to his comrade, or that they were in great force somewhere near and in ambush. They however, pursued the trail, without discovering any signs of the larger party, until they arrived, between two mountains, forming what from its resemblance is called The Trough. Here, directly above a fine spring, about two hundred paces from the river, which at that time was filled to an impassable stage by a heavy fall of rain, these grim monsters of blood were encamped, to the number above stated. The western face of the ridge was very precipitous and rough, and on the north of the spring was a deep ravine, cutting directly up into the ridge above. Our little band of heroes, nothing daunted by the superior number of the enemy, dismounted unobserved, and prepared for battle leaving their horses on the ridge. But by one of those unforseen and unaccountable accidents which often thwart the seemingly best planned enterprises, a small dog which had followed them, just at this juncture started a rabbit, and went yelping down the ridge, giving the Indians timely notice of their approach. They immediately flew to arms, and filing off up the ravine before described, passed directly into the rear of our little band, placing them in the situation they had planned find their enemies, between the mountain and the swollen river. Now came the 'tug of war' and both parties rushed to the onset, dealing death and slaughter at ever fire. After an hour or two of hard fighting, during which each of our little band had numbered his man, and more than half their number had fallen to rise no more, those that remained were compelled to retreat, which could only be effected by swimming the river. Some who had been wounded, not being able to do this, determined to sell their lives as dearly as possible, and deliberately loading their rifles, and placing themselves behind some cover on the river bank, dealt certain death to the first adversary who made his appearance, and then calmly yielded to the tomahawk.

Worst of All

"The Indian Chief, Kill-buck, afterwards admitted that, although he had witnessed many sanguinary contests, this was the bloodiest he had ever experienced for the number of his enemies. Kill-buck was a Shawnee, a savage of strong mental powers, and well acquainted with all the families of the settlement before the war broke out. Col. Vincent Williams, whose father was unhumanly murdered by Kill-buck and his party on Patterson's Creek, became personally acquainted with him many years afterwards, and took the trouble, when once in the state of Ohio to visit him. He was far advanced in years, and had become blind. The Colonel informed me that as soon as he told Kill-buck his name the only answer he made was, 'your father was a brave warrior.' The half brother of Col. Williams, Benjamine Casey, was with him. Peter Casey had once hired Kill-buck to catch and bring home a runaway negro, and was to have given him fourteen shillings. He paid him six shillings, and the war breaking out, he never paid the other eight. At the visit spoken of, Kill-buck inquired the name of the other visitor, and when the Colonel told him it was Benjamine Casey—What, Peter Casey's son?' 'yes'. 'Your father owes me eight shillings; will you pay it?' said the old chief. The Colonel at that time got all the particulars of the tragic death of his father, as well as the great heroism manifested by our little hand at the battle of the Trough."

Where the Grand Canyon Is Grandest

U. S. Senator Cameron

Just Room for the Derrick

World's Premier Scenic Region Suddenly Produces a New Development of the Greatest Economic Interest to the Entire Nation.

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER

THE Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, widely regarded as the world's most imposing natural wonder, has suddenly taken on a new and startling interest.

A few years ago, when it was as inaccessible as the North Pole, John Wesley Powell won fame by making the first trip through it. A little later another adventurer conceived opening a trail from the canyon's rim down to the river, a mile below. It seemed grotesque, but the impossible was accomplished, and its accomplishment has made the canyon's innermost wonders accessible to thousands of tourists each year. They come from all quarters of the world every season in greater numbers to traverse the Bright Angel Trail. That trail is truly a monument to the daring and devotion of its builder. He worked at it for ten years, almost without help or financial backing, at one period spending almost half a year alone in the vast gorge. But today Ralph Cameron, builder of the Bright Angel Trail, occupying a seat in the United States Senate voted to him by the people of Arizona, has his reward.

Greatest Artificial Lake

But the conquest of the canyon had hardly been realized when the engineers discovered a new use for it. At Boulder Canyon, Arizona, the greatest dam in the world, a third of a mile high, should impound a lake which, spreading over a great area in Arizona and Utah, would be, next to Lake Michigan, the largest fresh water body entirely within the United States. Harnessed to mighty turbines, the water, falling hundreds of feet, would produce a power greater than Niagara, and irrigate an area several times that of the Nile Basin, which served for uncounted centuries as granary of the ancient world.

The Boulder Canyon dam has not yet been built, but the people of the Southwest are as confident of its construction as that the Colorado will continue to flow between its giant walls.

Now comes a new chapter in the romance of the Colorado. The intrepid "wildcatters" of the oil industry, scouting for new sources of petroleum, have brought in an oil well right in the canyon! Drilling from a narrow shelf at the gorge's bottom, they have overcome unbelievable obstacles. Perpendicular walls of rock grimly forbade construction of road or trail to transport machinery and supplies. From the river a succession of rock walls rise in gargantuan terraces to a height of 3,000 feet.

The "Great American Desert"

The little Mormon town of Moab, eighteen miles up-stream, is the nearest supply base. But Moab is not a railroad town; a drive of forty miles is still required to reach the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. Salt Lake City is 250 miles away, to the northwest.

Standing at the foot of the derrick which marks the site of the new oil well, one's back is fairly against an 800 foot cliff, which is matched by another immediately across the river. Looking up, one imagines that if he could climb one of these walls he would be "outside." But, trying this, he finds himself on a plateau or terrace, with another cliff a little way ahead. To climb this, in turn, would only bring him face to face with still another cliff, and so on till he had mounted full 3,000 feet from the river.

Not only must this succession of cliffs be mounted, but to traverse the rock terraces, gashed and torn, is only less difficult. And finally, the ascent to the outer rim accomplished, one confronts a waste of ridged, seamed and boulder-strewn desert, endless save for distant mountain peaks.

Manifestly, the oil "wildcatters" could not make roads, so they built a flat-bottomed boat and floated down from Moab. It was a daring performance, for the stream twists constantly; unseen rocks and shifting bars add to its difficulties, and the canyon's perpendicular walls threaten instant wreck.

But it was done. Materials were brought, a derrick reared, machinery placed, a camp built and drilling began. Now, with oil flowing from a depth of 2,035 feet, the Crane Creek well is suddenly the wonder of the whole intermountain country.

A Maze of Difficulties

Just about a year from the beginning of drilling the well began to flow, with every indication that when the drill goes somewhat deeper into the producing sand it will be an important producer. For the present, drilling has been suspended, awaiting provision for taking the oil away. It is doubtful if in all the history of the 600,000 wells that have been drilled in this country, largely in regions difficult of access, any one has ever presented such a category of obstacles as this canyon well in Utah. How the oil will be transported to a refinery is still sheer guess work, but a way will be found, for the ingenuity and resources of the oil engineers have never failed.

The "bringing in" of this well illustrates the difficulty of petroleum development. Convinced that the geological structure was particularly favorable, the projectors determined to gamble $75,000 on drilling. Before they got oil they had spent more than twice that.

For years wells have been drilling in various parts of the state—fully 200, in all—at a cost of probably $5,000,000, and this canyon well is the first real producer! It is only by dint of such persistence in coping with natural obstacles and financial hazards that the country's supply of oil is maintained. The first oil well in Western Pennsylvania became a producer at the depth of 69½ feet. Nowadays wells a mile deep are not uncommon, and they have gone down as far as a mile and a half.

Every Well Is a Gamble

A large proportion of wells produce nothing whatever and represent total loss. It was recently estimated that in the last twelve and a half years $1,200,000,000 was sunk in wells which were failures. Despite every effort of science, engineering and long experience, and notwithstanding the stupendous depths now reached, 25 per cent of wells last year were dry.

The "wildcatter" is the Columbus of oil. He is to petroleum, to gasoline, to the fuel supply of the country's 20,000,000 automobiles, what the old-time gold prospector was to building the empire of the far west. He is essentially a gambler; good loser or good winner. The lure of enormous winnings keeps him tirelessly searching, and sometimes he finds his reward. But in the aggregate, offsetting all winnings against the total cost of this engrossing gamble, it is not improbable that all the oil that has been taken from the soil of this country from the beginning cost more than its producers got for it.

A World in the Big Game

But their huge gamble is the basis on which the whole industry rests. The ice bound Arctic and the fever-festering tropic jungles alike attract the hardy "wildcatter." To them the world owes its newest and best in transport by land, sea and air. They help light its homes and streets, provide an astonishing share of its power, furnish an endless list of necessaries which are by-products of petroleum. The "wildcatter" is well nigh the Atlas of this modern mechanized world.

ZIHLMAN FILES CANDIDACY PAPERS FOR SIXTH TERM

Local Congressman Has Made Excellent Record During His Five Terms in the House

Congressman Frederick N. Zihlman, of Cumberland, representative of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland, which comprises Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery counties, has filed his papers for renomination to the office he now holds, the certificate of candidacy having been received at the office of the local election officials on Saturday morning.

Congressman Zihlman is now completing his fifth term in Congress and has an enviable record as Representative of the Sixth Congressional District. He is now the unofficial "Mayor of Washington," being chairman of the House Committee for the District of Columbia, which is the executive body in charge of the municipal affairs of the Capital City.

During his five terms in Congress, Congressman Zihlman has been active in the interests of labor and of the veterans of American wars and their dependents. He has been instrumental in securing compensation and additional pensions for ex-service men in large numbers and he has always found it a great pleasure to serve his constituents in every way possible.

His many friends and admirers in Western Maryland, and especially in Garrett county, will rally to his standard in greater numbers when they are called upon, there seems no doubt at this time.

Oakland Soon to Have Some Eagle Scouts.

the past two weeks several boys he local troop of Scouts have demstrated their ability to pass the requirements of the Life Saving merit badge. For some of these scouts this is the last big step in the path to the rank of Eagle Scout. These tests have been conducted at the Deer Park Hotel swimming pool by Mr. H. L. Jones, examiner in life saving for the Court of Honor and the Scoutmaster. The swimming pool instructor, a former Atlantic City life guard, complimented the boys upon the manner in which they have schooled themselves in life saving. Here are the requirements for the merit badge in life saving:

1. A Scout must have first passed the swimming merit badge test;

2. Dive properly from the surface of water at least seven feet deep and bring up an object twelve inches or more in diameter and weighing not less than ten pounds.

3. Tow a person of his own weight for ten yards by each of the following methods: Head carry, cross chest carry, hair carry, tired swimmer's cary.

4. Enter deep water clothed, remove coat, trousers and shoes and swin 100 yards.

5. Demonstrate in the water the ethods of releasing himself from people in peril of drowning if grasped by: Front strangle hold; back struggle; wrist hold.

6. Demonstrate Schaefer prone pressure method of resuscitation.

It requires twenty-one merit badges to make an Eagle Scout. In the past sixteen years only three Boy Scouts in five hundred have been able to meet the requirements of an Eagle Scout.

Mr. Fred. Kamp and son Alvin, of Friendsville, were callers at The Republican office this morning.

Alphonse Borelli, who resides in the old Collins house near the railroad crossing on the western limits of Oakland, was arrested yesterday afternoon just as he set a gallon jug of whiskey in a waiting automobile, presumed to have been parked there to receive the contraband. The driver of the car, said at the trial before Justice Gonder this morning to be David Cochran, of Wheeling, West Va., and who resides in Loch Lynn Heights, remonstrated with Constable Shartzer when he seized the whiskey. The officer cited Coehran to he at the hearing this morning, but he failed to appear. It was stated that he left for his home during the night. Borelli, in default of $500 bond, was sent to jail to be held until the grand jury aets in his case.

ALLEGED RUM RUNNERS ARRESTED IN OAKLAND

Enforcement Officers, Assisted by West Virginia State Police, Caught Men and Cars

With a squad of West Virginia State Police guarding the roads on the West Virginia side, Federal Enforcement Officers William R. Harvey, Cleveland D. Jarvis with Deputy Sheriff Casteel of Garrett county, waged a campaign on Oakland rum runners Friday night and Saturday morning making seven arrests.

Complaint was made for some time that rum runners in fast automobiles have been hauling liquor out of Garrett county into West Virginia "burning up" the roads, and endangering motorists.

The Federal officers with Deputy Casteel gave chase to Paul Tasker Friday night late, blocked the road and arrested him. The officers say Tasker threw out bottles of liquor on the road, and the officers salvaged one. He was taken before Magistrate Gonder at Oakland and held under $200 hond for transporting and possession for sale. He was also fined $10 and costs for breaking glass on a highway.

The officers ran down another car at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning, arresting the four occupants, who gave their names as William Ray, John Britton, and Arley Britton. They were hauling a keg of moonshine on the Oakland-Thomas, W. Va., road. All were held under $200 bond each by Magistrate Gonder for the Garrett County Grand Jury. Ray broke a quart bottle on the road, the officers testified, and he was fined $10 and costs on two State traffic violations. The touring car was confiscated.

The federal officers revisited the home of Floyd Williams, on the Maryland side, opposite Bayard, W. Va., and found a brewing plant and seized a number of cases of homebrew. He was raided a few days ago on the same charge. Williams was taken to Cumberland for a hearing.

Perry Dennis, charged with operating a beer making plant near Bayard, and who has been "hiding out" at nights, Officer Harvey said, and evading arrest, was caught Saturday at his home where he had returned and gone to bed. This is his second offense, he having served sixty days, recently the records show, on a manufactuing charge. He was taken to Cumberland for a hearing. Deputy Sheriff Casteel who accompanied the officers has been active in making liquor violation arrests under the county law. He is a candidate for Sheriff this term.

At or near Gorman, Garrett county, Monday the Federal Agents raided G. J. Lee's farm and confiscated three barrels of mash, one gallon of whiskey and a twenty-five gallon capacity still. It is said that Lee has been operating for more than four years. He was taken before Magistrate M. G. Williams at Gorman and held under $500 bond for the action of the Garrett County grand jury.

GARRETT COUNTY FAIR A GREAT BENEFIT TO FARMER

Is the Expressed Opinion of Mr. G. A. Fraley, Cashier Garrett National Bank of Oakland

MR. G. A. FRALEY,
Cashier Garrett National Bank of Oakland.

The annual Garrett County Fair unquestionably has resulted in great benefit to the farmers of the county, and it should be the honest desire of every farmer to do his part to make it a complete success in every department.

It is important that every professionl man keep in close touch with the progress and advancement of his profession and the Fair affords the farmer the opportunity to learn and observe what Garrett county is capable of producing and its possibilities in an agricultural way. The Fair, through its exhibits, has been of great value in acquainting all of us with the fact that this is an ideal farming community, and every farmer is given the means to display to others the results of his or her particular work.

Farming is the principal occupation of the citizens of this county and their success is attested by the steady growth of its financial institutions, and as the success of the farmer, it is the duty of all to boost any institution that will in any way assist our farmers.

Garrett county should be second to none in this State, and I know of no better way for its people to advance the county and advertise it than to get behind the Fair and its officials and make it bigger and better every year.

G. A. FRALEY.

Limited Divorce Asked

Mrs. Rose McGraw DeBerriz, formerly of Grafton, West Va., and now residing at Deer Park, has sued for a limited divorce from her husband, Felipe T. DeBerriz. They were married at Oakland, August 27, 1919, and separated May 21, 1925. She alleges that her husband, a suhject of Spain, has never contributed to her support but has been supported by her, and took title to property in Washington which she bought and for which he conducted negotiations. She alleges further, that during her absence from the city her husband broke a window and entered the house, carrying off valuable household effects belonging to her.

Third Fire This Afternoon.

Considerable uneasiness was felt by residents of Oakland at 4:30 o'clock Sunday morning when they were aroused by the persistent blowing of the fire whistle. A few minutes after the first blast the fire was located by those who responded as being in an old unused outbuilding on B. & O. property at the foot of Fourth street. Tuesday morning smoke was seen to issue from beneath the Offutt building facing Railroad street and until recently occupied as a shoe shine stand. The smouldering embers, kindled presumably from a flying spark emitted by a locomotive, were put out hy the use of a hand chemieal equipment.

This afternoon just before The Republican went to press, the siren blew again for a fire in the Chance Gower residence on Third street and on the North end of the bridge crossing the B. & O. tracks. When the volunteer department reached the residenee it was found that a window curtain had blown over a gas flame in the kitcheen range which ignited it and eoused the alarm to be sent it. Little damage was done.

HAIL AND WIND STORM LEVELS GROWING CROPS

Breaks Many Hundreds of Windows, Smashes Through Roofs —Loss Estimated at $75,000

Striking first at or near the hamlet of Bruceton, in Preston county, West Va., about five miles west of the Garrett county boundary, a terrific wind and hail storm, traveling eastward across the central portion of the county Sunday afternoon between five and six o'clock, left in its wake over an area a mile and a half wide utter desolation and complete destruction of growing crops, timber and buildings, entailing a loss to Garrett county farmers alone conservatively estimated at $75,000.

In its sweep across the country, roofs on harns, homes and other buildings were either swept entirely off or so riddled by the hail stones that they afforded no protection whatever against the elements. The bark on oak trees and other timber was so terrifically hammered by the hail that great pieces were stripped off and sent flying through the air. On the west side of buildings marks of the pelting hail were left which resemble hammer marks and where composition shingles were used in construction the surface was chipped off as though done by a hatchet or axe. In many homes both in the country and in towns not a window pane was left whole.

The greatest damage to crops in this county was in the community surroundings Hoyes and Accident and at Bittinger.

At Hoyes many farmers stated on Monday after they had inspected their fields, that they would not have sufficient grain or forage to winter their horses. This condition also holds good in the Flatwoods and Accident sections of the county where the grain and corn fields are barren.

The entire scope of country in the region visited by the storm, which was of about five minutes' duration, is desolate. While some farmers had completed the harvest of their wheat, others were just preparing to do so. The unharvested wheat fields are a total loss insofar as the grain is eoncerneed, while the corn fields, from which good crops were promised, there remains nothing but a few stalks, barren of blades, and cut down to within a few inches of the surface of the earth. This condition is general throughout the area visited.

In the town of Accident few homes escaped damage. Here a number of roofs were cut to pieces by the hail stones, several of which were measured, the tape showing a circumference of nine inches. They were not round, as would be generally supposed but resembled spawls of ice hacked from blocks with keen edges and oblong in shape. Nearly every window on the western exposure of buildings were broken. At the German Lutheran church the glass is practically all out. The same condition exists at the English Luthern church and parsonage. In the high school building seventy-two panes in the windows on the western front of the structure were broken. Private homes in all parts of the town suffered equally as much as the buildings above enumerated.

Individual losses in crops cannot be estimated. Some of those hardest hit were John Haenftling, Blaine Wilburn, J. Arthur DeWitt, Benj. Keller, Walter Haenftling, in the Hoyes and Flatwoods section. Wm. Frazee, of near Hoyes, was also a heavy loser. Early in the winter he suffered a fracture of his hip and was confined to his bed for several months. Just as he had about recovered his barn, horses and other live stock were destroyed by fire. The storm of Sunday completely ruined his growing crops and damaged his dwelling so that it is well-nigh uninhabitable until repairs can be made.

Following the storm men were put to work on damaged roofs and in replacing broken windows. Before noon Monday all the stocks of various merchants in Oakland in roofing and glass were exhausted, so great was the demand.

Automobiles caught on the road by the storm were in many cases badly damaged. One car, owned by a Kingwood (W. Va.) attorney, who was overtaken on the road near Accident, had fourteen punctures in the roof, lenses knocked from the lamps and the windshield broken into bits. In addition the hood and fenders of the car were badly damaged.

Our passover also hath been sacrificed, even Christ.—1 Corinthinas 5:7.

THE PREPARATION.

Whatever hour the clock strikes has been preceded by the slow turning of hidden wheels until the sudden release startles the hearer into consciousness of passing time. It is true in history also. No event is isolated. It has come out of the accumulated pressure of slowly stored forces that some trivial event, mayhap, has released. No one imagines that a murder, even of Prince, was responsible for the tragedies of the World War. Years of suspicion, of secret compacts, of slumbering hatreds burst thru the smoke of that old pistol and embroiled a world. The same thing is true of any social movement. It was true in Egypt in that long-ago day. Moses came with his heart a thrill from its new contact with Jehovah to a sodden mass of slaves. They had no initiative and no hope. He called together their elders so far as the work conditions permitted and shared his experience until they, too, heard the voice and saw the flaming vision. These then became the heart of an organization that presently was all inclusive. They presented their claims to Pharaoh. One surprising thing is that with all his arbitrariness and absolute power there was easy access even for slaves to make their plea. It was paternalism but there were no closed doors to a man to man discussion. That runs all thru the story for Moses seems to have had as much liberty to enter the palace as the monarch himself. Of course there was refusal and increased tasks but there was also the continuance of the organization which held together under the heavier pressure. Education continued, agitation kept the issue in the minds of all, until the day of actual achievement crowned the skilled tactics of Moses and the nation had a birth that is part of world history. From slaves to citizens is a long journey as America well knows but that this son of the race was able to win a chance for his people and to win their awakening to embrace it marks him as one of the world's great.

THE LARGER ACCOMPLISHMENT

Moses found Egypt accepting the work of a whole race as its right and riding to prosperity upon their labor. He claimed that they had the right for leisure enough to worship their own God. It was fundamental but it involved mighty changes in the social situation. Yet he brought Egypt to accept his interpretation of events and to hurry the Hebrews out of the land. The story of the struggle is an epic. It holds one disaster after another all of which are native to the Nile. Floods sweeping down the decaying vegetable matters discolor the waters until they are too foul for use. The receding waves leave the muddy ooze to breed frogs, dying they give birth to flies, lice and disease that spreads from beasts to men. Hail and thunder swept the grain ready for harvest, locusts invaded the green acres and left them desolate. Sand storms brought darkness that could be felt and all nature seemed leagued against the fortunes of Egypt. Moses kept one idea at the fore thru them all; these are the punishments for your treatment of the Hebrews. "Prosperity is linked with your moral relationships," was his contention and it finally carried the majority into accord. The practice of brotherhood as the sole solution of social ills ultimately got its hearing. It has repeated itself in every age. Slowly the moral issues of slavery in our own land became the possession of the majority and they determined that brotherhood should rule instead of class and the emancipation declaration followed. Slowly the majority beecame convinced of the moral wrong of the saloon and wrote that conviction into the law, determined that brotherhood should supercede the exploitation of privilege. War will disappear in the same fashion as will other crimes against the spirit of good-will.

THE CULMINATION

Moses was as astute as any modern who keeps his ear to the ground. He sensed the approaching end and caught God's direction thru his intimate relations with the Almighty. There was to he a last night in the great drama of national deliverance. There was to be the family feast. The slain lamh had heen long familiar but it should now have a new significance. It harked hack to God's earliest institution and made that the nucleus of the nation. And what the family is now determines what the nation shall be—Godless homes mean a Godless state. The mark of blood was placed upon every sheltering house and the grim determination to hold it for Jehovah was written upon its entrance. Within was the sandalled group with packs ready for departure. There was no question in the mind of any that the day of deliverance had come. It was a wonderful religious demonstration. And God was the sharer of it. He took the old covenant of the threshold with the family that flung its sign of blood to the eyes of all and crossed the door (still), shared the family salt, and held that hallowed portal fast against the destroyer so that he might not enter. It was a high hour of covenanting together; God should have the house, God would keep its inhabitants. And the home today that marks its house as God's own so that the world knows it may be sure of the unseen Presence in its heart. There is needed a birth of blood-red loyalty on the part of our homes to the God Who alone can guarantee their life.

THE MEMORIAL

It was to be kept thru all generations and it is still the high day among the Hebrews. It is continued among the Christians in the Lord's Supper and in the Mass. With whatever reservation one may observe it the scenes in Chicago of hundreds of thousands crowding every available space to share such a service emphasises anew the presence of our Lord in the thought of men. Its inauguration has made an indelible mark upon the people of the world. And the world is not in the habit of commemorating nothing. Washington's shaft proclaims a living man. The Passover declares a caring God. And such memorials are necessary to keep alive the truths that experience has wrested from the unknown days of the past Porr indeed is the man or the land that keeps no day holy in memory of some emancipation and both are rich in proportion to the holy spaces occupied in their life and shared with the God of both.

"DO THE OTHER FELLOW LEST HE FIRST DOES YOU."

By F. F. CORLISS.

"Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow ye die." The majority of people who have passed their fiftieth birthday have this quotation pasted on the sweatbands of their hats where it can constantly impress the brain during their daily activities.

These slogans rule their conduct, guide their lives until there comes a time when they have learned better and gained wisdom and understanding by life's hard knocks.

"I thought you were an optimist, Sam."

"I am most decidedly, but in a large way that covers long periods of time and has to do with ultimate results. You see, Doc, nature is ever pogressive. Civilization is the filling out of nature's design—following the pattern. Humanity carries out nature's intent, progressively, but at first in an imperfect and materialistic manner, for it may be a dozen centuries, more or less. Then there is a relapse; retrogression sets in, due to human greed, selfishness, licentiousness and all the minor dissipations.

"So a civilization once refined and cultured that had achieved great things in the arts and sciences is suddenly thrown back in barbarism by the strength of overpowering numbers of the ignorant masses. Thus history of men repeats itself until through suffering and adversity he gains wisdom and understanding.

"Now, Doc, I am not trying to preach for any sect or dogmatic theology, but whenever society loses its grip on God, doubts if there is one to fails to follow nature's laws, not comprehending, you can look for retrogression.

"When the fruit of the nation's peach trees rots on the topmost branches, that have all the air and sunshine, just when it ought to ripen, it is then too late to spray it with kind words or fair warnings. Since 1914, Doc, the world has suffered a change of heart that has not been for human betterment.

"Men's thinkers have been working destructively against the long established social and industrial order instead of constructively, and we have had war and crime and exhibitions of lawlessness in high places that have not been equalled since the fall of Rome."

"In my opinion, Sam, birth decline among the better element, is a social menace that is truly alarming."

"You are quite right, Doc, and I am coming to that point immediately. Biologically, the cross breeding of the races makes for a brainy, virtuous and virile people, if the stock is select. But when population is bred indiscriminately from the proletariat, the slums and the underworld, we are raising a nation of criminals, anarchists, imbeciles and bolshevists, who will outnumber law abiding citizens a hundred to one. The Anglo Saxon race has had a long and prosperous rule, hut its glory and prestige have begun to decline and right now it is having a struggle to exist. Raising children and educating them for life's high attainments, by people who style themselves the better class, has become very fashionable.

"We had a few mongrel foreigners in our employ who had no distinct nationality, and their families numbered from nine to fourteen children. One day I said to George, who had thirteen, 'Why do you raise so many kids? They simply keep you poor; you cannot properly feed and clothe so many, and you will never be able to educate even one of them.' 'Oh, no; you mistake,' he said. 'We raise children for an asset—to work. In two years more I will have four boys who will bring me wages every week.'

"They are raising soldiers and sailors, too, but he did not mention them. Now, with society rotting at the top and being replenished in vast numbers by breeding from the unregenerate and unfit, it does not require a philosopher or a prophet to see what is coming. The handwriting is on the wall."

"I know it looks that way, Sam, viewed from the surface, but you know as well as I do that brains and capital rule the world."

"I admit that point, Doc, and will add that two per cent of our population are furnishing the brains and capital for the balance. That percentage is so small, Doc, that it has reached the danger point.

"Yes, Doc, brains and capital rule while we are on the climb and progressing morally, mentally and materially, but when society deteriorates morally and mentally we take the toboggan slide, the mob rules and capital cannot hire the proletariat to shoot at each other. Then we have anarchy, chaos and what General Sherman called war, is especially directed at the bourgeoise and the aristocracy of wealth and learning.

"The security of life and property and the stability of government under a democracy rests on the average intelligence of the mass. Ignorance is what keeps us down. A knowledge of the truth makes all men free. But a little knowledge is a dangerous thing and becomes the breeding place for bolshevism and all other fallacious isms. A lop-sided education often makes a bad citizen of one who would have been a good one had he been educated in head and heart and hand. Every man is in duty bound to his brother man in some degree—as educator, helpful friend, good Samaritan. And until he becomes just and a humanitarian in all his dealings with his brother man, his religious professions are but a pretense and a sham. So when society gets corrupt and goes wrong, we place the responsibility on the two per cent—on the leaders of men—social, financial, industrial, educational and religious.

"We are a nation of materialists, whose only god is Mammon. We prate much of spirituality, but in our thinking, living and doing we are gross materialists. In our relationship to each other our thinking and doing is all that counts. To make a good citizen one needs an education that has a rounded completeness. It is not enough to educate men mentally and manually how to gain money and the comforts and pleasures it brings and neglect their ethics and morals. The mind lives by what it feeds on, like the body, and as a healthy body requires a balanced ration, so the mind, in order to put righteousness and justicee into the lives of men, needs all three essentials—mental, moral and manual.

"In the days of Plato, Socrates and Jesus the masses were kept in ignorance by purpose and by filling them with the fear of hell they were easily ruled and kept in subjection. But today most everyone can read, though they do not comprehend.

"Now to be able to read the bolsheviki propaganda, which is spreading over the earth like an invisible and deadly gas, and not be able to separate the little of wheat from much of chaff, the truth from the sophistry, is a terrible menace to the lives and liberties of men of all nations.

"God keeps the planet in its orbit and sends us the sunlight and the rain. But he has bestowed upon man freedom of the will and given him full dominion on earth and over all life that lies beneath him. All nature's resources are subject to man's command and her immutable laws are given him for his guidance, which if followed will give health, happiness, peace and plenty to all men. But God does not deal out rewards or penalties. But He does say that disobedience to His laws brings consequences. Whosoever tries to violate or break laws by which they are governed, whether they relate to physics, chemistry, health, wealth or happiness, finds that the law breaks him, not as a punishment, but as a consequence. A child that get too near the fire only gets singed, but if he gets into the fire intentionally, he gets burned. So it is with the individuals, with corporations, cities, nations and states. The consequence of their wrong doing is measureable by the gravity of the evil done.

"The guide for human conduct is all summed up in the philosophy of the Golden Rule, and until all men learn to apply it in all the daily affairs of life it makes our creeds, rituals and ceremonials look hollow and worthless for human betterment.

"For 'as ye sow so shall ye reap'; 'first to thine own self be true and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not be false to any man.'"

HUMAN NATURE.

One of woman's important functions in life is to stand by the side of mere man and at the opportune momenat to observe that no man is a and never can hope to be aught but a misplaced logarithm in Nature's calculations.

The philospher who first directed public attention to the fact that no man is a hero to his valet, really meant to observe tha tno man is a hero to any woman who has lived with him long enough to get on to his curves. The stuff about the "valet" was injected at the suggestion of caution, cowardice or chivalry. Probably at the dictate of each.

The greatest man in the world today is wondering, in all likelihood, how he is going to keep up the bluff till tomorrow, the obesity belt on the midriff of his vanity having been placed there by some female relative to whom he should be grateful, but isn't.

The wives of great men seldom achieve the credit that is their due. If it were not for their criticism, their sneers and their jeers, released in the sheltering shade of the family radiator, the Eminent Gentlemen would swell up like so many boiled prunes and presently burst, leaving the world with no refuge from mediocrity.

All of which indirect, elusive and subtle sapience is prompted by a little story wired to the newspapers from the Adirondacks the first day of President Coolidge's vacation in the wilds.

He went out on Lake Osgood that afternoon with Oscar Otis, caretaker of the camp, and after trolling around a bit, landed a fish with a long, norrow pointed face and a disposition not unsimilar to that of a safety razor blade. Fresh from a long experience with Congress, the President immediatcly recognized the fish as a pike. He hurried back to the cabin where he displayed his catch and asked Mrs. Coolidge what she thought of his prize. She wouldn't believe he had landed the pike and it took Cal, with Oscar's assistance, five minutes to wring a half-hearted admission from her that he "might have caught it."

Some of the rest of us, of course, will keep our eyes open, and if a gentleman by the name of Oscar Otis is appointed ambassador to Turkey next winter, or American consul in some continental city, we'll know what occurred the other day up on Lake Osgood.

That, however, is beside the point. It was Mrs. Coolidge's attitude that's so beautifully normal. A man achieves the Presidency of the United States and his wife takes it for granted. He goes on a vacation, rows out on a lake and comes back with a little, narrow-faced pike dangling on the end of a string—and she doubts his story. Oh, hum! Just like a woman!

IS IT TO BE A REAL FIGHT OR A JOLLY POLITICAL FUSS

People Are Wondering What George EpplerWill Do In Contest With Fred Zihlman

Much curiosity has been aroused in the past week by the announcement that George L. Eppler would seek the Republican nomination for Congress, in a contest with Congressman Zihlman. People are wondering if there is to be a real campaign, an old-time earnest political fight, over this nomination, or if it is to be just one of those easy, jolly, yet fussy affairs that will excite nobody except, possibly, the candidates and such persons as may intensely love or intensely hate either of them. If they are to have a real fight, a contest that anyone who remembers the political battles of years agone, will recognize as a real fight—one of them will have to get busy soon, and tell the world what he thinks of the other one and the reasons why he thinks as he does. The voters of this region will not permit themselves to get "het up" at this time by street corner conversations and unverified sweeping statements about how mad or how pleased the people are. In a real fight some one must hit out from the shoulder, in a way that will make the other fellow hit back, or quit. They have enough to fight about and make the contest interesting if they get started.

The question is will either of them start something? Naturally, the voters are looking to Mr. Eppler to lead off if there is to be anything of interest doing. Mr. Zihlman is, undoubtedly, quite satisfied to let things drift if nobody else will raise any disturbance.

Editor Says Eppler Is Brave

An editorial writer in the Baltimore Sun thinks that Mr. Eppler is a brave young man, because he dares oppose the present congressman. The Sun, too, wonders if the old time political entertainment of the Sixth District is to be revived and apparently would like to see a season of political hammering in this section of the state once more.

The Sun says

"Mr. George Eppler, of Cumberland, is a brave young man.

"He lives in a Congressional district that has voted dry for many years, albeit there are stories that the bootlegger flourisheth. Nay, more, there are stories that the moonshiner flourisheth abundantly in the old Sixth, so that his juices overflow the surrounding lands. In Baltimore and Washington, not to mention the fat and indulgent valley towns of Virginia and Pennsylvania, there is much liquor of the kind that, in the words of the long dead O'Sullivan, feels "like a torchlight procession marching down your throat." And they do say that large quantities of it proceed from bubbling stills and enrich bulging tills of the district.

"To run for Congress on a wet platform in a district thus excellently poisoned between a dry conscience and a wet habit is an act of great daring. To begin running by entering the primary of the Republican party, in which that equipoise has been held for years with fascinating delicacy, is an act of consummate daring. Nevertheless, we are very glad that Mr. Eppler has entered against Representative Zihlman, guardian of the perfect equipoise these many years. Perhaps it shall be shown that, after all, this equipoise between a dry conscience and a wet habit is a mirage, and that conscience approves habit. If that fails, perhaps there is a chance—a bare chance—that discussion may result in subdueing habit to conscience.

"In sum, no harm and some good many result from a campaign that should make men stand up and be counted. And anyway, Mr. Eppler possesses something of the talent of his uncle George L. Wellington, for sprightly statement and repartee. Whatever happens, he should restore the political entertainment for which in past years the Sixth was famous."

Sweden Birthplace of Early American Artist

Gustavus Hesselius has been called "the first painter of recognized merit known to have practiced his art in this country," but he was not an American by birth. He was born in Folkarna, Sweden, in the province of Delecarlia, in 1682. He came to America in 1711, to the Swedish colony on the Delaware river, landing at Christina—now Wilmington, Delaware. He soon went to Philadelphia, where he made his home and where he died May 23, 1755.

On September 5, 1721, Hesselius received the first public art commission known to have been given in this country, "to draw ye history of our Blessed Saviour and ye twelve apostles at ye last supper" for the altar of St. Barnabas' church in Queen Anne parish, Maryland. The contract was fulfilled, but the church was destroyed in 1773 and the painting with it. A number of portraits by him survive, however, and are said to be "of decided merit."

Hesselius' son John, born in Philadelphia in 1728, was also a portrait painter, and was the instructor of Charles Willson Peale, who painted the earliest original portrait of General Washington which exists.

Flavor of Food Not Affected by Years

Not many people have eaten, and enjoyed, a cake fifty years old, as was the case at a golden wedding banquet at Hollywood, but the record for ancient fare probably belongs to the Brussels antiquary who a few years ago invited some of his colleagues to a remarkable feast.

The bread at the Brussels banquet was made from wheat found in one of the Pyramids, believed to have been there three thousand years, and it was buttered with butter made in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Wine was served centuries old, recovered from a vault in Corinth, and included in the menu were apples 1,800 years old, discovered among the ruins of Pompeii.

A few years ago some members of the Zoological society of Ireland sampled eggs brought from China fifty years previously, which they declared to be quite good and of a delicate flavor—in parts.

Royalty on Show

The elaborate pomp that always attended France's former royal families is shown in "Versailles: Its Life and History," by Cecilia Hill. Devised to impress their subjects, it extended even to their meals, and the royal appetites received a publicity that became offensive. In the Salon du Grand Convert, a long room, connected with the king's dining-room by a small door and narrow passage, "the queens of France," said Miss Hill, "ate their meals in incredible pomp, each dish, each drink being attended with almost as much ritual as the king's, and watched too by the public, anybody who was decently dressed being admitted to watch royalty eat. Energetic people did the round; watched the king as he ate his soup, were in time to see the queen eat entrees and hurried to the other side of the palace to gaze at princesses with dessert. Marie Antoinette, the bird in the gilded cage, found this custom so intolerable that she abolished it. But then, Marie Antoinette was a revolutionary."

Needs Human Skill

All the best china is still made on a potter's wheel and requires the skill of the human hand to give it the desired shape. After the potter places the lump of kneaded clay on his rapidly spinning wheel, he shapes it into a cup, saucer or plate with his fingers. Handles and other attachments are made separately and placed on the dish forms while the clay is still soft. From the potter's wheel the formed dishes go to the gas furnace for the first rough firing. They must have even heat and must not be placed so they will adhere to each other. The firing process lasts about three days. Three more days are required for the dishes to cool. This cooling off must take place slowly or the dishes crack.

Naked Truth

"This is a cynical world, when viewed through the eyes of the modern child," said David Starr Jordan. "Children have a way of presenting the truth about their elders with ghastly clarity.

"Quite recently, when I boarded a train in San Francisco, a family group took the two seats in front of me. They spent several minutes in adjusting themselves but at last were settled. At this moment the little girl of the family stuck her head out the window and said to a group of friends on the platform:

"'We'll be gone in a minute and then you can talk about us and we'll talk about you.'"

Jutland in History

Jutland, a part of the kingdom of Denmark, was the home of the ancient Jutes, a Teutonic people akin to the Saxons. In early times many Jutes, like the Saxons, crossed to England and settled in the southern part of the island. It was off the coast of Jutland that on May 31, 1916, was fought the principal naval battle of the World war, resulting in the German high seas fleet being compelled to flee back to its protected base. This great fleet did not come out again until it came to surrender according to the terms of the armistice of November 11, 1918.

Vital Food Elements Made in Laboratory

The five food factors are salts, fats, carbohydrates, proteins and vitamines. Theoretically speaking, the first three of these can already be made in a laboratory. The fourth seems possible and chemists are optimistic about the fifth, says Floyd W. Parsons, in the Saturday Evening Post. The important question does not so much concern our ability to make these vital food elements, but rather can we manufacture the essential constituents of our daily diet as cheaply as plants can make them.

The French scientist, Berthelot, has produced foodstuffs artificially in a laboratory by subjecting gases to the action of ultra-violet rays. He proceeds on the idea that it is the light of the sun rather than its heat that produces growth in plants. In the growth of animals, the foodstuffs consumed are reduced to carbonic acid and water vapor, but in the case of plants the action is just the reverse. The plant takes the two gases exhaled by animals and combines them again to form the sugars and other hydrocarbons that animals feed upon.

Berthelot's work tends to discredit the notion that the synthetic functioning of plants is a vital action, the secret of which is looked upon in that profound puzzle concerning the creation of life itself.

First Use of Skates Credited to Norseman

The first person to trust himself upon ice skates is believed to have been an ancient Norseman. The earlier skates were of bone, tied upon the feet with multitudinous straps and bandages. But working in iron had hardly more than become an established art in northern Europe before metal skates appeared. Yet with those who made their own skates, bone was still in use as late as the Twelfth century, and possibly later.

The English probably derived their knowledge of the sport of skating from the Dutch, the word skates being from the Dutch "schaats." In the same way Britain obtained her first knowledge of golf and adopted the sport of yachting.

The most interesting part of the history of skating has to do, of course, with that bold Norseman who tied bones to his feet and proceeded to skirt the margin of eternity, says the Toledo Blade. How did the idea occur to him? There was nothing in nature to suggest it to him. Why did he persist in skating until he got the trick of it? There was nothing to make him think he could learn to keep his feet from flying from under him. What did his uncles and aunts and jeering brothers and cousins say of him?

Land Given Prince's Name

The name "Rupert's Land" formerly was applied somewhat loosely to the Canadian Northwest, and more especially to the land surrounding Hudson bay. This extensive region, the boundaries of which were not determined until the dominion was organized in 1867, was named in honor of Prince Rupert, the first governor of the Hudson's Bay company. This territory was granted to the company by Charles II of England and was only surrendered by the company in 1869, when the title was transferred to Great Britain. In 1870 title was formally transferred to the new Dominion of Canada. As a part of Canada the Northwest was originally called "Rupert's Land" and the Northwest territory.

Food Preservation

The Canning Trade says that the first canning in the state of Maryland was apparently done by Thomas Kensett some time between 1820 and 1830. There is definite evidence that he canned oysters in Baltimore city in 1841, which is possibly the earliest definite date. Previous to this William Underwood is supposed to have preserved foods in glass jars at Boston about 1820. These two men are credited with having brought the science of canning to America from France and England, and it does not seem possible to advise definitely the exact dates on which they first produced canned food. Probably canned oysters were the first things of the strictly canned food line, because preserving in bottles, jars and otherwise is not canning.—Washington Star.

Witch Doctors Honored

In East Africa the witch doctor is an honored personage. He does a thriving and lucrative business in charms, astrological readings and written incantations. The interesting point is that it is admitted that from such witch doctors as thrive there civilization in the past derived priceless information with regard to certain curative drugs and animal and vegetable poisons. Results of the ministerings of these witch doctors demonstrated poisons particularly.

Gold From Jewelry Dust

As a piece of jewelry is polished on a rapidly rotating buffer it throws off "dust" that becomes imbedded in the covering of the buffing wheels. These covers are washed from time to time and the gold dust salvaged by the use of acid. The dust surrounding the machines also is chemically treated. This reclaiming process by the various establishments over the country saves many thousands of dollars. One firm alone in a midwestern city is said to save more than $6,000 annually in this way.

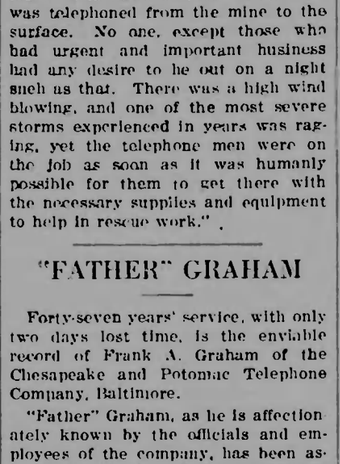
MINE RESCUE WORK

The telephone plays an important part in mine rescue work. Robert M. Lambie, Chief of the West Virginia Department of Mines, pays high tribute to men who installed and maintained telephones at Eccles' mine disaster recently.

"The Department of Mines is greatly indebted to the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company for the cooperation and highly efficient service at Eccles, as well as Banwood, Barrackville and Farmington mine disasters," says Mr. Lambie. "Only those who know the horror and danger of work connected with explosions and mine fires can appreciate what such service means."

"The explosion at the Eccles mine had greatly damaged the shaft and destroyed all telephones and signal service underground. Eddie Stromp, Beckley manager of the telephone company, and linemen from that office arrived on the ground with a load of telephones and equipment soon after the explosion occurred, and immediately started the installation of telephones at all points necessary for emergency and relief service."

A telephone was installed on the cage and four of the rescue party, including Chief Lambie, started down the shaft.



"Telephone service played a very important part in the rescue of the ten men who had barricaded themselves a mile-and-a-half back in the mine. When we found a board marked, 'Come to the third right entry (Signed) T. Davis, a telephone message was sent to the surface that there was a possibility of men being alive and asking for a doctor and an additional supply of blankets, hot coffee and restoratives. The men when rescued, appeared to have come from a mausoleum. The news of their being alive was telephoned from the mine to the surface. No one, except those who had urgent and important business had any desire to be out on a night such as that. There was a high wind blowing, and one of the most severe storms experienced in years was raging, yet the telephone men were on the job as soon as it was humanly possible for them to get there with the necessary supplies and equipment to help in rescue work."

"FATHER" GRAHAM

Forty-seven years' service, with only two days lost time, is the enviable record of Frank A. Graham of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, Baltimore.

"Father" Graham, as he is affectionately known by the officials and employees of the company, has been associated with the telephone organization longer than any other member of the organization now on active duty. His record is considered nothing short of phenomenal, both in the telephone industry and elsewhere. In spite of his long period of active service, Mr. Graham is young, both in appearance and in enthusiasm.

Entering the service of the telephone company in Baltimore, August 7, 1879, as a messenger boy in the first central office, established there, Mr. Graham has served in a number of capacities. His first duty consisted in delivering messages received over the telephone. In those days the telephone was not as universally used as it is today. Few business firms and still fewer residents enjoyed the privilege of telephone service. Consequently, messengers were employed by the company to deliver the messages received at the central office. After working as a messenger boy for several months, he became successively night operator, night chief operator, lineman, installer, installation foreman, and engineer's assistant.

During the Baltimore fire of 1904, he was one of those who did valiant work in helping to restore telephone service.

Mr. Graham has always displayed laudable resourcefulness and care in the accomplishment of the tasks assigned him, with the result that he has acquired a reputation for dependability and accuracy. During his almost half century of service, he has never had an accident. He attributes this unusual record of no sickness and no accidents to his temperate habits and even pace of living.

Mr. Graham, in recognition of his long service in telephone work, has been awarded a diamond service emblem. His one ambition is the completion of 50 years of continual service; something that few people try for, much less attain.

BITTINGER

The most terrific hail storm within the memory of the villagers, swooped down upon us last Sunday evening just after six o'clock. For some time prior to the breaking of the storm, there were frequent mutterings of distant thunder and the heavens gave promise of rain, but none thought of anything more serious. Suddenly a fierce gust of wind came rushing out of the west and within a few seconds hail stones, very large and in great numbers were beating down upon the village. The size of the hail stones varied from that of a walaut to the size of a goose egg, and they fell with such violence that much damage was done to the roofs of buildings and window lights were broken in many of the homes.

Wheat fields, corn fields and orchards were riddled and much damage resulted to almost every farmer in the path of the storm, which covered a wide area.

Perhaps the greatest damage in the village was that done to the Lutheran church where a number of the large stained glass memorial windows were broken by the driven hail.

Consternation reigned among the inhabitants of the village during the few minutes' of the storm's furious raging, but there are now heard many expressions of gratitude that it was not more serious in its consequences.

"Uncle Jim" Wiley, of Negro Mountain, one of the oldest residents of this district and a veteran of the Civil War, notwithstanding his eighty-two years, rode to this village one day last week and spent a couple of hours chatting with his friends and manifesting considerable interest in politics and public matters generally.

C. F. Hammond, of Oakland, one of the numerous candidates for the nomination for County Treasurer, was a pleasant caller in this neighborhood one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Compton and family, of Oakland, were guests of Mrs. Compton's mother, Mrs. Melchoir Hetrick, here on Saturday and Sunday.

Silas O. Wiley, of Grantsville, was a pleasant caller in our midst recently.

E. F. Durst, a life-long resident of this hamlet, aged seventy-seven years, died suddenly of a stroke of paralysis on Sunday night, July 11th, the funeral occurring on Tuesday, the 13th.

Misses Cleo and Thelma Hoover, of Lumberport, West Va., visited relatives here last week.

Candidate George D. White, of Oakland, was a recent visitor in this village.

It is hoped that many folks will remember to come to Bittinger next Saturday, July 24th, and attend the W. O. W. picnic, which promises to be the event of the season.

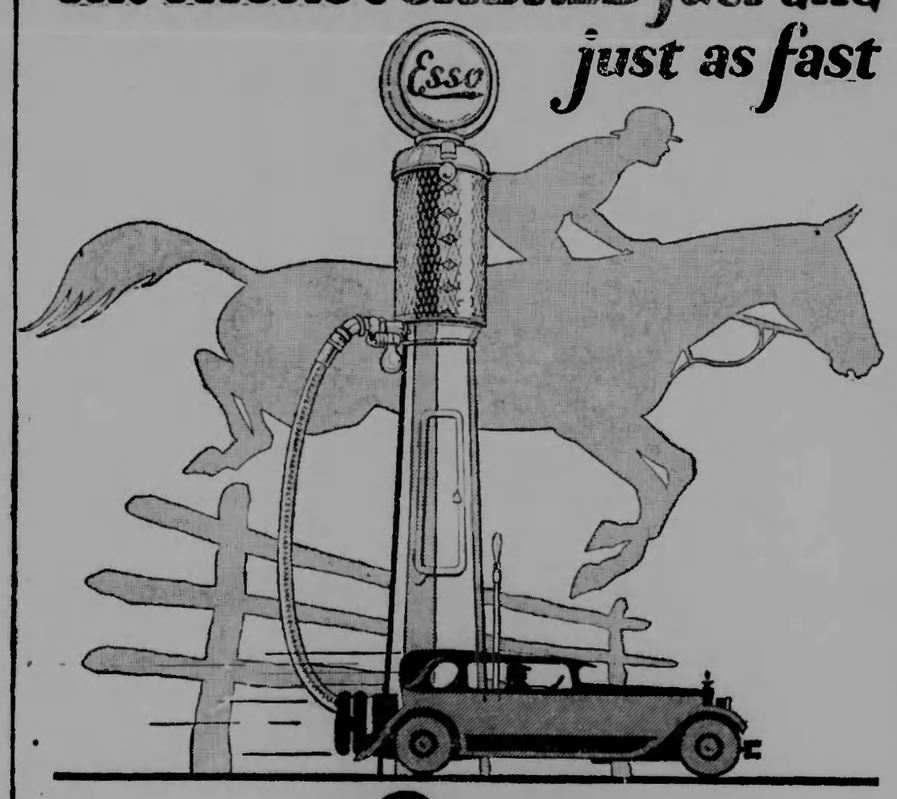
Do These Incomes Attract You?

NOT long ago there was published in a trade paper a table in which the salaries of office workers generally were given. In addition to stenographic and bookkeeping positions, it listed the higher executive positions to which thousands of stenographers and bookkeepers have advanced.



Stenographers (starting salaries)	$60 to $100 per month
Stenographers (in two years)	$75 to $150 per month
Bookkeepers (starting salaries)	$75 to $125 per month
Bookkeepers (in two years)	$90 to $150 per month
Accountants	$150 to $500 per month
Certified Public Accountants	$400 to $2000 per month
Purchasing Agents	$200 to $500 per month
Advertising Agents	$200 to $500 per month
Salesmen	$150 to $1000 per month
Sales Managers	$200 to $4500 per month
General Managers	$500 to no limit per month

There are average salaries paid to office workers. The range is wide because conditions, in different sections of the country, and ability, vary. No attempt is made to calculate the incomes of those who become the heads of the business, and many are ...

Doesn't this conclusively answer the question: Will it pay you ... to take a Business Course?

Use Scientific Methods for Growing Orchids

Because of the rareness and beauty of the orchid several florists in the United States are devoting their efforts to growing orchid plants from seeds. This "aristocrat of the flower kingdom" was formerly imported from the mountainous districts of the tropics, where it grows clinging to trees. Manufactured gas now makes this unnecessary.

The seed of the orchid is almost microscopic in size. Since it is incapable of self-germination, scientific methods are necessary. The seeds are first placed in a glass flask, containing a specially prepared liquid, which furnishes carbon dioxide and moisture. It is necessary to keep the temperature at 90 degrees in the daytime and 70 degrees at night. The plants are grown in flasks for the first year. After that they are transferred to pots from year to year. The plant starts to flower at the age of five or six years.

In the propagating house, where the plants are extremely delicate, they are kept warm by gas. The fact that gas can be controlled easily and efficiently makes it invaluable in orchid culture, as any sudden change in temperature would cause the loss of many years' work.

New Yorker Who Made Lobster Dish Famous

One Ben Wenberg, a beau of his time, and a crony of Charles Delmonico, one of the four members of the family that made Delmonico's famous as the best restaurant in America, was responsible for the first concocting of lobster a la Newberg. Every Sunday at noon Mr. Wenberg would make his ceremonious entry into the dining room at Delmonico's, and take a seat at a table invariably reserved for him. In one of the pockets of his silk-velvet embroidered waistcoat he always carried a small bottle of the fiery red pepper which lent its peculiar savor to the method he had invented for preparing lobster. The waiters brought him all the rest of the condiments, sauces, wines, and the other ingredients, as well as the chafing dish he employed. This concoction was known first as Lobster a la Wenberg, but after a quarrel between the two friends, Mr. Charles Delmonico ordered its name changed on the menu cards to read, Lobster a la Newberg; and, since the two never were reconciled, so the name remained.

CHEESE AS FOOD

CHEESE is one of our most valuable protein foods; is concentrated and has very little waste. When the price is high compare it with meat, one of the other proteins which are all like, and notice the difference in waste.

Cheese Omelet.

Beat two egg yolks until thick, add two tablespoonfuls of water, salt and pepper to taste. Beat the whites until stiff and add one cupful of grated cheese. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a hot, smooth frying pan; when hot pour in the lightly mixed omelet. Cook until well set, place in the oven to finish cooking on the top. Serve at once on a hot platter.

Welsh Rarebit.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended add one cupful of hot milk; cook until smooth and creamy. Add one cupful of grated cheese and when the cheese is melted serve on buttered toast or hot crackers. To make the dish a little more tasty add half a dozen chopped olives.

Cheese Fondu.

Pour one cupful of scalded milk over one cupful of soft bread crumbs, add three-fourths of a cupful of soft cheese cut into bits, one tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Beat five egg yolks until thick, add to the cheese mixture and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a well-greased dish for twenty minutes or until puffy and cooked to the center.

Cheese and Celery Salad.

Select firm, crisp, tender celery and choose the stalks which have deep grooves. Cut into inch pieces and fill with seasoned cream cheese to which chopped onion, green pepper and nuts have been added. Heap a half dozen of these filled stalks on lettuce and serve with a French dressing.

This same method may be used for longer stalks and serve them as a salad accompaniment.

Loin Cloths Common to Tropical Dwellers

Practically every primitive tribe dwelling in the tropics that has been studied by scientific observers has been found to wear some form of bodily covering of the loin region either in the form of paints of various colors, tattoo marks, strands of beads of various materials, beaten bast or bark cloth, or of woven girdles or aprons of cotton or other vegetable or animal fibers. The inhabitants of the Nicobar islands and of Central East Africa are apparently of all tribes the most free from loin coverings of all sorts. Reasons given for the wearing of loin coverings vary. Native modesty is usually present in some form, even apart from any influence that may be attributed to the whites; tribal and ceremonial painting or tattooing is often a causative factor and may supplement a woven girdle worn for entirely different purposes, namely, for the insertion of the hilt of a knife and as a place of attachment for burdens; most primitive peoples are burden carriers. Protection against insect pests is often attempted through the agency of breech clouts. Tradition and native styles usually dictate the use of certain forms of loin covering even to the minutest detail.

Mystery of Instinct Puzzle to Scientists

How successive generations of ants learn to milk the aphides is a mystery that cannot be explained on any theory of heredity, for the ants which do the milking are workers, sexless insects which leave no offspring. It is, therefore, quite impossible that they should transmit their training to offspring which they do not have.

The "milk," which the aphides give up to the ants as contentedly as a cow gives her milk, is the juice of plants sucked up by the aphides and transformed in their bodies to a sirup of invert sugar or glucose. This is the so-called "honey-dew" often found in vast quantities on plants. Some species of ants merely lick this up, but others stroke the aphides to persuade them to "give down," just as the hired man of the farm induces the cow.

In return for this service the ants fight the enemies of the aphides, carry them to safety in times of danger, take care of their eggs, place the aphides where they will get the best of food, and shelter them in their nests in cold weather.

Presence of Mind

A recent ecclesiastical method of removing an evil spell from a churchyard seems to have been less simple than that of Archbishop Thomson in exorcising a ghost from a mansion where he once spent a night. He was lodged in the haunted chamber, and in the morning his hostess inquired anxiously if he had seen anything. "Oh, yes," replied the archbishop, "I wakened to find an old pinched-looking man in the room. I jumped up and asked if he lived in the house. He nodded assent. Was he a parishioner? I asked. Again he nodded. Then, said I, I should like to ask your help for our new school building fund. At that he vanished, and disturbed me no more."

Dr. Sunshine.

"I am here as a messenger from my friend, Dr. Sunshine," the Health Gnome remarked, as he blew in thru the open window at the State Department of Health, and settled down on the desk of the Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene for a conference. "I've a bunch of sunshine prescriptions," he remarked, "for babies and the little kids, and it wouldn't hurt the grown-ups to take some of the same medicine.

"But the wee babies, those only two or three months old, are my particular charge, today, and this prescription will help to prevent rickets, that disease of the bones that gives them bowlegs, knock knees, pigeon breasts, and causes other deformities and illnesses.

"This prescription says 'Give the baby a sunbath every sunny day', but as a baby's skin is tender, you have to be very careful not to give him an overdose of anything as powerful as sunlight.

"So it goes on to say 'Begin with very small doses.' And the directions are to put the baby in his carriage or in his kiddie coop, screened from flies and mosquitoes, on the porch or out of doors where he will be protected from the wind.

"Then it says, 'Always screen the baby's eyes from the direct sunlight.' Uncover the baby's hands and arms and let the sun shine on them for five minutes. Then another five minutes on the feet and legs. Covering the legs, let it shine on the chest; just for five minutes, mind you; and then on the back. Try this twice a day for a week. You can tell whether the sun is soaking in and helping the baby by the gradual tanning of the skin. After the skin begins to be tanned the baby can have an all over sun bath of twenty to thirty minutes once or twice a day without geting sunburned."

The Health Gnome consulted the slip he had taken out of his little green cap and that was marked with the Rx that decorates every orthodox prescription. "It also says," he continued "that at this time of the year the sunbaths should be given between eight and eleven in the morning; and if a second bath is given, after three in the afternoon. Especial care should be taken to keep the baby in the shade between eleven and three when the sun is highest and hottest.

"The sun bath will not only help the bones to grow straight and strong but they help the skin and muscles to get firmer and more resistant to disease. Grown-ups are supposed to have a lot of common seise, so of course they will understand that they have to shorten the time when it is intensely hot, or is suddenly very cool.

"You just ought to see how much good the sunbaths do to older kiddies," he went on. "But they have to be gotten used to them gradually, too. And by the way, little bathing trunks are as good for sunbaths as for sea baths. Best of all, the little kids can keep them on for the greater part of the day, only—" and he shook his finger very impressively—"their eyes and the tops of their heads must be protected from the direct sunlight. You can get mighty cute little sun hats in all the stores.

"That's all today, thank you."—and he was gone again.

Local Troop Will Go For Annual Outing August Third.

Practically all members of the local troop of Boy Scouts, with the addition of three visiting Scouts, are now making preparations for the annual camp for a period of two weeks beginning on Tuesday, August 3rd.

The camp site selected this year is located on what was formerly the Thomas A. Nethkin farm, the land being now owned by the Eastern Land Corporation. The road fo the camp is good and everyone is cordially invited to visit the camp on visiting days—Sundays and Wednesdays. To get there from Oakland go north to Sand Flat, turn right on the new concrete road to Deer Park; turn left where sign "To Boy Scout Camp" is seen. From that point similar signs will be found at every cross-road pointing the direction to the camp. The camp site is little short of perfect for an affair of this kind. The troop is indebted to Mr. F. R. Corliss for pointing it out to them.

The necessary permits have all been secured. The "swimmin' hole" has been tried and found good. The drinking water and the bathing water have hoth been tested by the State health officers and found to he good. Miss King, County Health Nurse, has given very valuable assistance in these matters.

The tents to he used in the camp this year are loaned by the Federal Government. They were secured thru the efforts of Hon. F. N. Zihlman and the State Roads Commission. The Ladies' Auxiliary has been untiring during the past year to earn enough money to defray the expenses of the camp and their efforts have not been in vain. All branches of the local Scout organization are pulling together to make this the very best camp possible.

The scoutmaster will be assisted while in camp by Rev. Linaweaver. The latter been in the community only a short time, but most everybody is acquainted with him—all the boys know him at least. He was a Scout himself and is fully qualified to fill this position. The Scouts are overjoyed to learn that he is going to be one of them.

While in camp the boys will have a rapid-fire program, beginning at six o'clock in the morning and lasting until nine o'clock in the evening. This program consists of a series of periods of study, work, play and wholesome recreation—with a great deal of eating and sleeping thrown in. It is to keep this program from being broken in upon that they have only two visiting days a week.

FINE OF $100 ASSESSED

Against Alphonse Borelli For Operating Car While Drunk

Alphonse Borelli, of near town, was fined $100 and costs by Justice W. A. Gonder yesterday at a hearing when it was proven that Borelli had operated a car while under the influence of intoxicants, following his arrest hy Sheriff Yutzy upon information furnished by a man named McCormick, an erstwhile friend of Borelli but who had had a misunderstanding with him over a deal in which they could not arrive at a satisfactory settlement.

McCormick, whose arrest followed an investigation of the activities of moonshine runners here a few days ago, was also tried on the charge of stealing a sum of money from Borelli and for assault and battery. He was fined $25 and costs on the latter charge and held in $500 bond for his appearance at the December Term of the Circuit Court. McCormick hails from Morgantown, West Va.

MAY BE A BIGAMIST OR A VIOLATOR OF MANN ACT

Morgantown Man and Girl Eloped To Oakland, Married, But He Is In Bad Either Way

A Morgantown (W. Va.) special to the metropolitan press of the country under date of last Saturday contains a bit of information that, if true, is another of many reasons for a change in the marriage laws of Maryland.

The telegram said:

"If Hugh Stewart, of Morgantown, W. Va., was married in Oakland Wednesday he will face a charge of bigamy; if he was not married he will be charged with violation of the Mann Act.

"According to information furnished the authorities by Clarence Bittinger, Morgantown, Stewart left there Wednesday with Bittinger's daughter Ada. A telegram to the father from the Circuit Clerk at Oakland stated that Hugh Stewart and Ada Bittinger had procured a marriage license there Wednesday.

"Magistrate Martin M. Moore at Morgantown, issued a warrant for Stewart's arrest on a charge of bigamy. The latter was at liberty under bond of $500 on a charge of non-support. Stewart's wife is supposed to be somewhere in Western Pennsylvania.

"Following the issuance of the warrant by Justice Moore, state police officers notified officers at Kingwood of the situation and told them that it had been learned that the couple could probably be found at Terra Alta. Officers at Kingwood said that they would investigate the case in Terra Alta in an effort to serve the warrant on Stewart.

"Justice Moore said that if the couple had not been married that a warrant charging violation of the Mann Act, commonly known as the White Slave traffic law, would be issued."

Activities of Republican Women of Garrett County.

The Republican women of Garrett county are making splendid headway in interesting the women voters and in getting in touch with those not registered.

District chairmen are being appointed, and every woman in her district is urged to co-operate in every way she can.

Several donations have been made by Republican men who are interested in the club s work and who feel the need of such an organization in the county.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. James Willison on Center street, Oakland, Friday afternoon, August 6th.

The women now in the club invites every other woman of the county not affiliated to be present at this meeting and join.

Thing It Over—What We Owe the State.

H. G. Wells has defined education as "the preparation of the individual for a willing and intelligent participation in the affairs of the world," a state or city which provides opportunities for the education of its youth has a right to expect such participation in its affairs; has a right to expect returns on its investment in the form of intelligent and devoted citizenship.

It is the shame of a nation dedicated to the principle of universal suffrage that we lead the world in stay-at-home voters. Reliable statistics show that at the last two national elections only fifty per cent of the American voters expressed their choice for President at the polls, while in Great Britain, at about the same time, seventy-six per cent of the electorate voted, and in France seventy per cent voted. The citizens of Canada exercise the right of suffrage more generally than do we. And in the United States the largest proportion of non-voters is found in the best educated group.

If the republican form of government is still an experiment, it is in great measure due to the fact that those who can best understand its possibilities and dangers take no interest in its proper functioning. It is because we refuse to think in political terms.

We have stressed the thought of what higher education offers the individual. What the educated individual offers the community which has made its opportunities possible is quite as important.

An enduring republic cannot be erected on the mire of indifference.

LOCAL TICKETS IN STATE HAVE CALL OF LEADERS

Claim Is Made That Governor Ritchie Is a Burden For Them to Carry—Maloy has Chance

(From The Marylander)

From every section of the State come reports to the effect that county politics are in a chaotic condition, and that the local leaders in practically every county appear to be interested only in their local candidates and are not paying any attention to heads of the proposed State ticket, as they point out, it is more important to elect their local tickets than it is to elect a Governor, so they are naturally interested to the fullest extent in their own county offices. And from every district they are crying that at the present time it is no asset to their county tickets to have them linked with the Ritchie organization, as it now looks, for the Governor is a load for them to carry rather than a help.

County politics have become so badly mixed during the last three months that it is hard to say just what the result will be, for while it is not usual, it is thought that the great number of candidates for nominations will leave many sore spots, and that, of course, may help the Republicans in their hunt to elect another Governor which if they should be successful, would be the third since the Civil War, and many are putting the responsibility for this condition of affairs on Governor Ritchie.

From the hills of Western Maryland to the shores of the Atlantic and from Point Lookout to Conowingo the situation appears similar and it is not generally known as the real news is not being published, but the people in the hills, on the shores and thruout the whole State are up in arms declaring in large numbers that they will not vote for Governor Ritchie for a third term.

In several of the counties there are full tickets opposing each other for every county office, and that they are fighting among themselves to such an extent that they may jeopardize Democratic chances in the coming November election. They are fighting under such names as the Democratic Organization ticket, and the Regular State and County Organization ticket. Each side taking advantage of every opportunity that arises with the result that while they are not posing as Ritchie and Maloy organizations that is really what they are, and the fight started when the Governor began to interfere with their local affairs. "He goes around preaching State's Rights and there is not a small office to be filled in any of the counties where he does not butt in, there is not a small piece of road to be built, or money spent for our schools that this State's Righter does noot use all of his influence to help his Chairman of the Road Commission decide the matter."

"We are tired of such interference and that above everything else is why we are out to defeat this Mussiloni," said a gentleman with snow-white hair, as he was about to return to his home on the Shore.

As that is the case throughout the State, and it is doubted by many if the Governor is strong enough to adjust matters as he would like them, that he will carry more than two or three counties in the primaries, as those which appeared his strongest hold, have slipped away from his grip. Whether this condition will only be temporary remains to be seen. However, it is now apparent that Maloy has been working and that he is at the present time a strong factor principally in the counties, with Baltimore City just as doubtful as the weather these days.

With regard to the situation here in the City, there is just as much personal dislike for the Governor as can be found throughout the entire State. The only thing is, that the politicians here work differently from those in the counties. While they may hate a man and personally dislike him, should the organization take him up and support him for any office, they follow right in line, and say no more about it. But in the county districts the people are not so easily fooled.

However, the Baltimore politicians are far from giving the Ritchie organization ticket their hearty support, especially now that they realize should the Governor continue in control of the State, he will have the election machinery in his power and that that is likely to affect the City leaders in the Mayoralty nomination next year. They are considering Ritchie from every angle and at this time do not appear to be tearing their shirts in his behalf.

And this week it is noticed there has been a cloud over the third term boom, as no one except Senator Curran is talking Ritchie. All others are sitting still awaiting orders.

And today, while it may not appear clear to the average voter, many believe Maloy has just as good a chance to be nominated for Governor in September as has the incumbent of the office.

The real truth is the whole situation is up in the air, and not even the wisest can fortell the outcome. No matter what claims or boast may be made, they are nothing but claims and boasts, and all may be changed before the 14th of September rolls around.

FRIENDSVILLE FARM HOUSE WAS RAIDED LAST NIGHT

Officers Were Too Late To Make Capture of Moonshiners. But They Got the Hot Still

Sheriff Yutzy, Officer W. D. Casteel and Constable Andrew Shartzer had a fairly successful trip to the neighborhood of Friendsville last evening by following a tip they had received the day previous that last evening was the time set by an alleged moonshiner to dispense his contraband among the thirsty, the sales place being indicated as the town cemetery.

When the officers arrived at the indicated spot, however, there was no evidence of a market being open and continuing their investigations they went to a house located just above the city of the dead, owned and occupied by Harbert Coddington and his wife. There was no evidence of life about the house. Upon entering the officers made a search of the premises but could find nothing on the first floor that would indicate the existenee of a plant. What puzzled the officers, however, was that no way of gaining access to the upper floor of the building could be found until through very close observation it was discovered that in one room of the lower floor the doors being covered as well as the plastered portion of the room. By looking closely it was found that the paper had been neatly cut around a door leading to the stairway and going to the upper floor a well established moonshine plant was uncovered, consisting of a still, a barrel of mash and other articles used in the manufacture.

The still was hot, indicating that it had recently been used. This was borne out when someone told the officers later that Coddington and his wife had left the farm but a short time before, headed toward Uniontown with the day's run of spirits.

The officers brought Coddington's still to town after destroying the mash found in the house. Coddington will be brought in later.

BARN OF KEYSER RIDGE FARMER BURNED SATURDAY

Structure Was the Property of Marshall H. Lohr—Loss Is Placed At $9.000.

The log and frame constructed barn on the farm of Marshall H. Lohr, located just west of the Oakland-Keyser Ridge road, on the National Highway, twenty-six miles north of Oakland, was entirely consumed by fire of undetermined origin last Saturday evening about nine o'clock, entailing a loss of approximately $9,000, upon which there was insurance in force of about half that amount.

The barn was built many years ago by the former owner of the farm—Henry Lakel. It was substantially constructed of logs and to the original building an addition of frame construction was later added.

The building contained some of last year's corn, some hay of this year's harvesting and other forage was stored. In a shed adjoning the barn was stored much of the farm machinery. Through the efforts of Mr. Lohr's neighbors the machinery was saved from destruction. The cattle and horses belonging on the farm were out in the fields.

In addition to the forage stored in the barn and which was consumed, a small quantity of small tools and implements were burned.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 1, 1926.

THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA.

Exodus 13:17;15:21.

Jehovah is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation—Ex. 15:21.

THE MIGRATION

The world is full of moving people. America knows well the coming of great masses of her population from other lands and today there is pressure upon her entries as great as at any earlier period in her history. And the roots of all her families run across the sea and gained their first growth under far-off suns. Work and wages are the present lure from terrific economic conditions in other lands. An earlier urge was land hunger among those who were dispossessed by land barons. They built our great West under our homestead enactments. Pilgrim and Hugenot came for religious and political reasons and this migration of the Hebrew was caught up in the same forces that have impelled our own coming. For it was first of all a religious movement born of a revival of the faith of the fathers under the preaching of Moses. Had it not been for that new burst of belief in Jehovah, Israel would never have moved from Egypt. It lifted them out of their despair and did for them what the message of hope did for the colliers of England. There was the economic urge also, the political pull of a voiceless section of the people, the land hunger of those who lived upon crown lands without any possibility of ownership. Moses found ready soil for the planting of his message that even in the face of the hostility created by the strawless bricks continued to sprout adherents. For God uses the same forces that are part of the man He made in this century that He did then and the reactions differ only in the machinery they use.

Finally the "day" arrived, though this one happened to be "night." The hosts were already marshalled for the Passover feast, girded and shod for travel, so that there was no delay in the shrew planning of Moses to waste not a minute of time before the reaction which he expected should block the permission to depart. How many there were is uncertain. The word "thousand" can be translated "family" also, so that no one can certainly declare whether 600,000 or 600 families of folks. Remembering how many fighting men Abraham could muster, "born in his own house," it would be in any case no inconsiderable migration that rendezvoued at Succoth for the journey. So complete was the organization set up by Moses that even the mummy of Joseph was thought of in the hurried departure.

THE DETOUR

Thrust out hastily by the panic stricken Egyptians, they turned toward the East. The road lay along the coast and was the swiftest way to reach the goal of their desire. But the Philistines were there and they were in no condition to face these seasoned fighters. There may have been other reasons for the decision. One lay in the religious experience of their leader. Moses had his own purposes clarified, his own soul fanned into a flame of devotion, his own consciousness of the presence of God intensified at Sinai, and we inevitably wish to lead others to the place of our own highest experience. "Come with us to Mountain Lake Institute," is a fair example. Eagle's Mere, Silver Bay, Northfield, and others among many that hold the same invitation. Remembering that it was at base a religious venture, Moses thru whose deepest life God was having speech could scarcely turn in any other direction than over the detour that the march followed. There was another in the defensive system of Egypt whose invaders were usually from the East. A line of forts had been built across the isthmus and strong guards kept the gates of the empire against assault. They would be very likely to halt the servants until orders could be received about this unexpected irruption of the workers. No orders had been given, because they were hurried out, but the stop would have been certain, and in order that it might be avoided Moses turned toward the South, and at the same time we find them facing the sea they had flanked the forts and were facing an open path beyond them into the wilderness. God guides, but He does it thru the materials lying in the lives and circumstances of those led. It is ours to clear our vision to see the smoking column that is always there for us as surely as in that dim old day.
